MOTHER'S COOKIE JAR

The doctors all will say I'm wrong,
The dietitians disagree,
But I've been used to that so long
That doesn't bother me.
And I believe that every col
Or castle, be it near or far,
And whether it is great or not
Should have a cookie jar.

I don't mean something put away
Where only certain people know,
But something there as plain as day,
Where any one can go—
The children coming in from school
You know how hungry children are,
And even dad may want to fool
Around that cookie jar.

It's wrong, all wrong; but down the years
I often look, old times recall,
And you will smile at what appears
The pleasantest of all;
It's mother's hearty "help yourself!"—
No door to open, bolt unbar,
But there, upon the lowest shelf,
That cookie jar!

NOAH NO SALT AT ALL

Noah was a shipwright and he built himself an ark.
Built an ark of gopher wood the way the Lord commanded:
Sailed it like a mariner in daylight and in dark:
Brought it like a pilot to the harbor where he landed.
May have been an amateur before the voyage started.
But Noah ran his vessel like a hard-boiled skipper should.
Navigated rolling seas that never had been charted,
Establishing a record that was pretty dog-gone good.
Then Noah went and settled down and got himself a farm,
And lived three hundred fifty years among his sons and daughters.
The sea, for Father Noah, didn't have a bit of charm,
He never seemed to care again to sail upon the waters;
Me, I'd have got fed up on being just a garden grubber,
Three hundred fifty years of that would be too long for me.
And Noah must have been at heart a landsman and a lubber,
Or he'd have made another ark and gone again to sea!

Shower Music for the Soldiers

Owing to the advanced age of the members of the Grand Army of the Republic the commander-in-chief of that organization issued orders preceding the last national reunion of the veterans for slow march music while they were on parade.

Let the music be slow for the soldiers
Who are silently passing today
They have come from the mart and the hamlet
And the hills that are far far away.
Some are here from the south's vast savannas
From the land of the high northern pine
They have come from the East and the Westland
To form once again in the line.

Let the music be slow for the soldiers
And the measure not lively nor gay
They are bent with the weight of long winters
They will march never more to the fray
Their footsteps are leaden and weary
Their bearing is martial no more,
Gone the gleam from their eyes of youths valor
But their spirits are true as of yore.

Let the music be slow for the soldiers
As they file by again in review
Now the columns grow thinner and thinner
Their companions of youth now so few.
They are bearing the old flag still proudly
And they follow their leader so bold
Keeping time to the music but slower
As they did in the brave days of old.

Let the music be slow for the soldiers
Strike no chord of the war-notes they knew
When they stormed up the Kenesaw mountain
Crossed the Rapidan's water so blue,
Faced the foe in the battle of Fair Oaks
Or fought by the swift Tennessee.
Not the music they heard at Cold Harbor
Nor the strains as they marched to the sea.

Let the music be slow for the soldiers
Play the airs that the veterans love
Till they hear the clear notes of reveille
Ringing out from the camp-ground above.
Till they dream their last dream neath the banner
They have fought for and cherished so long
Let them live over days that are vanished
Reviewing the past with a song.

THINKS CORNER NEEDS HELP.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Don't you think it's about time I gave a few minutes of my time and wrote a letter for our page? If all the sisters were as good (?) about writing as I am, guess the editor would give up in despair. I am glad for his sake and the Social Corner page, that we have so many faithful ones that are doing their best to keep "things moving." We surely all enjoy reading their letters each week.

If I should tell you that I am trying to finish a quilt that was started eight years ago, you might begin to believe that I am a 'doolittle' in earnest and wonder that I write as often as I do.

Calla Lily: I would have written you about R. R. if I had thought you wouldn't have known who it was. Some of the Social Corner sisters of Club 4 visited him at the hospital, also attended the funeral services at Danielson and at the cemetery in Dayville. We older members will miss his cheery letters and the poetry he used to send to our page.

Noneapretty: Better come over before long. 1432 has a big backyard with plenty of water in it at present, where we can paddle to our heart's content. Much easier than sliding down hill, don't you think?

Gingham Girl: Hear you have some new relations? Perhaps if you "go and do likewise" soon you can have some of that cake you saw Sunday; isn't it a beauty?

Papa's Boy: Did you send the card we were speaking about? Wish you could have met him.

Primrose: I have a good excuse for not writing to you. I don't know your present address.

Saturday Eve: Wish you were where we could have a meeting of Club 4 and have your presence. Why not write a few lines, at least, for our page?

Last Rose of Summer: Wish I had known who was passing by the day you and Primrose were walking out. I would have shouted for once, so you would have had to "drop in."

KEZIAH DOOLITTLE.

CHRYSANTHEMUM CULTURE

Dear Social Corner Members: I looked at the calendar this morning and I see I have just one more Saturday left for me in this month in which to send a letter to our page. You see I have not forgotten my New Year's resolution. My! But Stranger-in-the-City can write interesting letters if she wants to, can't she? Let's read more of those trips. I should have thought those buffalo would have brought into mind the life on the prairie.

I first thought I would write about my chicks and turkeys, but since hearing such fine reports of my neighbors I've made up my mind I'm going to beat the record on raising the least. So that is all I can write on that topic.

I believe I'll write about chrysanthemum culture. As we all know, the chrysanthemum blooms last in the fall, and as it is such a brave plant and laughs at old Jack Frost we want to care for it as tenderly as possible.

"The Queen of Autumn" begins to bloom as soon as the dahlia fades away, its flowers lasting throughout November and early December, if the plants are properly protected from freezing.

The culture is very simple, as they grow freely in any rich, well-drained soil, whether of a clayey or sandy nature. Young plants should be set in May or June if possible on the south side of a fence or building that they may be easily protected from the cold winds in autumn.

The plants should be cut back early in July, again in three weeks, then in August the shoots should be allowed to grow. By this time the plants should present a well branched and stocky appearance. The plants must of course receive thorough cultivation throughout the summer to prevent the surface of the ground becoming baked. The principal enemy to the chrysanthemum is the blackfly which is easily kept in check by spraying with tobacco dust. Please do not forget to thin them once in two years as I have learned by experience that they do so much better, have much larger blossoms if given plenty of room.

And friends, here's a tip: Don't throw away those plants you removed from the others, but give them to some one who has none. Your plants will thrive so much better and perhaps you've made an more friend. With all our other work we have to do, let us try and have a flower garden. It rests us to walk around our pet roses and smell their fragrance, then talk to the pansies with their funny little faces and then stop and flirt a minute with Sweet William. You have taken so much time you wonder what time it is and as you come to another row you almost can hear them say, "Four o'clock!" Oh! my, is it as late as that? Yes, it's time to think of chicks and turkeys and supper and so forth. But flowers will grow for the genuine flower lover if they have a chance and the lover will make the chance on this you may depend.

Will close, wishing the best of luck to the chrysanthemum grower.

RENEWING ACQUAINTANCE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I enjoyed meeting with my old friends once more after a year of absence. I hope to go often, now I am at home once more.

Friendly Voice: I can sympathize with you. Not so long since I had to go through the same.

True Blue: Sorry you were sick and could not go with me. Thank you for the lovely present, also the lovely bouquet. It will not happen often that my birthday falls on Mother's day. I had several nice cards and presents.

I was pleased to see Scottie out again. Do not keep too closely confined; better to get out.

Marigold: Glad to know you are gaining; am coming up to see you as soon as I can.

We had quite a goodly number at the meeting; a fine dinner, and a very good program.

Have been cleaning house. Glad to say have nearly finished. It surely seems good to get back home once more. What a true saying, "Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

I hope some of the Corner members wake up. By the looks of the page last Saturday, some must have been asleep.

Wishing prosperity for the Corner, and the sick ones better; sympathy for those who lost dear ones.

NECIA.

WELCOMED AT THE OLD HOUSE

Dear Social Corner Friends and Editor: Here I am back to "the house by the side of the road", just around the corner, but I can see so much work that ought to be done that it kills my whole ambition. It is just lovely here. The weather has been fine ever since I came home and that is one thing that I surely can enjoy. My kind neighbors and good friends have called and all seemed to be glad to welcome me at the old house once more. I am thinking of starting a small garden, although rather late for I will be lonesome without something to watch grow. I will send in my subscription next week for I must have The Bulletin every day to help me keep company. The old robin is again building her nest in the maple tree just where I can watch her and the air is full of other birds. Truly it is delightful here and to know it all is my own, for it is said, "He who owns the land owns up to the sky."

It was only a glad good morning
As he passed along the way,
But it sent the morning's glory
Over the live-long day.

ANN TENNA.

"A LITTLE CONNECTICUT YANKEE."

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: I have been asked by so many of the sisters if I knew that C. H. "Dad" Shaw wanted to know who I was, that I think I'd better steal a few minutes and answer.

Yes, I read Mr. Shaw's letter asking who I was and if I would care if he knew.

No, I don't mind telling him that I am a little old Connecticut Yankee and have always lived right here in Norwich, not the city but the town, was born only four miles from where I now live so I guess I'm fairly well known.

I do not care to have my name broadcasted. I think it takes all the fun out of writing for the Corner page, but I don't mind should tell Mr. Shaw in case he asks.

I'm sure my name won't mean anything to him but he may have known my father as he has spoken of different places around here and he may have met my father in his younger days. I certainly enjoy Mr. Shaw's letters and will say he surely is a wonderful man and I know he must be a good man to know.

Slow asks if I am all through house cleaning. Oh land sakes, what a mess I have here. Was practically all through when the man of the house took a notion that it would be a good time to have some repairing done so yours truly had to sit back and see the house all torn to pieces. But I did not say a word as it's what I've been wishing for, for a long time. I don't mean I've been wishing for the house to be all torn up, but for what it will be when it's finished.

Carpenters, painters, paper hangers and floor finishers have been holding full sway here.

Bachelor Maid: No doubt you read in the paper where that good mother had passed to her heavenly home. Such a wonderful woman she was and believe she has wonderful daughters who certainly should have no regrets as they were wonderful to her.

I met "Yours Truly" at the funeral and she spoke of you. Olga and Lonesome Pine, it was much surprised when she told me she was a Corner writer.

Well I hope it won't rain for a while until I get this work all done. We surely have had plenty of rain. Love to all.

BLACK EYED SUSIE

WHAT I BOUGHT WITH PRIZE MONEY.

Dear Social Corner Readers: I tried to think of a good way to spend the check which I received from our editor some time ago. Finally I decided to buy a pen. Shall we blame the pen if I do not write good letters now?

Was very sorry to read of the death of Rural Delivery as I always enjoyed his letters and was interested in things he had told about his life.

So many changes in this world make those who are left feel bewildered and lost.

Mitchie: I do believe you are more than busy. Hope you are not so tired you cannot go to the club meetings or have some pleasure. Think we will all have to take a boatride or so swimming.

Ma of Greene Gables: I enjoyed your letter, telling of the letter you feared might be from a lawyer. It made me laugh. Am glad to know you have a funny streak in you. We need some nonsense to brighten up the Corner.

Hope you write some more for I will be sure to appreciate it but need some one to laugh with me.

HEPATICA.

WORTHWHILE SUGGESTIONS.

Dear Cornerites: It doesn't seem to be generally known that cream taken from the top of Jersey milk with a cone-shaped cream dipper (which can be purchased at any household department in the stores for 10 cents) will whip as nicely as whipping cream. In the winter time I never buy cream to whip but an extra quart of Jersey milk. I make a great many milk desserts using the cream for whipping to put on top.

It is such a waste of minerals to cook vegetables in large quantities of water so I try to put on just enough water so that when the vegetable is cooked the water is gone. This is not difficult if one uses a cover on the sauce pan and after boiling begins, turn the gas down so it keeps the water boiling very gently. It is surprising too how this method reduces the gas bill. When making gravy for a roast, I boil my potatoes in more water, using the water for making gravy, thereby utilizing the minerals in the potato water and improving the flavor of the gravy.

I find it a considerable time saver to wash cooky pans, cake tins, etc., as soon as I am through baking; they wash easier and I put them in the oven to dry while it is still hot.

It is much easier, and the cereal tastes so much better, if it is cooked in the double boiler at night, then reheated in the morning.

We have delicious baked beans these days by preparing them in the morning and putting them in the furnace doorway to bake all day.

I make my mayonnaise in four or five minutes now and never have a failure when done in this way: Into a bowl put an egg, 1 teaspoon each of salt and mustard and add salad oil as follows: beat with Dover egg beater 25 turns between each teaspoon of oil added until five are used; then 15 turns between each addition until a quarter of a cup is nearly used; then put in several spoonfuls at a time beating only until oil is well mixed in. I add lemon juice or vinegar (3 tablespoons) at the end of the cup of oil, then the other half cup I beat in in three portions, beating between each until oil disappears. This makes one pint of dressing. When I first learned to make mayonnaise it took a good half hour as I added the oil drop by drop.

Another time saving hint—washing windows is never a bugbear to me as I use a chamois wrung as dry as possible and wipe the windows with it. It only takes a minute to do and I can keep my windows shining all the time.

I hope these hints may be of interest to some of your readers.

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER

Dear Social Corner Members: I have enjoyed reading the letters in the Social Corner. I would like to join.

Cactus Blossom: I am glad you had the chance to go to Florida. Have you seen anything of No Name lately?

Bitter Sweet: I would be glad to receive a call from you. I have enjoyed seeing your plants in your window as I passed by. I hope Mr. Bitter Sweet is as well as ever.

I will take for my pseudonym,

SPEAKING AND SPELLING CONTESTS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: We write about schools and children so often that we doubt not some of our members would gladly muzzle us had they the opportunity. But we are going to take a chance and maybe we shall escape.

It has been the custom of late years in towns having state supervision of schools to hold a speaking and spelling contest each spring—the speakers and spellers representing each school in town—the winners to take part in a county contest and finally those winners competing in a state contest. It was our pleasure to attend the town meet for the first time in a number of years as a disinterested spectator.

We never fail to feel surprised at the number of children that assemble on such an occasion. One hardly realizes there are that number in town and there is always so much excitement and scurrying to and fro, and begins first in one place and then another before the affair actually begins that we suppose each child really counts as two or three and perhaps an unusually spry one might count as much as four.

Another never failing source of surprise is the rapidity with which children change in appearance. The round little roly poly girl you remember two or three years ago is now tall and slender and so superior in manner that you have to summon whatever it is one does summon to keep from getting that sense of an inferior complex one reads so much about nowadays in novels and psychologies.

Your short stubby boy whose "knickers" were forever sagging at the knee in spite of safety pins and other devices has shot up like a weed, is in long trousers now and has so far outgrown childish pleasures as to feel the whole thing rather a bore. And you have to look once or twice to see if that is the same child who on occasion did imprison grasshoppers and caterpillars in his pockets for your edification. All this makes us feel positively aged so to more cheerful thoughts.

We were pleased to see so many taking part in both speaking and spelling. This business of standing straight before an audience and saying whatever you have to say without error or blunder takes courage and a measure of self control. For the child who is naturally a bit diffident or bashful it is a real victory and all honor to him if he never gets a prize or an honorable mention. As a teacher, we always felt that parents should not stress the matter of winning too heavily. There is an occasional child who feels actually disgraced and almost heartbroken if he does not come out first.

There is another type who always has a perfect alibi as to why he did not win, the judges were unfair, he spoke last—or first, some one disturbed him, etc. Both attitudes seem very wrong. We want every child to think that he succeeded if he did his best and to remember the contest joyfully whether a winner or a loser.

A spelling match is always a little tense. There is usually a sigh and bated breath as the contestant hesitates, trying to decide whether its 1 or e, one l or two l's and the expression on the face of the one who misses would be rather amusing if it weren't so tragic.

And then the hush of expectancy as the chairman announces "the judges are now ready to give us their decision." Every mother and every teacher feels her heart beat a little faster as she waits for the announcement though of course she is outwardly the picture of unconcern.

And then everyone is trooping out and "you did just fine, Herbert" or "wasn't it too bad Mary got nervous and put two r's in defer." And "hurry up and find sister, it's time to go home."

Yes, we always enjoy those programs where children take part and hope we always shall.

Aunt Sarah: I did not know there was any other Bo Peep in our circle. I have always felt a little grudge against fate because I never had a ride in a sleight, so you must be thinking of some one else. We rode through Lebanon last Decoration day and stopped at the "green." Everything looked so homelike and cheerful about the village street. I think it must be a charming place.

Dorinda: Was pleased to receive your letter. Hope we may meet personally some time.

BO PEEP.

TO ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

Said St. George with a sigh, said St. George with a frown, "Oh, for a dragon to chase out to town, for a dragon who has to die! For a dragon with long and dangerous tail that a warrior chap would like to twist, as it rose from a fen all covered with mist, with scales like a coat of mail. A dangerous dragon with eyes of flame, that threatened the country far and wide; but alas! every dragon has long since died, for that's how I won my fame.

St. George, you are wrong; no need to fret, there are dragons a-plenty for you to slay, come you back on Zoeburger day, we're threatened by dragons yet. The dragon "Apathy" lurks quite near, a poisonous creature, harming all; and "Prejudice" too, whose eyes are small; "Self-Indulgence" and "Hate," and "Fear."

Dragons a-plenty for you to fight. All the land would now be freed. "Sloth" "Despair" and "Suspicion" and "Greed"—slay them all with your good sword "Right."

My Money Making Stunt.

Social Corner Editor and Members: I have had so many good suggestions from the Corner that I want to add mine. At one of the meetings of the ladies' auxiliary of our church, each lady was asked to give or make $5.

As I did not feel I could donate it I began to look around for a way to earn it. As I was in a store one day I bought six hyacinth bulbs, brought them home and hunted up six coffee cans. With some dirt from the basement I planted them and left them in the dark two weeks and then brought them up to the light and sunshine. In two weeks more I had as pretty a pot of blossoms as you would pay a dollar for at the greenhouse. I put some pretty crepe paper around the cans and set them where my friends could see them, and soon had them all sold at $1 each, thus making my $5 and I enjoyed watching them grow.

THE RETURN FROM FLORIDA

Dear Social Corner Friends: Here we are at home again after spending the winter in the sunny south.

I found among other mail, a very pretty little calendar, for which I want to thank A Social Corner member, who is very kind to remember so many every year.

After leaving Lakeland, Fla., we spent six weeks at Daytona Beach. It is called the finest beach in the world. At low tide, it is 500 feet wide and hard as floor, and one can drive for 21 miles without a break. The resort looks all right, but the sand is soft and treacherous for autos.

The city is noted for its oleanders, and some streets are lined on both sides with them. They grow to about the height of an apple tree, and the colors are red, white, pink and yellow. They are in the height of their beauty in May and the city has an oleander festival about the middle of the month.

We had a pleasant trip home with perfect weather, and good roads most of the way. We passed through many historic places, but the most interesting city was Charleston, S. C. It was founded in 1670 and has now a population of about 80,000. Fort Sumpter and Fort Moultrie, are on small islands in the harbor. The first was noted at the beginning of the Civil war and the latter, dates back to Revolutionary days.

The old powder magazine was built in 1703 and is now used as a hall for the Colonial Dames.

The old post office was built in 1771. During the war, the British used it for headquarters, and George Washington and Lafayette were entertained there.

We saw the old slave market and the planters hotel near by.

There are three very old churches all in good preservation, St. Mary's, The French Huguenot and the St. Michael, but the latter is the most beautiful. It was built in 1752 and the clock and chimes and pipe organ were all brought from England in 1764 and are still in use during the services.

The pulpit is high up with a flight of stairs to get to it and the pews are of mahogany and made square with doors.

There are also many fine mansions facing the harbor, one of which was the home of a brother of George Washington.

We saw a very old and large tree that was used to hang pirates on and another tree that is said to be over 1000 years old, but how they know, I can't guess.

We also stopped at Fredericksburg, Va., and visited the homes of the mother and sister of George Washington which must have been fine in their day.

The old church at Pohick where Washington worshipped, has been restored to its original and is very quaint.

We passed through Washington, our Capitol, but other sisters have described the beautiful buildings much better than I can, and "Polly" will tell you all about it later.

I was sorry to hear of the death of many of our club members, during the winter and spring and their families have my deepest sympathy.

We shall miss them and their letters to the Corner page. Greetings to all from

HULDY.

GREETINGS TO MEMBERS

Dear Editor and all Friends: My, but this is some fine weather. It is fine for ducks. This is just what they like.

1432: If I made an error in thanking Club 4 for flowers sent to Peggy Alder it was not my fault. No one came to me and I was told that the club gave the flowers. They did not say it was her friends in the club that lived in East Killingly. If they had come to me and told me I would not have made such an error, but we thank all that did contribute.

Twice Twenty: You seem to be in favor of a memorial day. I am glad of that for I think it a nice idea, for it will show that the members that have passed on are still remembered by the living, and that they are still dear in our thoughts and that we think of them as the days and weeks go by and that we miss their fine letters from our page.

Ma of Greene Gables: I guess by your letter you know Kochia as well as I do. You know he is slow; as they say, but sure. He forgets our page so often that he thinks of it once in a while. They keep him doing errands and keep him at the dances too much I suppose he does get awful tired. I do hope he will get rested sometime.

Butterfly: I have been looking for that letter but haven't seen it yet. Come, now, you and hubby get busy and send it in. That rat! oh, my, I guess he and his friends had a game of bowling last night by the sounds.

It is nice at midnight when all around is still.

A good thing for callous and corns on the feet is to scrape raw onions and bind the places at night; it gives so much relief.

Fine Light Johnny Cake: (We all like it). 1 egg, 1 cup flour, 1 cup meal, 1 table spoon shortening, 1 cup molasses, use either milk or water, two teaspoons baking powder. Makes one nice loaf. Bake about 35 minutes in a hot oven.

Icavilla and Providence Rose: Hope you got home all right. Call again.

Azile: Hope you are better.

Aries: Answer soon.

L. T. H.: Hope you are better.

NONESOPRETTY (Club No. 4.)

GLAD SUMMER IS COMING

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: I have not meant to be silent so long, but the weather being so cold and damp I could not shake off the effects of my hard winter. Everything is now looking beautiful in spite of the warm, mild days being few and far between.

I wish to thank all the sisters who remembered me on my birthday and at Easter time.

I have enjoyed the letters and my sympathy has gone out to all who have been sick and to those who mourn for those who have gone from us away. May our Father comfort and strengthen you all.

I suppose soon you will begin to hold your meetings around. How nice it is for you all to meet and have good times. I enjoy reading the letters of all the clubs about their good times.

Of course there have been many changes. Some are invalids, others have gone home, and we are more than glad to extend a welcoming hand to the new members of our family; still there are many older sisters remaining. Do let us hear more often from you.

I live on the main road and enjoy watching the passersby. The summer traffic has begun and some very nice cars pass here on their way toward the mountain regions.

The grass is very green, owing to the frequent rains and the trees are blossoming out. I do hope there will be no more cool weather to nip the buds. Everything seems to be a little backward, owing to the cool weather so new things seem to have to be done in a rush.

I presume many of you have your spring cleaning finished and all ready for the summer so perhaps the letters will be more plentiful.

Best wishes and success to you all. Glad to hear from any of you.

BIANNA.

MOTHER'S DAY SURPRISES

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: Mother's day was full of surprises for me, and all such pleasant surprises I will state at once and in the order of the time. I received Saturday a lovely dress and card from my daughter in Hartford. Then Sunday morning, getting up late, I told my son and daughter I would eat my dinner and breakfast together, but as it would be some time before dinner would be ready, my daughter told me I must eat something then. But I soon saw she had another reason for my not waiting for dinner to be served, for on my plate lay a little box which on opening I found contained a dainty little necklace, and underneath the box a Mother's day card and two bills, one from son and daughter. I also received some seeds and pansies from friends, both in Hartford and Willimantic. When my daughter from Hartford drove to the door with an immense Martha Washington plant, it is lovely. Her stay has to be short as she had a sick husband. Almost an hour after she left another taxi stopped at the door and my son from Bristol appeared to me with a lovely lavender hydrangea. He spent the rest of the day with us and I called it a day of happiness and full of pleasant surprises. I wish that all mothers could feel as happy as I did. It is so lovely to know that your children all care for you and that you have so many true friends outside the family circle. I attended the last gathering at Chamber of Commerce hall and enjoyed myself fine. Everything passed so pleasantly and an excellent dinner was served, as usual, to which we all did justice. We are all wishing for a little more sunshine. Quite a few have come on the camp grounds and I walk out there nearly every day. The trees and the grass are looking lovely.

It will soon be warmer and then we will be wishing for some of this cool weather. Oh, we are so hard to suit sometimes. Best of wishes to Bachelor Maid, Olga, Sis Hopkins and everybody. It would be impossible for me to enumerate them all. Hope all the sick ones are better and my sympathy goes out to all who are in trouble. Well, I think it is time to say good afternoon.

HOBBIES

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: How much rain we have and how cool the weather is! How many of you have hobbies? I have two, beautiful flowers and beautiful fancy work. I have many flowers, many hardy ones and many house plants. Am always ready to exchange slips of plants for what I have not got. I have begonias and had geraniums in bloom most all winter but have set them outside and they are not looking so nice now, but my begonias I never set outside. I also have the fancy leaf geranium like the Happy Thought, also the Rainbow. I once had what used to be called the Band of Gold. If any sister has it, would be awfully glad to exchange for anything I have in the plant line. Have also a pure white patience plant or Sultana; have also a variegated one, the leaves being both white and green.

Sympathy to all those in trouble.

MISSES DEPARTED MEMBERS

Social Corner Editor and Sisters: I will write just a few lines this stormy morning, hoping it will help out the Corner page. Hope you all had a nice time at the last meeting. Would have liked to have been with you but was not able to come. I am very sorry to see our members passing away. My sympathy goes out to those who are left so lonely.

Polly: How are you and your little family? I enjoyed your visit very much. Hope you will come again soon. Hope all the sick are better.

RUSH TO TAKE PROFITS ABRUPTLY BROKE RALLY IN THE STOCK MARKET YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, May 24—(AP)—On renewed predictions of stormy weather in the money market, traders rushed to take profits in the final hour of today's session of the stock exchange, and rudely halted the rally which set in yesterday from the low price levels reached in Wednesday's drastic break.

Retention of the New York federal reserve bank's 5 per cent. rediscount rate, and the drop of $45,000,000 in brokers' loans, formed the background for vigorous professional operations for the advance during the early hours of the session, which carried most active stocks up about 1 to 8 points, but in the rush to unload in the late trading the advance was largely lost, and most of the more conspicuous issues were carried one to six points lower.

Bankers' predictions of another flurry in call money next week, reports that the Chicago federal reserve bank had again applied to the reserve board for permission to raise its rate to six per cent., and further demands in congress for an investigation of credit, induced traders to take their profits quickly rather than carry stocks over the week end into uncertain conditions. Call money held at officially six per cent. all day, the lowest rate since last August, but funds were abundantly available in the outside market as low as five per cent. Time money, however, moved even higher, in anticipation of a severe money pinch during the mid-year settlements beginning next week, and persistently tight money for some weeks thereafter. The longer maturities were on a flat rate of nine per cent. while sixty to ninety day money loaned at 9 1-4 per cent., and in some cases 9 1-2.

The day's industrial and business news had both bright and dark spots. While executives at the meeting of the American Iron and Steel institute gave optimistic reports of the industry's current and prospective future volume of business, Charles M. Schwab declared that this should not be permitted to blind them to "the serious economic truth that the earnings on the large investment are far from adequate to provide for the industry's future service to the country."

Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co., omitted its quarterly dividend for the first time in five years. But this was attributed to special conditions affecting this company. United Gas Improvement announced a recapitalization plan calling for a split up and the granting of valuable rights. General Motors acquired the Allison Engineering Co., which is developing a Diesel aviation motor, which, it is expected, will be brought out in competition to Packard's newly developed motor.

Such issues as General Electric, General Motors, American Can, Columbia Gas, Westinghouse Electric, Columbia Graphophone, Electric Auto Lite, United Aircraft, and Sparks Withington sold up briskly, only to fall back and close 1 to 4 points lower. Allied Chemical, Auburn Auto, and National Cash Register dropped about 4 points. International Telephone, selling ex-rights, lost 6 points net, and Keith-Albee dropped 8 U. S. Steel and Radio closed 2 and 3 points off.

Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe was an outstanding strong spot, mounting nearly 8 points to a new peak at 209 7-8. Pere Marquette sold about 7 points higher, and American Type Foundry, American Sugar, and Commercial Investment Trust advanced 3 to 5 points. Commercial Solvents mounted 8 points, and General Bronze and McCall Corp. sold up 3 and 6 points to new peaks. Baldwin mounted 5 points on substantial new orders. Adolf Gobel improved on rumors of a merger with Postum, and oils were steady to firm on higher crude and gasoline prices.

Commodities were mostly heavy, wheat futures again breaking more than a cent a bushel on reports of better weather, and corn suffering similar losses, cotton sold higher for a time, but soon ran into selling and closed 30 cents to $1 a bale lower.

Foreign exchanges stiffened, sterling cables getting back to $4.84 15-16 cents, which is still enough to bring gold from London, marks rose 3 points to 23.80 cents.

To meet the expenditures called for by the foregoing estimates a tax of twelve and three-fifths (12 3-5) mills on the last City List will be required, said List being $36,055,366. The tax recommended last year by the Finance Committee was twenty-five and three-fourths (25 3-4) mills on the list of $17,100,337.

In addition to the said estimated expenses for the ordinary requirements of the City, the Committee on Finance has been requested by petition and otherwise to submit to the Annual City Meeting for its action, estimates for the following purposes, which are as follows:

1. Repair of defective side walks	$ 2,000.00
2. Parks and Trees	1,500.00
3. The enrichment of building, plumbing and electric codes as ordinances.	1,500.00
4. New chassis for police patrol	3,000.00
5. Additional pay to five each regular police officer one day a week off duty	4,500.00
6. Hamilton Ave., Corning Road to City line, Macadam	32,000.00
7. Smith Ave., Bridge to Hamilton Ave., Macadam	18,000.00
8. Asylum St., Newton St. to Alms House, Macadam	10,000.00
9. Joseph Perkins Road, Fire Station to McKinley Ave. Ext., Macadam	3,000.00
10. Seventh St., Prospect St. to Durfey St. Ext., Macadam	2,500.00
11. Rockwell St., McKinley Ave. to Park Entrance, Macadam	11,500.00
12. Hickory St., Prospect St. to Boswell Ave., Macadam	13,000.00
13. Talman St., Bridge to Bridge, Macadam	15,000.00
14. Elizabeth St., School to Whipple Ave., Widening	4,000.00
15. Hobart Ave., Oak St. Northerly, Sewer	4,000.00
16. Smith Ave., County Home to Hamilton Ave., Sewer	6,000.00
17. Removing ledge opposite No. 30 Spruce St.	1,500.00
Total	$139,500.00

The foregoing items are all desirable, but will, if all are voted by the City Meeting, require an additional tax of three and three-fifths (3 3-5) mills above that required by the regular estimates for which the Committee has recommended a tax of 12 3-5 mills. Your Committee recommends that the warning for the next Annual Meeting include the last named estimates, commonly known as "extras", and a call for action thereon. Your Committee expresses no opinion as to which of said extra items are necessary and the order in which they suppose has no meaning as to the respective merits of each.

Your Committee further recommends the adoption by the Court of Common Council of the following Resolution:

RESOLVED: That the report of the Committee on Finance containing the estimates for the year ending May 15, 1930, be accepted; that the estimates therein contained be adopted and made the estimates of expenses of the City during the year ending on May 15, 1930; that the clerk cause the same to be published as required by the amended Charter of the City; and that the Mayor, or in his absence the Senior Alderman present, be directed on behalf of the Court of Common Council to submit the estimates embraced in said report to the next Annual City Meeting to be held on the first Monday of June, 1929, and to recommend that a tax of twelve and three-fifths (12 3-5) mills be laid on the last perfected grand list of the City to meet the ordinary expenses of the City for the present fiscal year of the City (May 16, 1929 to May 15, 1930, inclusive).

Respectfully submitted,
LEE ROY ROBBINS,
PAUL H. ZAHN,
PETER SELLAS,
Committee on Finance.

The foregoing is a true copy of said report and of the resolution therein contained which was adopted.

Said estimate of the expenses of the City for the year ending May 15th, next, made by the said Court of Common Council is hereby published by me in accordance with the direction of said Court of Common Council.

Dated at Norwich, Connecticut, May 23rd, 1929.

Attest:

DANIELSON

MASS. YOUTH GIVEN 30-DAY JAIL SENTENCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 24—As a justice of the peace at a session of court held in Pomfret this morning Judge W. Fenner Woodward of the local court sentenced Ray Brown of Pomfret to serve 30 days in jail, the charge being that Brown had endangered the morals of a young girl, a minor. Brown is on parole, and has been since last November from the state reformatory at Concord, Mass. He was committed to that institution for breaking into a restaurant and for stealing an automobile in Haverhill and served two years before being placed on parole. He is 21 years of age. Four years ago Brown was picked up by state officers of the Danielson barracks, in Canterbury he at the time being in possession of an automobile stolen in New London. As the owner of the car did not wish to press the charge, Brown escaped with a fine. As soon as he completes the sentence he began to serve at Brooklyn jail today he will be turned over to Massachusetts officers and recommitted to the reformatory at Concord.

In the town court this morning Nelson Milliord of Danielson was fined $5 and costs for failure to grant the right of way when his car was in collision with one driven by David E. Feldman at the intersection of Broad and Reynolds streets last evening. Judge W. Fenner Woodward remitted $4 of the fine and imposed only actual costs. Milliord was traveling south along Broad street and Feldman was going east on Reynolds street when the Milliord car struck the Feldman car and then shot across the highway and into a pole on the southeast corner of the intersection. Mrs. Milliord, who was riding with her husband, was cut by flying glass, as was their son, Eugene, aged two, also a passenger of the car. Mrs. Milliord and the injured child were given attention by Dr. Cecil R. Garcin of Dayville, who happened to come along in his car just after the accident occurred. The affair was investigated by State Officer Donald J. Geddes, who ordered Milliord into court. The cars were considerably damaged.

The program for the observance of Memorial day in Danielson calls for the formation of the procession in Main street at 12:45 p. m. and then to proceed to the Orpheum theatre, where the exercises are to be held, beginning at one o'clock. A. W. Barnard, of the American legion will be marshal of the procession, with Stanley Pockoski, representing the Spanish War Veterans, and Deforest Wells, Jr., representing the Sons of Veterans, as aides. The procession will be headed by St. James' band, and, in order: Service battery, Lieut. Gordon J. Gale commanding; Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War; United Spanish War Veterans; American Legion; Women's Relief corps; American Legion auxiliary; Guards of Honor; members of the Grand Army of the Republic, in automobiles. The Killingly high school band making its first parade appearance, will be assigned a position at about the center of the line. The exercises at the theatre will follow the usual patriotic lines, and the principal address will be delivered by Rev. Harding W. Gaylord of the Westfield Congregational church.

After the exercises the procession will form again and proceed to the Soldiers' monument at Davis park, where prayer will be offered, and thence to Westfield cemetery and thence to St. James' cemetery. Upon return to G. A. R. hall a lunch will be served.

OBITUARY.

Francis J. Jaegar.

Francis J. Jaegar, 37, veterans of the Civil war and for many years resident here and at Dayville, died during the early hours of this morning at Ashaway, R. I., where he and Mrs. Jaegar have been living since they left Danielson last fall. Mr. Jaegar has been in failing health for some time. The body is to be brought here for services and burial. Mr. Jaegar served in the Civil war as a member of the 8th Connecticut infantry and had a fine record of service. For many years he was a member of McGregor post, G. A. R. of Danielson and greatly interested in its activities. He was a native of New York. In addition to his wife Mr. Jaegar is survived by four children, John of Dayville, Mrs. Arthur Hunt of Potter Hill, R. I., Marvin of Ludlow, Vt., and Frank of Newton Lower Falls, Mass.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home on North Main street funeral services for Charles S. Blackmar were conducted by Rev. Harding W. Gaylord of the Westfield Congregational church and Rev. W. E. Newton of Brockton, formerly pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Attawaugan, where Mr. Blackmar lived for many years. A large number attended the services, including a delegation of the members of Moriah lodge, A. F. and A. M. Burial was in Westfield cemetery, where the Masonic burial ritual was conducted by W. M. Walter Anderson and Chaplain Harry Brearley. There were many beautiful floral pieces. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

Elimination of two grade crossings, removal to new sites of two houses, one of them the modern residence of County Commissioner Urgele LaFrance and the sacrificing of some beautiful elm trees are some of the things involved in connection with road building operations at and near Central Village, the work to be started in the near future. The crossings to be eliminated are French's, scene of fatal accidents within the past few years, this crossing on the Willimantic-Providence road south of Central Village and the Main street crossing in Central Village. Extension of the concrete highway northward from the top of Hopkins hill at the north end of Plainfield street through Central Village onto the Central-Wauregan road will bring about these changes. Traffic will be carried over the present grade crossings mentioned on overhead bridges, such as was built to eliminate Bishop's crossing in the southern section of Plainfield.

Another stretch of trolley track of the Connecticut in disuse for several years is being torn up between Central Village and Moosup, the work starting near the southerly end of the Green Hollow road. Much of the distance the road runs over a private right of way, but for a considerable distance coming out of Central Village it borders the highway. Removal of the rails and ties will permit if it is so desired, the widening of this narrow stretch of trunk line highway and the removal of at least one bad curve.

Mrs. Marjorie Waller is to leave next week to spend a few days at her former home in Skaneateles, N. Y.

Mrs. A. E. Darling, who has been with her daughter, Mrs. LeRoy Spaulding, at Plymouth, N. H., during the winter has reopened her home at Dayville for the summer season.

Permission for the periodical flushing of Main street has been granted by State Highway Commissioner John Macdonald, subject only to the reservation that it will be discontinued if the practice is found to injure the pavement. The flushing is to be done in the late night season.

At East Killingly Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, under the direction of Marshal Clarence Soule all soldiers' graves in cemeteries in outlying sections of that part of the town will be decorated and appropriate exercises held. These exercises will be in addition to those planned for Memorial day, at 10 a. m.

On Sunday Memorial exercises are to be held at South Killingly at 2 o'clock. Rev. Edwin Ayer is to be in charge of the exercises at the church, and following these graves of the honored dead will be decorated. Patriotic societies from Danielson will be in attendance.

PUTNAM

SUBBO NICKOLOFF ELECTED PRESIDENT OF PUTNAM ROTARY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 24—Subbo Nickoloff, a member of the firm of Leland-Gifford company, production machine and parts manufacturing company of Worcester, Mass., was elected to head the Putnam Rotary club for the ensuing year. The election of Mr. Nickoloff as president of the local business organization took place at a meeting of the newly elected board of directors Thursday. Mr. Nickoloff is a charter member of the Rotary club and during the past five years of its existence he has been an ardent worker for both the club and its principles. Mr. Nickoloff is well fitted for the Rotary position he will occupy during the forthcoming year.

Alexander Gilman, president of the A. Gilman Co., Inc., was elected vice president. Like Mr. Nickoloff, Mr. Gilman has devoted much of his time and interests to Rotary and the directors feel that their choice of vice president cannot be surpassed. Mr. Gilman is one of the city's most successful business men and is head of a large hardware and supply store.

Warren W. Averill, secretary and treasurer of the Putnam Music Shop, Inc., was re-elected treasurer of the club for another year. Mr. Averill's record in this capacity during the past year was one that foretold of his reappointment.

E. Leslie Beebe, manager of the Putnam, Danielson and Moosup telephone exchanges was re-elected secretary of the club. Mr. Beebe is one of the younger members of Rotary. He came to Putnam from Willimantic nearly three years ago. His interests in his adopted community and his untiring efforts devoted to policies for Putnam's advancement in the business and manufacturing world led to his election to this post last year, a position he has faithfully carried out.

Rev. James F. English, pastor of the Congregational church of this city will retire as head of the Rotary club, after piloting the club through one of the most successful years in its history.

Rev. George J. Donohue, pastor of the Holy Trinity church in Pomfret and of the Sacred Heart church in West Thompson left this morning for New York and sailed tonight on the S. S. LaFrance, of the French line for Tours, France. Father Donahue will spend ten months abroad and during his stay in Europe will visit in France and Germany and will spend much of his time in Switzerland. His voyage is being made primarily in the interests of his health. Secondary purposes of the foreign tour of the Pomfret priest will be the collection of material that will find its way into a new volume, upon which he commences work this year.

As a token of esteem for their spiritual leader, the members of the Pomfret and West Thompson parishes presented Father Donahue with a substantial purse of money at a farewell banquet tendered in his honor last Monday evening.

Arthur E. Smith, cashier of the Citizens National bank of this city left this morning for Worcester, Mass., where he joined the New England Rotarian delegation to the International Rotary convention to be held next week in Dallas, Texas. Mr. Smith will represent the Putnam club at the world gathering of the International business men's organization. The New England delegation departed on a special train known as the New England Rotary.

Thursday evening was "Ladies' night at the Putnam lodge of Elks. In the entertainment of their wives and lady friends the "Brother Bills" presented a most delightful programme. A lobster salad supper was served in the banquet room in the Elks home on Main street. Later in the evening the Elks with feminine guests retired to the state armory on Harris street where a bill of vaudeville and entertainment headed and featured by Tom Mulgrew and his gang from Providence was presented. Dancing in the company drill shed followed.

E. L. Robinson, principal of Putnam high school at a meeting of the student body announced the honor roll for the past marking period. Students possessing a berth on the first list of honors received in all studies an average of at least 95 per cent.: Freshmen: Ruth Amidon, Helen Brown, Leonard Guertin, Murial Johnson, Russell Ryan; sophomores: Beatrice Green; juniors: Harry Thayer, Helen Varbedian; seniors Elizabeth Bennett, Miriam Daitch, Ruth Hawkes, Aline Tourville; post graduate, Edith Goyette.

The second honor roll is composed of students receiving markings in all studies of at least 85 and are: Freshmen: Helen Bosworth, Ruth Emlott, Edith Mouncy, Genevieve Sherlock, Lillian Viada; sophomores: Ulysses Labossiere, Viola Ouimette, Albina Socher, Thereas St. Georks, Emil Valda, Newart Varbedian; juniors: Marion Diana, Arthur Kaminsky, Edna Kent, Elle Pahikainen, Rita Stone; seniors, John Ash, Katherine Banahan, Chester Hale, Gerard Layallee.

Health Officer Peter A. Chandler said he had been informed by City Dog Warden Ernest L. Chandler that the quarantine which has confined dogs to enclosures and leashes for the past four months will remain intact for another indefinite period. Warden Chandler has received notice of this order from the state bureau of domestic animals. Rabid dogs which romped through Woodstock and Thompson a week ago attacked other animals of this species. It is because of this that Danielson and Putnam dogs will have to content themselves in their restricted areas.

A four stroke alarm at 2.30 a. m. to-day sent the members of the hook and ladder company and the hose company to an open lot on the north end of Woodstock avenue to extinguish a brush fire. The blaze fanned by high winds quickly burned over a wide area but caused no great amount of loss. Firemen protected surrounding property until the patch of ground had burned over and the flames died out.

FOND OF HUGGING WOMEN—TEDDY GINGO MAY BE INSANE

NEW LONDON, May 24—Teddy Gingo, North Bank street restaurant worker, when he is employed, concluded a sentence in the county jail this morning for committing an offense of which he is again guilty, for he was arrested shortly before noon. Gingo will probably not be recommitted to jail, but is more likely to be sent to Norwich state hospital, for it is believed that he is suffering of a form of dementia. He was booked on a charge of breach of the peace, but a commission will be appointed for the purpose of examining Gingo as to his sanity. Gingo went to a Main street restaurant after obtaining his liberty today and whn a waitress endeavored to obtain his order, Gingo started to make love to the young woman by seizing her in his arms and staging a "necking" party. The police were complained to and Patrolman Dennis Murphy arrested Gingo. Gingo was sentenced to jail three months ago when he grabbed a North Bank street woman as she passed along that street on her way to her home. Previously he had been in court for annoying a Bank street young woman, who found Gingo loitering in the yard of her home when she drove her automobile to the garage. He was allowed to continue his liberty at the time, but returned to the house and was arrested and sentenced to jail. He later made his escape and when arrested was found on Rogers street where he was also annoying women.

DANGEROUS SEWAGE CONDITIONS FOUND

The state department of health has found recently several dangerous sewerage conditions. Most of these have been in suburbs of larger cities where public sewers are not available, says the weekly bulletin of the department.

A local health officer received a complaint about a sewage nuisance. He visited the location and found that a building contractor was putting up four houses, with four small adjoining lots, where no public sewers existed. Two of the houses were occupied. The area was underlaid with tight clay soil. Septic tanks and short tile lines were provided in front of each house. The soil would not take seepage and the systems were overflowing. Neither house had been occupied longer than five or six months. One of the purchasers had paid the builder to dig up his system (put in by the same builder) but the attempt was unsuccessful. The purchasers had no redress. The builder not only was scot free but was completing two other houses which he intended to sell. The health officer could take no action in the case of the new houses until nuisances were actually created. About the only remedy in the case of the occupied houses would be to order cessation of the use of water flush toilet fixtures.

In at least three instances lately, the state department of health has been called in to approve sewerage layouts for new schools where no public sewers were available, and found serious trouble. Two schools were partially erected without adequate plans for taking care of the water flush toilet fixtures. At one location, the underlying formation was rock and the main sewer left the school six feet below ground in a level area. It was impossible to put in a seepage system on the school grounds. A very long length of sewer had to be constructed to discharge into a distant stream, the local officials agreeing to extend the public sewers as soon as funds could be made available. Expensive filtration systems for which no money had been allotted were necessary for the other two schools.

A large institution constructed recently was built with the idea of taking care of the sewage in the ground. The department had some holes dug in the soil and water was added to see whether seepage was possible. It was found that the ground was so wet that the water level rose instead of fell. In a short time the holes were completely full of water, indicating that sewage added to the ground would overflow. A large hotel built on the edge of a lake used for bathing purposes has been found to be constructed without making any plans for sewage disposal to avoid pollution of the lake.

The moral of these examples is that the individual buying property, the building contractor, the architect, and the local officials in charge of the construction of schools or other institutions, should investigate carefully before getting tied up with a building where no public sewers are available and opportunities for taking care of the sewage on adjacent ground are slight. Where seepage is slow, large areas should be planned for, and at some locations, the installation of water flush toilet fixtures is impracticable without creation of nuisances, until public sewers are available.

The state department of health publishes a pamphlet on the subject of "sewage disposal" which contains information of interest and which is available upon request. The 1929 general assembly has passed a new state law by which towns, cities and boroughs can adopt local ordinances prohibiting new construction without local approval of sewerage plans. It is hoped that such local regulation may be adopted, because the time to stop such unfortunate conditions as these cited is before buildings are constructed and not by the issuance of orders after nuisances are created.

Guayaquil Becomes a Thriving Port.

Ecuador will display all its goods, wares and merchandise at the annual exhibition to be held at Guayaquil in October.

"Until 1918 Guayaquil was handicapped by frequent epidemics," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society. "Yellow fever raged there and mariners avoided the port. Today, thanks to American and Japanese scientists, Guayaquil is a city of more than 100,000 healthy inhabitants and its trade ranks with the largest ports on the western coast of South America.

"Although Guayaquil lies but 40 miles up the Guayas river from the Pacific Ocean, it is nearer New York than San Francisco. The Panama canal cut the former sailing distance between the Ecuador port and New York by 9,000 miles.

"The Guayas is a scenic approach to Guayaquil. As the largest coastal vessels swing into the Gulf of Guayaquil, they pass Puna island, 30 miles long and 10 miles wide, which, like a huge cork, could close the mouth of the river. The island acts as a natural buffer between the currents of the ocean and river, so that the Guayas is often as smooth as a lake. Along the river side, a tropical sun nurtures thick forests, now and then pierced by the fanlike leaves of towering palms.

"Guayaquil harbor is a perpetual parade of boats of all sizes from the crudest native dugout to the huge funnelled ocean-going craft, which are loaded and unloaded as they lie at anchor offshore. Native canoes, rude, but swift as American skiffs larger boats which resemble Chinese sampans, and bamboo and cane rafts, carry cacao beans, alligator pears, melons, bananas, mangoes, guavas, limes, peaches, apples, cherries, strawberries and many other native products. Many of these products come from remote regions touched by Guayas tributaries. Bamboo huts in the center of some of the rafts house the skippers' families, their poultry, and dogs.

"The city spreads out on a broad plain which is not more than four feet above the sea at high tide. A solid row of low buildings lines the quay. Their first floors are hidden in the shadows of arcades, while the balconied upper floors are shielded from the sun by reed awnings.

"Most of the buildings are white, but here and there a pale pink or blue one adds color to a row. These appear to be substantial but close observation reveals that many bamboo frames, covered with plaster or stucco, and, in some cases, painted to resemble marble.

"Throughout the city improved streets run at right angles. There are also shaded parks and squares. The fine residences of Guayaquil are as attractive as their filmsy bamboo construction can make them. Often the verandas of Guayaquil houses have a larger floor area than the floors inside.

"In the business streets the ground floors of bordering buildings are usually occupied by open front shops. In these shops an English, French or American woman may buy perfumes, cosmetics and other 'necessaries' almost as readily as in a store of her home town.

"There are numerous sweet shops, and open cafes where little tables are set out on the sidewalk in the shade of the arcades. Conversation must be carried on in a loud tone on account of the street noises. The tin ware salesman, with his pots, pans and buckets of various sizes and shapes, dangling from a long pole, sounds like the approach of an ancient flivver. Then there are venders of iced drinks and sweet-meats, and newsboys and street merchants of various other types whose refrain is almost deafening.

"The street resounds with the clatter of hoofs, for, in Guayaquil, the donkey and horse have not been wholly displaced by the automobile. The grocery boy straddles the rump of one of these animals. In front of him his deliveries are packed in crates which hang over both sides of his mount. The donkey also is the Guayaquil ice wagon, and, while the city has electric trams, the donkey-drawn vehicle is still patronized by a people who appear unhurried. One of the most ridiculous sights in the Guayaquil streets is an elongated native riding a donkey so small that the rider's feet, if extended, would drag the ground.

"There are few spots in Guayaquil where the traveler is out of the range of the odor of cocoa beans. In the side streets, large areas are covered with beans which are frequently turned so that each bean will have the benefit of the sun's rays. Cocoa is the leading export of the port."

BROCCOLI, NOW POPULAR, IS KIN TO CAULIFLOWER

Broccoli is not a newly discovered vegetable, but until lately it was not well known or widely grown. Of European origin, it has long been familiar to the French and Italian household, and it was doubtless introduced to Americans through those nationalities. Recently broccoli of the sprouting type has been produced extensively in very popular. It is now possible to obtain this excellent flavored green vegetable in the stalls of most large city markets.

Broccoli is one of the forms of the Texas and California and has become large brassica or cabbage family. Cauliflower, cabbage, brussels sprouts, kale and kohirabi are its nearest relatives, botanically speaking. Of these it is most like cauliflower. The flower head of sprouting broccoli, unlike that of cauliflower, is not white, but deep green, as is the rest of the part that is cut for food. The stalk is long, leafy and branching. Because of this long stalk, some people have thought that sprouting broccoli must be a cross between asparagus and cauliflower, but horticulturists of the United States department of agriculture say this is not the case. When a first crop of flower heads has been cut from the plants, a second growth may be obtained.

The flower heads and the more tender parts of the stalk are eaten. The lower end of the stalk is trimmed off, so that sometimes there may be considerable waste in preparing broccoli for the table. Like any other green vegetable, it is cooked in lightly salted boiling water. The pieces are left whole and should be carefully moved from the saucepan to them shapely for serving. It usually becomes tender in 10 minutes' cooking. It is then drained and served with melted butter or hollandaise sauce.

Once in a while the greatest truth is told by the biggest liar.

DENIES NEW TRIAL OF STEWART WILL CASE

A new trial of the Stewart will case has been denied by Judge Christopher L. Avery in superior court.

George Floyd Stewart and Clifford H. Stewart, both of North Stonington; E. Russell Stewart of Stonington and Florence Esther Stewart Wheeler of Westerly, appealed from an order of the probate court in allowing the will of their uncle, William Stewart, being admitted to probate. A trial in superior court in which Attorney Stewart of this city was named defendant as he is executor of the estate and chief beneficiary of the $25,000 estate, resulted in a jury sustaining the will. A move was made for a new trial on the grounds of newly discovered evidence.

In his decision Judge Avery says: The trial of this case occupied a considerable time and a large number of witnesses were heard on both sides. The evidence of the appellants tending to show lack of mental capacity was weak. The overwhelming weight of evidence tended to show that the deceased, at the time of making the will, was a man of more than average capacity and that he was fully competent to make the will and understood and did exactly what he wanted to do. There was no evidence of undue influence and all the circumstances at the time the will was made clearly showed that no undue influence was or could have been exerted.

The new evidence claimed by the appellants is, to a large extent cumulative. Most of it, by due diligence, could have been produced at the former trial and even if believed by the jury would not, in my opinion, change or belikely to change the result if a new trial was had.

Considering the large amount of time that was consumed in the trial of this case and the small possibility that the new evidence would in any way affect or change the result if a new trial was had, it appears that the demurrer to the appellant's petition for a new trial should be sustained.

The demurrer is accordingly sustained and the petition for a new trial is denied.

So that all may enjoy healthful vegetables

Cook with sugar in only a little water

A GROUP of cooking experts recently made extensive tests in New York on the correct way of cooking vegetables. They made a discovery so simple and yet so far-reaching that every woman interested in good foods should know about it.

The vegetables were cooked in various ways. The various dishes were numbered. Then the experts tested them and voted. In every case the vegetables prepared with sugar and little water won unanimously.

Try, for example, this delicious Corn Pudding. Use either fresh or canned corn. To 2 cups of corn add 1 canned pimiento and 1 small green pepper shredded coarsely, ½ small grated onion, 2 well-beaten eggs, 2 level tablespoons of sugar, 1 teaspoon of salt, ¼ teaspoon of pepper and paprika, 2 tablespoons of flour, 1 teaspoon of baking powder and 1 cup of milk. Mix all ingredients together, add 2 teaspoons of melted butter. Drain into a well-buttered casserole and bake half an hour. Then remove cover and delicately brown.

Try this new discovery every time you cook a vegetable. Note how much more both children and adults like vegetables cooked in this way because the added sugar develops and brings out all the natural, tasteful flavors of the foods. Sugar restores the flavor of freshness to vegetables that are wilted and to canned vegetables. Add a dash or more of sugar, depending on quantity, when cooking peas, lima beans, string beans, corn, carrots, beets, parsnips, sweet potatoes, squash, onions and tomatoes. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

PLANE FORT WORTH IN AIR 172 HOURS AND 32 MINUTES

Ended Its Endurance Flight at 4.05 p. m. Yesterday—Landing Was Necessitated by a Cracked Propeller, Caused by Fighting a Rain Storm—Broke Record of Army's Question Mark by More Than 21 Hours—Flyers Landed Physically Fit, Except For Their Hearing—Crowd of 20,000 to 30,000 Swept the Police Away and Almost Crushed the Plane Before the Flyers Could Alight.

FORT WORTH, Tex., May 26—(AP)—Having smashed all sustained flight records, Reginald L. Robbins and his co-pilot, James Kelly, brought the monoplane Fort Worth to the ground here, this afternoon a few minutes after 4 o'clock, only after a storm battered propellor had started to shake the engine and plane badly.

The plane had been in the air 172 hours, 31 minutes and 10 seconds, almost a day longer than the famous army Question Mark whose record was surpassed by 21 hours 51 minutes and 10 seconds.

Robbins and Kelly by their feat eclipsed the old mark for single motored, dual motored and tri-motored planes and lighter than air machines and all records for crews regardless of size.

Although the men were tired and deaf from almost seven and one half days of exposure to the roar of a Whirlwind motor they were so happy they forgot their aching muscles and long sleepless visits.

A crowd, variously estimated at 20,000 to 30,000 swept all police barriers and fences aside and almost crushed the plane before the flyers could alight. Heavy ropes strung on iron posts set in concrete went down before the rush and the police cordon, which formed the second line of defense soon had to run to keep up with the head of the crowd. Around the plane fifty men, holding a heavy rope, were crushed against their backs were against the plane itself.

A lane finally was made through the crowd and Mrs. Robbins, her five year old son Jack and Mrs. Kelly were carried through on the shoulders of men. All three of them tried to greet the fliers at once and the narrow door of the plane was sorely taxed.

When the crowd was pushed back sufficiently to allow photographers to set up their cameras Robbins and Kelly alighted, stiff and sore, but well able to move on their own feet. Police finally managed to slide the crowd back sufficiently to allow the fliers to reach waiting automobiles and come to town for a shave and a meal. The floor of the Fort Worth club was turned over to them.

The landing itself was rather a flat denouement as far as most of the crowd was concerned. After all of the hours of suspense while the Fort Worth was breaking the record, the breathless moments during refuelings or the thrilling trips which Kelly made to his perch under the motor to grease the valve rocker arms, the landing was a matter of fact.

All afternoon the monoplane had hovering over the field while hundreds of spectators and other fliers went aloft. When the silver endurance ship finally did swing up wind, turn lazily and glide to the field it seemed as if something tremendous in the way of an ovation or a spectacle should climax the nerve-racking effort. The human voice was inadequate.

The fliers not only rode to fame, but to considerable fortune on their venture. A fund raised by the Fort Worth Association of Commerce has passed the $12,000 mark and is going up rapidly as a number of west Texas communities have suddenly taken an interest in it and made contributions. Presidents of a number of air transport companies yesterday promised the fliers $50 apiece for every hour they stayed aloft after the record was broken and this will amount to $2,200 or perhaps $2,300. In addition to this they already have opportunities to "clean up" many thousands of dollars on newspaper and magazine serials and vaudeville tours. All this in addition to any bonuses they may receive from the manufacturers of their equipment.

Examination of the plane showed that the motor was still in good condition, and probably could run many more hours. The second hand Whirlwind engine which Robbins picked up after another flyer had discarded it, never missed a beat in its seven-and-one-half days. The propellor was the only part of the plane damaged and long cracks in it showed the severity of the hail which the plane went through last night.

One of the most enthusiastic congratulations which the fliers received came from Lady Mary Heath of England, famous feminine pilot, who returned to Fort Worth from Temple, Texas, this afternoon to see the end of the flight. She is on her way to the Pacific coast.

CLAIMS WORLD ALTITUDE RECORD OF 41,000 FEET

DESSAU, Germany, May 26—(AP)—Pilot Willy Neunhofer tonight claimed a world altitude record of 41,000 feet, made with a Junkers airplane of the Bremen type. Earlier a break in his oxygen tube caused him to lose consciousness and the machine dropped nearly 22,000 feet before he regained control.

The aviator will make application for official recognition of his flight by the International Air federation. He claims the present record of that body was made by the American captain, C. C. Champion who attained 41,710 meters as compared to his 12,500 meters. (Lieutenant Appolo Soucek, U. S. N., on May 8 flew to a height of 39,140 feet. This mark was recognized nationally and application made for International recognition).

Neunhofer spent two hours and 26 minutes in the air. The purpose of the flight was to test the effects of rarified air and cold on his motor and men.

FAILED TO BREAK NEW SOLO FLIGHT RECORD

LOS ANGELES, May 26.—(AP)—Fog and a blusterous wind defeated Herbert J. Fahy's attempt to break Martin Jensen's solo flight endurance record at 2:28 a. m. today. The Lockheed Vega plane was forced down after flying approximately 21 hours, 16 minutes, leaving Jensen's record of 35 hours 33 minutes and 21 seconds unthreatened.

The J-5 Wright whirlwind motor, which powered the plane, was working perfectly when Fahy gave up the flight.

Lockeheed Vega company officials, at whose plant Fahy was chief test pilot, said the aviator was instructed not to fly away from this port at night, those rules being established by an insurance company. Fahy said a wind bore in fog banks shortly after after 2 a. m., and he believed he soon would be engulfed in clouds. He flew to a lower altitude and finally landed. Within half an hour after he came to earth the wind cleared the sky and a bright moon came out.

Fahy said he would make a second attempt to establish a new solo endurance record within a week. He left for home without checking gasoline consumption of his plane or the engine.

REFUELING ENDURANCE FLIGHT IS UNDERWAY

WICHITA, Kas., May 26—(AP)—A Cessna monoplane "Miss Ranger," which took off here Saturday at 8:54:30 a. m., on a refueling endurance flight, piloted by Owen Haughland and Gene Shank tonight was nearing completion of its second day aloft.

The third refueling contact was made at 6.45 o'clock this morning, almost 22 hours after the plane took the air. The supply plane crew men are Verne Nelson and O. P. Harrah. Seventy gallons of gasoline and breakfast were transferred to the endurance plane.

The fliers turned northward this morning planned to cruise at least three days over Minnesota. The cities of Robinsdale and Minneapolis were on the itinerary. Haughland's home being at Robinsdale and Shank's at Minneapolis. St. Paul also will be visited.

If the northern flight is successful the fliers will return to Wichita and continue on to Ranger, Texas—the city honored by Chief Pilot Haughland in naming the ship. Haughland resided at Ranger for several months.

After a cruise in the Ranger vicinity the ship will return to Wichita for the finish.

A note dropped before the plane turned into the north stated that flying conditions last night were bad. The night was spent in cruising over and around this city.

COMMERCIAL FLIERS REFUELED AT WICHITA, KAS.

WICHITA, Kansas, May 26. —(AP)—Gene Shank and Owen Haughland, two commercial fliers who took off here Saturday morning in their monoplane "Miss Ranger" in an attempt to break the world's endurance record refueled here this morning and headed their crimson ship for Robinsdale, Minn.

The third actual refueling contact made at 6:45 a. m. almost 22 hours after the plane went aloft, was described as "perfect" by the two refueling ship pilots, Verne Nelson and O. P. Harrah.

Seventy gallons of gasoline, and breakfast consisting of toast and cheese were transferred to the two men. Half an hour later they set a course to the north, toward their home state. The refueling plane left 30 minutes later. Two contacts were made later yesterday.

THREE FATALITIES WHEN TRAIN HIT TWO AUTOS

CHESTER, Pa., May 26.—(AP)— A Baltimore and Ohio passenger train crashed into two automobiles at a crossing in Ogden, near here, today, killing three persons and injuring two others.

Those who lost their lives were Clifton Tafford, 22; Mrs. Mary McClellan, 21, and her 3-year-old daughter, Emily. All lived at Linwood, Pa.

Helen Congleton, 20, a sister of Mrs. McClellan, was so badly hurt that physicians fear she will die. Nelson Poole, 21, of Brandywine Summit, Pa. also was seriously injured, but is expected to recover.

The train hit both automobiles at the same time. The cars had stopped at the railroad crossing for a freight train to pass. As the last car of the freight went by, Stafford, and Poole, started across the tracks.

Neither of them had seen the passenger train, which was coming down the opposite track, the engine only a short distance behind the last freight car. The automobiles were carried down the right of way for more than 100 feet and their occupants hurled in all directions.

MAN KILLED WHEN AN UNLICENSED PLANE CRASHED

YUMA, Ariz., May 26—(AP)—Franklin H. Christosserson, of San Ygidro, Calif., was killed instantly today and Ernest Henderson, of Sandiego, was probably fatally injured in the crash of an unlicensed old model Curtiss plane.

Christosserson was piloting the "Jenny" with Henderson as a passenger. The plane went into a tail spin from a few hundred feet altitude as its pilot attempted to land in a private field in a sub-division in the outskirts of Yuma.

No information concerning the purpose of the fatal flight nor the identity of the men other than their names was learned.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

ROME, May 26—(AP)—The Italian senate Saturday approved the Lateran treaties 315 to 4, leaving the way now clear for ratification by King Victor Emmanuel and Pope Pius.

LONDON, May 26—(AP)—Miss Virginia Willys, daughter of the Ohio automobile manufacturer, was married to Luis Marcenitio de Aguirre of Buenos Aires at the Henrietta street registry office Saturday.

LONDON, May 26—(AP)—London had one of its rare opportunities of seeing its "finest" on parade Saturday when nearly 13,000 bobbies marched from Hyde Park to Buckingham palace in commemoration of the centenary of the metropolitan police.

STEAMER ALLUTIAN STRUCK ROCK AND SANK

SEATTLE, May 26—(AP)—Radio dispatches received here said the Alaska Steamship company's liner Aleutian struck a rock in Yuak Bay on the jagged coast of Kodiak Island, Alaska, early today and sank in deep water.

Her crew of 135 and 156 passengers were taken off by the Coast Geodetic survey steamship surveyor and were being taken to Seward, Alaska, 300 miles north east of Kodiak. The master of the ill-fated ship was to return to try and locate the sunken craft.

The water was reported normal when the ship struck at 5:20 o'clock this morning in Larsen Bay, an indentation of Yuak Bay.

The Aleutian, formerly the Panama and the Havana, was valued at $1,000,000 by the company officers who spoke of her as the finest ship in their service.

She was captained by John S. Nord, who had a record of more than 30 years in Alaskan waters without a mishap until he took over the command of the Aleutian.

The ship, of 5,400 tons, was put into the Alaska service two years ago. She was built in Philadelphia in 1898.

FARM RELIEF DEADLOCK HAMPERS LEGISLATION

WASHINGTON, May 26.—(AP) — Congress is at the cross roads this week on the extra session program of President Hoover with final action in prospect on the tariff bill in the house, on the census-reapportionment measure in the senate and on the farm relief bill in the conference between the senate and house.

With those three propositions out of the way, the administration is ready to sanction a recess until the middle of September if the senate will first fix a definite time for a vote on the tariff measure.

But the farm relief deadlock is the stumbling block. For more than a week now, the conferees of the house have declined flatly to consider the differences in the senate and house measures unless the senate representatives abandon the controversial export debenture provision which is so strongly opposed by the president.

Senate conferees, headed by Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, are standing firmly by the debenture provision and urging that the conferees first settle other differences in the bill. The deadlock was drawn tighter yesterday as house members walked out of the conference.

Just what the next step will be is problematical.

FUNERAL OF SUN YAT SEN, "FATHER OF THE REPUBLIC"

PEKING, China, May 26—(AP)—A special train carrying the body of Sun Yat Sen, "Father of the Republic," and the principal mourners in the state funeral which is preceding reinterment in the new capital at Nanking left this evening. It was preceded by a pilot train and troop train and followed by an armored train, for the republic that Dr. Sun founded has not yet won to undisputed sway.

A solemn procession had carried the body down from the mountain side where it had reposed in a temple. Many thousands of spectators watched the mile long procession which was greeted by a salute of 101 guns on its arrival here.

United States Minister John Van A. MacMurray and 26 other diplomats will follow tomorrow on another special train to attend the ceremonies at Nanking, on June 1.

SLOOP YACHT MISCHIEF WAS SUNK IN OCEAN

BOSTON, May 26—(AP)—The hulk of the sloop-yacht Mischief, successful American defender of the America's cup in 1881, was sent to the bottom of the Atlantic, outside Boston harbor today with obsequies befitting a former champion of the seas. The sinking was the finale of a ceremony in which a fleet of pleasure craft from Massachusetts Bay yacht clubs participated.

A true warrior of Neptune's domain, the Mischief died hard. Two attempts by a party of coast guardsmen from the cutter Mojave to sink her with explosives were futile. Three shots from a three inch gun aboard the Mojave were then fired into her. With grace and majesty, she sank beneath the surface of a calm sea, her bow up, as a bugler of the U. S. Marines sounded taps.

IN SERIOUS CONDTION FROM BITE OF SNAKE

HARTFORD, May 26—(AP)—Sumner Johnson, 28, of North Adams, Mass., a student at the Hartford Theological seminary, was bitten by a copperhead snakew hile strolling in the vicinity of the Hartford reservoir, on Saturday afternoon. Johnson, who killed the snake after it had sunk its poisonous fangs into his right leg, just above the ankle, is in a serious condition at the Hartford hospital, where antivenin was injected to combat the effects of the poison.

After being bitten, Johnson pursued the reptile to the edge of the reservoir where after a brief battle he killed the snake by crushing its diamond shaped head. He brought the snake back to the seminary in order to identify it and obtain the proper serum. Physicians said Johnson, who is an athlete, has a fair chance of recovery.

The car was badly wrecked. Hyland lived two hours after the accident.

Settlement Of Seven Weeks Textile Strike

Management Agrees Not to Discriminate Against Members of Any Labor Organization.

ELIZABETHTON, Tenn., May 26—(AP)—Striking employes of the American Bemberg and Glanzstoff textile mills, meeting here late today, decided to return to work immediately.

The meeting, which was the outgrowth of dissatisfaction among a certain group of strikers who resented a statement by Dr. Arthur Mothwurf, president of the mills, that he was not willing to deal with the union, was addressed by W. F. Kelly, vice president of the United Textile Workers. He advised the workers to return to work without further delay.

Kelly told the textile workers that E. T. Willson, brought here yesterday as director of personnel for the companies, would in the future act as mediator between the companies and the employes.

In line with his suggestion the dissatisfied workers voted to begin registration for their old jobs tomorrow morning. All will be taken back except a few "undesirables" under an edict laid down yesterday by Dr. Mothwurf.

Officials of the Textile Workers' union today made public a copy of the agreement with the two local corporations, was ratified by the strikers yesterday.

It read in part:

"The management of the Bemberg and Glanzstoff corporations invite employes to return to work on the following basis:

"All former employes shall register immediately. If an employe is not reinstated definite reasons will be given such an employes and if the employe feels he is being discriminated against, he may refer his case to an impartial person for a hearing. The impartial person shall be E. T. Willson, new personnel director.

"The management will not discriminate against any employe because of membership in an organization nor because of legitimate and lawful activities in such organization as long as they are carried on outside of the plant. * * *".

CROOK SHOT HIS WAY OUT OF POLICE TRAP

CHICAGO, May 26—(AP)—"Baby Face" Willie Doody, postal robber, object of one of the most elaborate searches in the history of the local department, shot his way out of the second police trap in three weeks early today, seriously wounding Chief of Police Charles Levy of Berwyn, Chicago suburb.

Doddy, who only three weeks ago shot and wounded Postal Inspector Evan L. Jackson in a Northside hotel, was standing beside a stolen automobile in Berwyn with Eddie Majlewski, a companion, when Levy with another officer approached the pair. Before any words had been exchanged, Doody began shooting and the officers returned the fire. Doody fled up an alley and escaped, but Majlewski was seized and taken to the Berwyn jail.

A government reward has been on Doody's head since the Jackson shooting and Mayor Byron C. Thorpe, of Berwyn, announced the city council of the suburb would post an additional sum.

Though small physically—standing only 5 feet 3 inches and weighing but 120 pounds—Doody is known as a desperate thug and a "cop hater."

Majlewski told officers that his companion had vowed:

"I'll take a dozen cops with me before they'll get me."

Majlewski stated that he and Doody were on their way to the Hawthorne dog racing track and police think they had planned a robbery there.

PLANE COVERED 3,105 MILES IN 26 1-2 HOURS

ETAMPES, France, May 26.—(AP)—Major Weiss and Girier of the French military air force today claimed establishment of a new world airplane speed record over a distance of 5,000 kilometers (3,105 miles). They covered this distance in twenty six and a half hours, with an average speed of about 116.7 miles an hour.

They flew over a triangular course of about 100 miles between Etampes, Chartres and Orleans. During the night the ground was obscured by haze and they flew much of the time by compass.

The previous record was held by the Italians Ferrarin and Del Prete, established during their flight last June which also set up the record distance inclosed circuit of 4760.6 miles. The average speed of the Italians was 86 miles an hour, so that the Frenchmen clipped 11 hours from the Italian time.

MRS. GENE TUNNEY WILL BE WELL IN A FEW WEEKS

BRIONI, Italy, May 26—(AP)—Mrs. Gene Tunney will be as well and sound as ever within a few weeks her husband was assured today by the surgeon who had performed an emergency opeartion for an abcessed appendix four weeks ago.

A rise in temperature a few days ago had so alarmed the former heavyweight champion boxer, who was married only last October, that he hurriedly called upon Professor Arthur Wolf Meyer in Berlin. The professor reached the island today and after his examination of the patient, declared that the increase in temperature was normal in such cases and that there was nothing to become unduly excited about.

Mr. Hynes served as a member of the city and state democratic committees here several years ago and also held office as water commissioner, fire commissioner, registrar of voters and as a deputy sheriff of New Haven county.

He organized the Waterbury One Price Clothing company in 1892 and later became head of one of the leading insurance and real estate concerns here. Mr. Hynes was a member of the Church of the Immaculate Conception in this city for over 50 years and was charter member of many of the leading societies and lodges here. He was 73 years of age.

Drastic Reduction In Armaments Sought

Twenty-five Active or Retired Military and Naval Officers Appeal to the People of Europe.

BERLIN, May 26—(AP)—Twenty five active or retired military and naval officers of high rank from Germany, France, Great Britain, Poland, Finland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland tomorrow will publish in leading European newspapers an "appeal to the people of Europe" for immediate and general drastic reduction in armaments.

Among the signers are Brigadier-General Frank P. Crozier and Vice-Admirals Sidney Robert Drury-Lowe and Mark Kerr of Great Britain; General Sauret of France; General Berthold von Deimling, Lieutenant General O. Vin Saint Ange, and Major General Von Bresler of Germany; and General Eugene Kotkowski of Poland.

The appeal declared "a new European war will to a marked degree be characterized by attacks from the air against vital parts o fenemy countries with the intention of putting their military resources out of action and destroying the civilian population." The resulting struggle for air supremacy, it is contended, will not give even successful powers any guarantee of security for the homeland against attacks from the air.

Europe is said to be faced with the alternatives of either increased armaments based chiefly on air forces with no guarantee of peace or protection, or a policy which tries with all possible means to prevent war. To such a policy immediate and general drastic reduction of armaments is indispensable.

IMPROVEMENT IN CONDITION OF COMMANDER BOOTH

NEW YORK, May 26.—(AP)—A slight improvement was reported today in the brain concussion suffered in an automobile accident by Commander Evangeline Booth, of the Salvation Army, but her physician, Dr Walter Clark Tilden, said there were new evidences of body contusions and the patient was more uncomfortable.

Although the commander was injured Friday, the fact was not made public until yesterday. She was thrown against the side and top of her automobile when her chauffeur swerved into a depression in the road to avoid striking a woman pedestrian on one side and an automobile on the other.

NEWARK, N. J., May 26.—(AP) — Dwight W. Morrow, United States ambassador to Mexico, arrived from Mexico City this afternoon aboard his private car attached to the Pennsylvania railroad train, "Spirit of St. Louis."

The ambassador was met at the station by Mrs. Morrow and their daughter, Miss Constance.

He posed for about ten minutes for news photographers, but declined to say anything. After the photographers had finished he entered his automobile with Mrs. Morrow and Miss Constance and drove to his home at Englewood.

THROWN THROUGH THE WINDSHIELD OF AUTO

BRISTOL, Conn., May 26.—(AP) — Vincent Hogan, of Waterbury, was taken to the Bristol hospital late today with a possible fractured skull and lacerations of the head and arms, when he was thrown through the windshield of the machine of Frank E. Lewis, 161 Birch street, Waterbury, in an accident. Lewis failed to see a machine owned by Albert T. Fiorillo, of this city parked by the road, and crashed into it. He received a shaking up. Both drivers were ordered to appear before the prosecuting attorney tomorrow.

GERMANS HAVE REJECTED THE ALLIED RESERVATIONS

Dr. Schacht Stands Pat in All His Proposals—The Creditors Will Have Their Final Say Today—It is Believed They Have Made Up Their Minds to Stick to Their Reservations—Definite Announcement of Failure of the Reparations Conference is Expected.

PARIS, May 26.—(AP)—Definite announcement that the reparations conference has failed to reach an agreement is looked for by many in touch with the experts following a brief Sunday morning session at which Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, spokesman for the Germans laid his cards on the table to Owen D. Young, American chairman of the conference.

Dr. Schacht, it is understood, stood pat on his proposals. The creditors will have their final say Monday and they also are believed to have made up their minds to stick by their guns.

The German spokesman, is credited in brief, with rejecting the allied reservations to his reservations and the allies will not accept the German reservations. Therefore, conference observers see no hope for that "complete and final settlement" which the experts had so confidently expected to reach at the beginning of their work weeks ago.

Dr. Schacht today told Mr. Young exactly where the Germans stood and Mr. Young passed it on to the creditors at the brief meeting. When the creditors give their answer to Mr. Young Monday, the American chairman will determine whether or not there is a chance for compromise.

Atchley, died Friday morning after he had been beaten by the girl Thursday night. Miss Cofer returned to her home and resumed work in her father's strawberry patch. Atchley was taken to his home, apparently recovered from the beating, Friday morning, however, he died and the girl was taken in custody.

KILLED BY PLUNGE FROM AN EIGHTH FLOOR WINDOW

BALTIMORE, Md., May 26.—(AP)—Leigh Militz Morrow, 21, Yale student, son of Dwight W. Morrow, of Englewood, N. J., and a nephew of Dr. Thomas A. Marlow, of Helena, Montana, banker and former member of the finance committee of the republican national committee, was killed instantly this morning in a plunge from an eighth floor window of the Belvedere hotel to the street.

The plunge followed a party with Robert P. Phillips, of Paducah, Ky., another Yale student, and James Mayfield of Baltimore, police and Coroner Otto M. Reinhardt said after giving a verdict of accidental death. Phillips and Mayfield were held without bond on a technical charge of violating the Volstead act.

Phillips told police he, Marlow and Mayfield had spent several hours in the hotel drinking, and that early this morning all three retired. A few minutes later, he said, Marlow arose from bed and clad only in his underclothes walked to the window and plunged through it.

Marlow's father, on his way to Helena from the east, left the train west of Chicago and chartered an airplane for the trip to Chicago where he plans to take another plane for Baltimore, police were informed. Mrs. Marlow was called here from Philadelphia where she was visiting.

CRYING OF BABY CAUSE OF FELONIOUS ASSAULT

NEW YORK, May 26—(AP)—One man was shot, another stabbed and a husband and wife were charged with felonious assault today—all because of a baby crying in the wee small hours of the morning.

FRANCE SATISFIED WITH CONGRESSIONAL PROPOSAL

PARIS, May 26.—(AP)—The proposed congressional postponement by America of payment for war stocks from the French government is regarded momentarily in semi-official circles as a reasonably satisfactory solution of that problem. In quarters where comment was to be had it was agreed that this and allied problems must await outcome of the reparations settlement before anything definite can be said.

If the experts now in Paris make a satisfactory settlement of the reparations question it is likely that Premier Poincare will ask parliament to ratify the Mellon-Berenger agreement. If the experts disagree it is still possible for the governments concerned to reach a settlement and in that case the debt accord still can be ratified.

A FORMER CONVICT MAY BECOME PRISON INSPECTOR

PHILADELPHIA, May 26 (AP)—The Record said today it had learned from an authoritative source that Henry C. Brock, socially prominent banker who served three years in the Eastern penitentiary, would be named a member of the board of prison inspectors. The appointment, it was stated, would be made by the board of prison inspectors on June 4 and, according to the paper, is certain to be accepted.

Selection of a former inmate of the prison as a member of the board of inspectors is without local precedent.

Brock in 1923, was charged with having killed three persons, two women and a boy, with an automobile. It was believed generally that a woman was driving the car at the time of the accident but Brock refused to divulge the name of his companion. He was found guilty and was sentenced to 8 to 16 years.

He was characterized as a model prisoner from the beginning of his term. His interest in the welfare of the other prisoners changed their viewpoint within a fortnight and they sought his friendship and accepted his advice.

Brock saw that hundreds of men were wasting their lives away in idleness and brooding over their misfortune. His wealth enabled him to purchase tools and machinery, he set an example of industry, and soon the "spirit of Brock" was noted throughout the prison.

Workshops inside the walls hummed with activity and there was keen competition to excel in workmanship. From the prison shops came beautiful objects of hammered brass, side models, toys and articles of wearing apparel, all of which found a ready market on the outside.

Even after he was pardoned in 1926 Brock did not forget those he had left behind and he has done much to make prison life a little brighter.

Once during his incarceration he was permitted to go outside. His mother died and on September 22, 1925, the prison gates opened for him for a brief period to attend her funeral. He was pardoned the following year.

UNFAVORABLE WEATHER FOR ATLANTIC FLIGHTS

OLD ORCHARD, Me., May 26—(AP)—Continued unfavorable weather conditions over the Atlantic today caused a further delay in the proposed hop-offs of two European planes, the Yellow Bird, French monoplane, and the Green Flash, with Rome as its destination, remained on the ground while the five fliers spent the day quietly.

Armano Lotti, sponsor of the Yellow Bird's projected hop to Paris, and Lewis A. Yancey, navigator of the American plane said they would not take off before Tuesday.

Yancey and the three French fliers, Lotti, Jean Assolant and Rene Lefevre, attended services at the little Catholic church which overlooks the ocean. The Rev. James Mullen, parish priest, asked the congregation to join in prayer for the safe guidance of the airmen.

The afternoon weather report from New York, according to the fliers, showed that if they started tomorrow morning, they probably would have good weather during their night over the ocean. The flight during the day would in all probability strike fair weather.

Yancey said his wife was coming to Old Orchard tonight, which was believed to indicate that improvements in weather conditions was expected in a few days.

EDWARD HARRINGTON KILLED WHEN CAR OVERTURNS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 26—With the upper section of his body crushed beneath the left side of his Essex coach, Edward Harrington, 54, of Perkins Corner met with instantaneous death shortly before 2 o'clock this afternoon when the machine overturned after striking a stone wall in front of the Alfred Oden home in Mansfield Center. In the opinion of several who knew the man to be a careful driver and who were at the scene of the accident Harrington is believed to have been stricken with a spell of weakness.

The only eye witness to the fatality was Frank Testelman of New Haven, who was on his way to Storrs with members of his family. Testelman said that Harrington had passed him about two miles down the road, both machines being headed from Willimantic towards Storrs. At a point some 200 feet from the scene of the accident Harrington's car began to zig-zag along the highway which is straight and level at this point. Testelman said that the car careened crazily and then shot to the right crashing into the stone wall in front of the Oden home with terrific force. The coach then leaped into the air throwing Harrington, who was alone in the car, half way out of the left front window. The machine landed on its left side crushing the head and chest of the man under its weight. As the car was righted later there was a large crimson splurge against the left door and several feet of the highway were wet with blood. The car, which was badly damaged had turned in a diagonal direction across the road and until it was hauled away later in the day by Leonard Bros. garage wrecker, traffic being detoured over a private road. Several heavy stones torn from the wall were thrown a number of feet onto the Oden lawn.

State Police Officers Henry Heinold and John Castagna of the Stafford Springs barracks were summoned to the scene, the former taking charge of the investigation. The remains were viewed by Medical Examiner Dr. William L. Higgins of Coventry who allowed their removal to the Avery and VanZandt undertaking parlors.

Edward Harrington was born in Worcester, Mass., 54 years ago. For some six years he was employed by the New Haven railroad in East Hartford coming to this city in 1918 to work for the railroad as a car inspector under Foreman Car Inspector John P. Carlson. He leaves his wife, the former Mrs. David Southwick Barrows and two minor adopted children.

With no other cars involved in the accident the state police investigation is to determine if possible the reason which caused the driver to lose control. Local railroad officials stated that they had not known the man to be suffering from any ailment which might have brought on a weak spell but asserted that the man was reputed to be a careful driver.

MEMORIAL OBSERVANCE IN BOROUGH AND PACHAUG

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, May 26—Memorial Sunday was observed before a large assemblage in both Jewett City and Pachaug. The exercises in Jewett City were held in Finn Opera house, with Dr. G. E. Jennings in charge. On the platform were seated the clergy of the town, and representatives of the American Red Cross, D. A. R., American Legion and auxiliary, Daughters of Veterans and the two Gold Star mothers, Mrs. LaFlamme and Mrs. Monsees. The Ashland Boys' band played America, Nearer My God to Thee and Star Spangled Banner. Prayer was offered by Rev. A. H. Clement, after which Commander George Rocheleau of the Legion Post carried the Post's beautiful American flag to its position on the platform. Rev. Harold Arnold of Pachaug was the speaker. He paid tribute to the men of all wars, saying that everyone was called upon in civil life to give the best to our land. It is everyone's duty to crush the evil and maintain that which is good. Heroism which comes through sacrifice never dies. We want peace, but we must maintain our honor. The truest citizen quietly and faithfully does his duty by state and fellowmen, reverences the laws and institutions of the land and the God we serve.

At Pachaug Cemetery

At four o'clock exercises took place in Pachaug cemetery under direction of C. Frank Morgan. Ashland Boys' band, playing a dirge, marched from the main entrance of the cemetery to the center, following the American flag carried by Irving Thornton and the local Legion flag carried by O. W. Chase. The color guards were Arthur Legasse and Charles Barber. They were followed by the firing squad, in charge of Adjutant Edgar Knox. The program was opened by the singing of America, accompanied by the band. Pachaug Grange chaplain, Rev. G. F. Goodenough offered prayer, after which the Grange sang Tenting Tonight. Pleyel's Hymn was played by the band. Mrs. G. H. Prior, state president of The King's Daughters was the speaker. Her motto was, There are some things that it is well to remember, and others better to forget. Therefore forget not to remember and remember to forget. Certain things she enjoined her hearers to remember. Remember our heroes. And she included not only war veterans, but mothers and fathers and many others whose names may not have figured in the world's annals.

Remember the old landmarks and the horrors of war, and let us have peace. Forget old issues and problems which are past. Forget racial prejudice. She spoke particularly of the boys' band and the help toward good citizenship which is promoted by its organization. Remember to be thankful for our heritage, was the final admonition. The Grange sang The Battle Hymn of the Republic, and a quartette from the band played At Evening. The Star Spangled Banner closed this part of the program.

Memorial wreaths were placed upon the cemetery gates by Commander George Rocheleau, John Davis, Alex Des Jardines and William Maynard. The firing squad, John Hanson, Armand Morancey, Peter Szewcyk, Walter Benoit Ledoux, Stanley Savage, Donald Jamin, Victor St. John and Fred Jarvis, fire three volleys. Taps were sounded by John Oropello, an echo being played by Raymond Zagranitsky.

The Difference With FOUR SPEEDS FORWARD

[Two High Speeds—Standard Gear Shift]

Some owners say they enjoy most the thrilling performance of two high speeds; the silent, smooth swiftness of fourth, and the rapid and quiet acceleration of third. Others speak of the infrequent gear shifting in traffic, and the ease with which the car handles. Many emphasize the economy and long life of an engine and other moving parts which run more slowly at all road speeds, lessening wear and strain on both motor and chassis. You are invited to enjoy a demonstration.

DANIELSON

MEMORIAL SERVICE AT ST. ALBAN'S LARGELY ATTENDED

(Special to The Bulletin).

DANIELSON, May 26—Delegations from the various patriotic organizations of Danielson, with many others assembled this evening at St. Alban's church for the annual Memorial Sunday services in honor of those who have served it in times of stress. It was a union service, with various church congregations of Danielson represented and with the clergy of the represented churches participating.

Rev. J. Rees Jones, the rector, preached the sermon as a part of the regular Sunday Even Song service. For his text he selected the words Put on the Whole Armor of God. In his welcome to the congregation, come to pay honor to the memory of the nation's heroes, he expressed his pleasure at the privilege of welcoming to St. Alban's members of the societies that exist for purely patriotic purposes, the ministers of other churches and all others devoting a part of their evening to remembering the sacrifices that those who have had a part in the nation's wars have done to cherish and preserve this nation.

This service, Rev. Mr. Jones said, stands for the recognition of God in the affairs of the nation, which takes care to see that spiritual values are paramount. Next Thursday—Memorial day—the nation will pay tribute in both a civic and spiritual way to the honored dead.

Discussing national and international strife in general, in the light of history, Rev. Mr. Jones said that spiritual and moral values usually lie submerged until time and history reveal the real values and benefits of such struggles. Each and every one of such conflicts has some fundamental reasons for having happened, and each of them produces some great benefit to humanity. In this nation the Revolutionary war—the war for independence—yielded as beneficient results freedom of government and just representation. The Civil war brought the abolition of slavery, the great gift of freedom to those held as chattels, and was more than a noble experiment in that it brought about a cementing great union into an indivisible whole great union into an indivisable whole. This civil conflict also produced a great personality—Abraham Lincoln—a great spiritual and a great historic figure, as well as the moral and spiritual values accruing to the nation as a whole from such extraordinary leadership.

The Spanish-American war represented the ideals of this nation in a rightful and lofty intervention in the international affairs of the western world to insure a necessary and adequate peace among all its peoples.

The great war—the World war represented the mighty efforts of many nations in the interest of preserving the civilization of what may be termed the western world, and the prevention of a reversion to ancient and discarded modes of government and life.

The liturgical part of the service was conducted by Rev. Edwin P. Wright, rector of St. Philip's church, Putnam, Rev. Harding W. Gaylord of the Westfield Congregational church, Rev. C. J. Armstrong of the Baptist church and Rev. Albert Abbott of the Methodist Episcopal church also had parts in the service.

Mrs. Ella Josephine Burlingame, 71, widow of James Burlingame, died at the ancestral home in the Mashentuck district of the town Saturday morning after a long illness. Mrs. Burlingame was born in this town February 19, 1858, a daughter of Erastus and Maria Potter Young, and had lived all of her life here. She is survived by four children, Fenner Burlingame of Providence, Raymond Burlingame of New Bedford, Mrs. B. Page and Mrs. Doris Walker of Woodcliff, N. J., a grandson, Corliss, and two brothers, Osmer A. Young and William J. Young of Danielson.

At the week end typewriting contest at Killingly high school between teams of seniors and juniors representing Putnam, Plainfield and Killingly high schools this being an annual event, the Killingly teams turned in the best grand average with a total of 47.47, winning by a scant margin over Plainfield high's team with a grand average of 47.39. Putnam high team were third. The team win gives Killingly a second year claim on a permanent trophy cup, the local high school's representatives having won the 1927 contest, while Plainfield won last year. The best individual averages in this year's contest were turned in by Miss Helen Dawley, Plainfield high, with a net average of 65 words per minute, and Miss Hortense Phillips, Plainfield high, with a total of 59 words per minute, this being in the senior team's contest. In the junior contest Miss Madeline Fournier, Killingly high, was first with an average of 53 words per minute, and Miss Ruth Wilson of Plainfield high was second with 51 words per minute.

Killingly's senior team was made up of the Misses Mary Kilgariff, Mildred Pierce, Pearl Pelkey and Christine Brennan. The junior Killingly team had as members Misses Madeline Fournier, Anna Conklin, Florence Ellisson and Florence Loiselle.

At Dayville, at South Killingly and at East Killingly this afternoon Memorial Sunday was devoted to paying tribute to the nation's war dead. Dayville and South Killingly had formal exercises in advance of Memorial day, in accord with the usual custom, and at East Killingly patriotic citiens journey to cemeteries in the outlying sections of the town and decorated graves of the soldier and sailor dead. East Killingly will hold regular Memorial services next Thursday morning.

The usual splendid tribute to those honored was paid at the services in South Killingly this afternoon, with members of patriotic societies of Danielson taking part.

At Dayville this afternoon there was a procession and services, the marchby Rev. Edward Egan, M. S., of Hartford cemetery, where the address was made ers first proceeding to St. Joseph's ford. Father Egan said in part: "We are gathered here to pay tribute to the memories of the heroes of all wars, and as we look out upon their graves and recall the sacrifices they made we are reminded of the great sacrifice that Christ Himself made for humanity and of the words Greater Love Hath No Man. They are silent now, but their The great lesson they have left us in graves are memorials to our country. victory is to carry on.

The pain and torture of their sacrifices is over, but in death they are perpetuating the love of country. Many of them ventured forth in the full flower of manhood, in the springtime of life, that the nation might live. Many of them left mothers who had reared them to that point in life where they would have been enabled to discharge their filial obligations to their parents, yet they went, knowing the hazards of the undertaking, yet preferring it, as did their parents, to the ignominy of remaining at home when the future of the nation was in peril. Today we perpetuate their memory and contemplate on the great lesson they have taught us."

Following the exercises at St. Joseph's cemetery the procession proceeded to the High street cemetery, where the graves of the nation's heroes were decorated.

Miss Elizabeth Reece of Hartford was a guest today of Miss Margaret Sullivan of Academy street.

Mr. and Mrs. John Whalen of Boston were guests today of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Kennedy. Mr. Whalen formerly was a resident of Danielson.

Despite unusually heavy traffic today, drivers were so careful that very few accidents were reported in this territory up to late afternoon.

Hundreds of people visited the cemeteries in Danielson and the surrounding territory today, many of them to decorate graves of deceased relatives and friends, others to inspect burial lots in advance of Memorial day.

Lieut. F. H. Hale of the Submarine Base at New London is to be the principal speaker when the annual meeting of the Windham County Y. M. C. A., is held at the Woodstock Congregational church on the evening of June 4.

The best the Windham County Y. M. C. A. team could do, though trying strenuously, in the state field and track meet at Middletown Saturday was third. The Hartford county team won again and the Middlesex county team was second.

The unfortunate circumstance that brought very heavy rain Friday night after several of the borough's streets had been freshly oiled, washed the covering of light gravel away, uncovering the oil, and leaving the streets in slippery condition over the week end.

Because of the fact that road builders took down some direction signs near the bridge over the Assawaga river a month or so ago, and did not replace them in position, long distance travelers have been left to guess which of the two trunk line highways they should take, near the junction of Main and Water streets if they wished to go to Hartford or Waterbury, or to turn back and ask an officer for direction.

Germain Meunier on Friday drove his car from Montreal to Danielson ing after a run of approximately 400 with hardly a stop for rest or refreshment, arriving here early in the evenmiles.

Road building operations on the Brooklyn-Pomfret road, via the Putnam farm, make it desirable for those who do not wish to encounter hard traveling to take some other route for the time being.

Navy men have noted with interest the number of expressions the civilians have borrowed from the seagoing world to decorate their language. There is one expression which seems especially to appeal to them. When a landlubber wishes to be emphatic and decisive he describes a situation as "shipshape."

PUTNAM

VOTERS TO DECIDE ON NEW ROAD TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 26—The adjourned town meeting to determine the direction in which the new state aid road over Putnam Heights will continue from Torrey's four corners, will be held in the town hall Monday evening. It is expected that the hall will be filled to its capacity when voters divided into two factions, one group fighting for the road to run north from the cross roads and the second attempting to sway the vote so as to bring the road south and have it intersect with the Putnam-Danielson highway near the Alvin Sweet farm. If the road should take a northern course it will intersect with the state highway near the county home on the Providence road which in the estimation of many is the most practical way.

At the meeting last Monday evening the opinion was so divided on three points, there then existing a possibility that the highway may go east intersecting with the state road near the Five Mile river in East Putnam), that the moderator was forced to call for an adjournment.

During the past week the eastern course which was favored has been eliminated. Two bridges of substantial size and over small creeks, and one spanning the Five Mile river would have to be re-built. The construction of these bridges would represent a considerable sum of money which is unavailable at the present time.

Rev. Ubald Laurion, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Laurion of North Grosvernordale, celebrated his first solemn high mass in St. Joseph's church in North Grosvernordale this morning. Long before the ceremony at which the young priest officiated, the beautiful remodeled church was filled to its capacity with numerous relatives and friends of the Grosvernordale boy.

Father Laurion as celebrant was assisted by Rev. W. Carroll Milhowland, dean of liturgy at St. Mary's seminary in Baltimore as assistant priest, Rev. O. M. Mandler, pastor of St. Mary's in Taftville was deacon and Rev. M. A. Debrola of Assumption college was sub-deacon.

Father Milhowland, a close friend and counselor of the new priest ordained Saturday, delivered a sermon in English, the subject of which was woven from the many trials and tribulations of a young boy preparing for life in the priesthood.

Rev. John C. Mathieu, pastor of St. Joseph's church delivered the sermon in French. Father Mathieu's command of the two languages has given him the reputation of being one of the best speakers in the two tongues in the diocese. "The Dignity, Power and Mission of a Priest" was text of his sermon.

Father Laurion is a native of North Grosvenordale. He received his elementary education in St. Joseph's in North Grosvernordale and graduated from Assumption Junior college in Worcester. He completed his college course at Assumption and began the study of theology at St. Mary's seminary in Baltimore four years ago. He was ordained Saturday morning at St. Joseph's cathedral in Hartford by Rt. Rev. John J. Nilan, bishop of Hartford.

The sale of the poppies for the aid of the disabled veterans of the World war as carried out Saturday in conjunction with a nation-wide movement, was highly patronized by the citizens of Putnam. Nearly every man, woman and child on the streets Saturday displayed the little red artificial flower. Soldiers in the khaki uniforms of the war days of '18, sally bedecked with the bouquet of poppies made the sales for one organization of veterans, while high school girls and auxiliary members made the sales for another organization.

Rev. Michael McCarthy of St. Thomas seminary in Hartford arrived in Pomfret last evening to begin his duties as pastor of Holy Trinity church there and of Sacred Heart church in West Thompson. Father McCarthy will act as pastor of these two parishes during the absence of Rev. George J. Donahue, who sailed Friday evening for France on a tour of 10 months.

Nearly $1,500 will be required to install a new fire alarm striker in the tower of St. Mary's church to sound an alarm of fire in the north end of the city, Superintendent of Fire Alarm Charles T. Thayer is at present investigating conditions in an effort to restore the present striker to service in connection with the new bell in St. Mary's. Because of the immense size of the new pealers it is feared that the present fire alarm tapper will be too small to be of service.

The funeral of Mrs. Daniel Sullivan was held Saturday morning at St. Mary's church at nine o'clock, Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor of St. Mary's officiated at a high mass of requiem. Burial was in the family lot in Grove street cemetery. Committal services were held at the grave and were officiated at by Father Bellerose.

A Danielson driver arrested by State Officer John Murphy of Danielson barracks Friday evening was arraigned before Judge M. H. Geissler in city court Saturday morning on charges of violation of rules of the road. The defendent entered a plea of guilty and received a fine of $2 and costs of court.

Mr. and Mrs. James R. Murphy of Florence, Miss Grace Murphy and Miss N. Alice Dalton of Leeds, Mass., spent Saturday and Sunday as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Buiger of Farrows street.

Miss Edith Goyette of School street was a week end visitor in Grafton, Mass.

TROUBLE LIES WITH DRIVERS.

In connection with the pleas for the elimination of railroad crossings, attention is called to the grave perils existing at such points. There is a disposition to lay much stress upon the part which the railroad plays and little upon the responsibility resting upon the individual for his own protection.

Invariably the first demand following a crossing accident is for the elimination of grade crossings. There are times when this is justified and there are times when it is clearly evident that the accident need not have happened had there been a display of due care on the part of the highway users.

Furthermore there are repeated instances where the construction of bridges over railroad tracks does not eliminate fatalities at such points because it does not reach the cause of many of the fatalities, that is, the carelessness of the motor vehicle drivers.

This was doubly illustrated last week when five young men were killed and two injured at Point of Pines, Mass., when a speeding auto crashed through the side of a bridge and dropped to the railroad track beneath, and when two persons were killed at Walpole, Mass., and two injured when an auto tried to make a dangerous curve at such speed that the car could not be controlled and it crashed through the rail of a bridge over the railroad tracks and dropped to the railroad tracks beneath.

The same trouble was evident in these two fatalities where bridges over railroad tracks were involved as is too often found at grade crossings—that unwillingness to conform to the conditions that would insure safety.

Removing the crossings at such points didn't create a safer highway for those drivers. It simply meant that they continued their policy of disregarding safety, and these are by no means the only instances which have gone to support the contention that while crossing elimination may be warranted in many instances there is an apparent opportunity for individual drivers to surround crossings with greater safety through self application of common sense safety methods and the display of proper respect for warnings and well defined evidences of danger.

OUGHT TO BE BANNED.

Following the loss of so many lives in the Cleveland clinic from poison gas it is noted, in one instance, that there is an effort to belittle the statement that was made to the effect that there was enough poison gas let loose in that fire and explosion to kill millions of people. It is pointed out that while there may have been enough to accomplish such a thing under the right circumstances, it is apparent that no such widespread killing resulted. Evidently the impression that such criticism was intended to create, was that as long as it didn't do it under those conditions the people should be relieved of the fear of gas attacks in case of war.

Enough lives were taken at Cleveland to demonstrate the undesirability of poison gas in warfare, even though the deadly gas created at the clinic would probably not be the type that would be employed by an enemy in making an aerial attack upon a city. It shows not only how easy it would be to wipe out a large part of noncombatant civilian life by a properly directed gas attack, but what suffering would be occasioned thereby and the effect that continues among those attacked and suffering from gas when not killed outright.

Getting all nations to agree to abandon the use of poison gas in warfare may have its difficulties, quite the same as obtaining full respect for such an agreement in case it was obtained and yet it must be apparent from the effects of poison gas that it is not a weapon that ought to bear the sanction of the civilized nations of the world.

Because it was unintentionally loosed at the Cleveland clinic doesn't mean that that hospital and others are going to tolerate the conditions which will leave the way open for it to get in its deadly effect in the future. It has been shown that it should be guarded against in every way possible. It is impossible to note the record of poison gas in warfare, to note the many cases of those who were gassed and are still suffering from it and to note the limits to which it can be used without believing that the interests of humanity require that it be banned.

AN INFANT KILLER.

More than the people of Kentucky are interested in the outcome of the case of the six and a half year old youngster, who has been tried and convicted of shooting his boy companion following a squabble and sentenced to a reformatory until he is 21.

It was apparently one of those cases where so many youngsters are inclined to say, "I'll kill you," and without knowing the real meaning of it, but knowing how to accomplish it, took his father's gun and made good the threat. It must have impressed the jury and the judge, as well, that there were conditions surrounding that young life which ought not to be allowed to continue as they were inclined.

Whether it is a case where the home surroundings are not what they should be, or whether it is regarded as a wrongly inclined youngster, there is bound to be a question as to the advisability of placing a child of that age along with the many others, with whom he is bound to come in contact, at a reformatory. That he would easily become the hero of such an institution and go from bad to worse can be appreciated. Without doubt he needs a different training than is intended for older persons, but it is equally evident that he needs training. He has started in at an age that means plenty of trouble ahead unless he can be taught the difference between right and wrong and given the benefit of good influences.

If his act indicates that the home is not the place where he can expect to get such guidance, it seems equally clear that unless he can be kept among children of his own age, under some such system as the cottage plan, at the reformatory then that is not the proper place for him instead of wrecking his life the desire must be to correct it, and the difference in ages at a reformatory, especially when those of all ages are allowed to mingle, admits of the possibility of the youngster falling into the wrong kind of playmates.

What Kentucky will do with the appeal which has been taken in this case remains to be seen, but there cannot fail to be a presentation of the situation in such a manner as to actually strive for a reformation in the boy instead of making a base case worse.

SENATE CONSISTENCY?

It is frequently the case that when it comes to getting strict observance of rules that it is difficult to determine the violation and because of it the innocent as well as the guilty are made to suffer.

That seems to be the case only in part in connection with the violation of the senate rules concerning secrecy. The senate in secret session for the purpose of acting on appointments expected that the roll call would not be revealed. It was obtained and published by one press association and because of this violation of trust the guilty press association's representative has been excluded from the floor of the senate. That would seem to be one method of punishment that might be expected, but the surprising part in connection with it is that the Associated Press representative has also been included in the ban.

It was a case where the Associated Press gave full respect to the senate rules, where the violator was fully known and where there was opportunity of applying punishment to the guilty, and yet the respector of the rules as well as the violator is punished. Under the circumstances, it is not surprising that the Associated Press should make protest to the vice president relative to his ruling in barring all press representatives from the senate floor.

What good the protest will do is problematical, but it is most certainly justified. As it stands, the one who displays contempt for senate rules gets just as much credit as the one who respects them. Perhaps that is what the senate calls consistency, but it isn't so rated elsewhere.

ROOSEVELT TO PORTO RICO.

Our island possessions are not backward in making their demands known. They are eager for advantages and they are not balked by the fact that they have been denied their appeals in the past, and they do not hesitate because some of the advantages which they seek are not already possessed by residents of the national capital.

Perhaps Porto Rico will see an added advantage accruing from the fact that Theodore Roosevelt has been given the appointment as governor of the island. That in itself doesn't give any assurance that Porto Rico is going to get any different treatment in the future than it has been getting in the past, for it is believed that there has been no disposition on the part of this country to be negligent relative to Porto Rico. Rather does it provide an opportunity for Mr. Roosevelt to demonstrate his ability in this office and in this island territory where there is so much needed in the way of advancement and where so much has been asked.

One of Porto Rico's great needs is to make the most of its opportunities, to move along with the changing conditions, to get the full benefit of American citizenship and to go the limit in developing its own problems. The honor of having sent there as governor the son of one of the great Americans, of whom they are well informed, cannot be underestimated. That he will make the most of the chance that lies before him to help Porto Rico is to be expected, while he has reason to anticipate a cooperation on the part of the Porto Ricans that will be equally advantageous for all concerned. Porto Rico is justified in seeking all that it is entitled to, but in doing so it cannot overlook that equally valuable assistance that comes from self help.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

You recall that Memorial day is one of the times when they say it with flowers.

Someone has called attention to the fact that Senator Brookhart's middle name is Wildman. That's something he'll never be able to outlive.

The man on the corner says: The revaluation plan hasn't succeeded in dispersing that formidable list of extras with the estimates.

Speaking of waste, it will not be possible to overlook the 4,000 lives lost in the Mexican revolution and the money loss of $50,000,000.

It is reported that the United States owns 9,000 islands outside of North American territorial waters. Why not select one each year and spend your vacation there until the list has been exhausted?

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Every bedroom should have cross-ventilation.

Careful planning cuts down time in preparation of meals.

To save time in making custards, scald the milk before adding it to the egg.

Never turn electricity on or off when you are standing on a wet or even on a damp floor.

Rhubarb is best canned in syrup without water. Leave the skin on for the natural rich color.

Parsley is much easier to cut if it is washed in hot instead of cold water.

A little burnt sugar added to flour used in making gravy to serve with roast beef or lamb adds to the flavor of the gravy.

The chamois in which silver is stored away should be frequently washed if the silver is to be kept bright.

Disconnect your electric iron as soon as you have finished with it, thus preventing fires and the burning out of the iron.

If you wish to serve your guests individual cakes, bake your cake in a loaf. When cool cut it in squares and frost them on four sides and decorate the tops with walnuts.

When silver or nickel covers on salt shakers become corroded and badly discolored, just give them two coats of enamel.

Dissolve soap chips in warm water or beat them into the water with an egg-beater to get a good soapsuds.

Cold meats may be attractively served by removing all gristle, bones and skin and excess fat and then pouring over the meat any desired hot sauce.

Fish which contains few bones may be converted into filets by dividing the flesh from the backbone in long, wide strips and then removing any smaller bones. Soles supply the best filets.

TASTY SAUCES

In making chicken a la king or other dishes that demand a tasty sauce, it is a good idea to finish the sauce, thoroughly seasoned, long enough before serving to let it steam through for a while. It has a much richer flavor than when served immediately.

STICKING CAKE

A cake that sticks to the tin may be loosened by placing a tin over a bowl of boiling water or turning the cake upside down on the table and placing a rag dipped in hot water over the bottom of the pan.

CLEAN NEW HOME

Clean the new home or apartment before moving into it. Then when your furniture is placed it need not all be moved again in a day or so in order to clean in back of it. Besides, one has a much more sanitary feeling when everything is as it should be before moving in.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Cleanliness is important for avoiding infections, and bathing is important for cleanliness.

To remove stains from your fingers, make a solution of a teaspoon of lemon juice in a cup of warm water and rub this over them.

To help children to have good appetites, serve them foods without strong flavors, give them sweets only in small quantities for dessert and permit no lunching between meals.

You should use nightly a good nourishing cream on the hands and a bit of cuticle cream or oil around the nails. These will keep the skin and cuticle soft—and smooth—and will greatly add to the well-groomed appearance of the hands.

CARE OF CHILDREN

1—Give your child the love that comes from an understanding heart; be a good friend, a fellow adventurer in life.

2—Give your child a home that offers a ready welcome to his friends; make your home the center of his social being.

3—Give your child a place in the home to call his "own," a corner, a room, an attic, a part of the basement, if it is clean, ventilated, warm and dry.

4—Give your child chores to do and see that he does them because he wants to do them; enlist his active co-operative interest in the management of the home.

5—Give your child equipment with which to play—toys, pets, tools and materials with which to make things, instruments to play, goods to sew, food to cook.

6—Give your child the opportunity to use his own judgment; encourage initiative; recognize and praise his feebleat attempts; don't harp forever on his shortcomings; respect the personality of your child.

7—Give your child a place to read; get good books from your public library and have wholesome magazines available.

8—Give your child a strong body; see that he has thorough physical examinations; watch teeth, eyes, hearing, and correct faults immediately.

9—Give your child a healthy mental and emotional life; educate him to his fullest capacity but not beyond; correct bad habits early; consult habit clinics.

ATTRACTIVE DRINK

A pretty drink to serve is called ribbon freeze. Put cracked ice in slender glasses and pour very carefully, so they won't mix, the following juices, about a teaspoon of each: Orange, loganberry, lime, raspberry, grapefruit, grape and top each glass with a cherry.

FUR

When renovating fur at home and finding it must be cut, place it fur side down and cut the skin with a safety razor blade. This will not cut the fur as will shears. A line may be drawn on the skin which may be followed by the razor blade.

DINGY RUGS

Rugs and carpets often can have their patterns brought up clearly if sponged thoroughly with ammonia water and rubbed dry with clean cloths.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Jenny uses the new idea of having the skirt of a black satin frock circular in back, with much flare, and the front tiered, with charming gracefulness.

A new shade of pink is called in snappy Paris fashion "widow rose." It is a pink that has more than a dash of mauve in it, making it almost as lavender as pink.

The newest hosiery shade is Antibes tan, which is the correct tone to wear with all the off-whites. It also is good for evening with colorful shoes matching milady's gown.

Luxurious evening bags are of silk in delicate shades, embroidered in gold thread, and either coral beads or blue ones resembling turquoise. The bags are of the pouch variety.

The newest scarf is the one of slender dimensions that ties in a bow with long ends, under the chin, in a demure fashion. One completing a gray silk jersey sports frock has four tones of pink in it.

Cap sleeves appear on youthful party frocks. Elbow sleeves are good for sports. The new daytime length is seven-eighths, ending in a dare midway up the waist. Fancy blouse sleeves come clear to the wrist.

A girdle made of three separate belts of grosgrain ribbon matching a flat crepe frock is very effective. The belts have identical buckles and are joined only at the sides where narrow bits of handwork form the union.

Newest scarfs are not the triangle nor yet the square, but the very long shape, ranging from six to ten inches wide. They wind around the neck and tie in a double bowknot under the chin, leaving long ends hanging.

Sport coats for summer wear, which are extraordinarily light, are made of alpaca wool, and are as becoming as they are practical. These coats follow the model of a coat that had a well merited success during the winter.

A little Chanel red frock has narrow hand-hemmed ruffles of organdy across the edges of red bowknots that trim the front like jabots, tie the tops of both cuffs and give a feminine touch to the back of the plain neckline.

SPORT LINGERIE

Sweaters of sheer lisle or balbriggan in delicate pastel shades have become so popular for sport wear that now one shop is showing lingerie to match for sport occasions. This lingerie consists of little shirts cut very low in back, and close-fitting shorts of pastel balbriggan.

DOTTED SWISS, PLAID FLANNEL

The young girl who is beginning to lengthen out will be becomingly gowned in a dress that has a top of dotted swiss, with a small, round collar and short sleeves, and a pleated skirt of plaid flannel, which buttons on to the waist.

THE BROWN SUIT

The brown suit as a smart and satisfactory choice this season, for with it it is possible to wear many changes of blouse. The white sweater is always a safe choice, while yellow crepe de chine is also much worn.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Clothes should be damper for an ironing machine than for ironing by hand.

Lukewarm water, mild soap, quick handling and drying are recommended to prevent dyes in garments from running.

Before washing a sweater for an infant or child, measure the length, width, arm size and sleeve length. After washing, stretch to its original size and pin it in place on a padded table.

Curtains or laces may be easily tinted ecru by rinsing in tea water. Use one tablespoon of tea for each pint (two cups) of boiling water. Test with a small piece of goods until the desired shade is obtained. Watch the length of time that the goods remain in the tea solution. For a deep shade the goods, obviously, must be left in longer than when a light shade is wanted. The color will not be as deep after drying as it is when wet.

LAUNDERING WOOLENS

When washing woolens there are a few rules to be observed if the laundering is to be successful.

The water should be about the temperature of the hand, which is 98 F., and all the rinsing water sohuld be of the same temperature.

Never use soap in cake form. Make a solution, using a good grade white soap or soap flakes, and do not boil this, as it will darken the solution so it will not be fit to use on light-colored woolens.

Avoid alkalis. The only ones safe to use are ammonia (just a few drops) or borax (one or two tablespoons).

Never rub, just squeeze and press in the soapsuds. It is better to use the wringer for heavy woolens than twisting the article with the hands in the wringing process.

MARKING SIZES

Since practically every household has large and small sized sheets, large and small towels, pillow slips and other pieces of linen, much time and trouble is saved if the linen is classified. Mark large sizes with a cross in blue, small in red, or any other way you wish. Place the marking at the outer edge so the linen can be sorted without opening it.

PEASANT POTTERY

Quaint breakfast or lunch china has tiny peasant figures upon the sides. Besides the usual pieces, it is possible to purchase odd little mules, with two packs upon their backs, one for salt and one for pepper.

COPIES OF OLD PEWTER

Copies of old English pewter ashtrays are simple and in good taste, since they depend for their charm upon beauty of line and a certain satin smoothness that good pewter has.

ASHES OF ROSE

A lovely coverlet for a chaise-longue, made of ashes of rose taffeta, is heavily quilted in an intricate design. A narrow oblong pillow accompanies the robe. Both are finished with a deep frill of the silk.

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Jacksonville, Fla., has four policewomen on its force.

The average American farm woman works 11½ hours a day in winter and 13½ hours in summer.

The Menominee Indians of Green Bay, Wis., are now ruled by a 14-year-old girl, Princess Kenoke. She is the first of her sex to head the tribe.

The combined membership of the Y. W. C. A. in Japan is approximately 2400. There are 22 Japanese secretaries and 14 foreign representatives.

Mrs. Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney is now in Europe where she will attend the unveiling of her statue to Christopher Columbus, which will be dedicated April 21 at Palos, Spain.

Nagasaki, Japan, is the only place in the world where the boats are coaled by women, who pass the buckets of coal up by hand in a human chain, very swiftly and cheerfully.

FOR VARNISHED FLOORS

Do not use hot water on varnished floors. Use a cloth wrung out in lukewarm water. Each section should be rubbed with a dry cloth as it is washed.

SOFTENING PAD

It is an excellent idea to cut blotting paper to fit pantry shelves where dishes and glass are kept to slip under the fancy shelf paper one uses. It acts as a silencer.

RECIPES

Strawberry Souffle: Beat the whites of six eggs very stiff and mix with them one and one-fourth cups of cooked and sweetened strawberries. Turn into a well-buttered baking dish, place the dish in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees) until firm. Serve with cream slightly beaten to which has been added a little strawberry juice.

Poinsettia Salad: Peel and thoroughly chill as many tomatoes as will be needed, and when ready to serve, cut into eighths, not quite severing the sections at the bottom, and spread apart like the petals of a flower. Place each on a lettuce leaf, dust lightly with salt and pepper, fill center with mayonnaise, then cover mayonnaise with green peas that have been thoroughly mingled with French dressing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Seeks Information About City Charter

Mr. Editor: In the advertisement for the city election in The Bulletin this morning, I noticed an item calling for a vote by ballot for accepting or rejecting the new city charter. May I ask for information regarding this charter? Where can a copy of it be obtained? Are you going to publish it? How can any one vote for or against it intelligently if they do not know what it calls for? A new charter should interest every grown person in Norwich, especially the tax payers. My family is interested and I hope a great many others are too but at this writing we know so little about it we are wondering how we ought to vote. Thanks for any information you may obtain for

AN INTERESTED TAXPAYER.

Norwich, May 26, 1929.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 26—No longer does Senator Royal S. Copeland, democrat, of New York, stride the senate floor and give voice in senate as monarch of all he surveys on matters medical.

The republican side now has a medicine man of its own. He is Senator Henry Drury Hatfield of West Virginia, and his very notable career in medicine, or rather surgery, takes up nearly half a page of the personal who's who section of the new Congressional Directory.

That is a few lines more than Dr. Copeland devotes to the medical part of his official biography.

Experts Not Needed

Since there has been so far in the special session of congress no medical or surgical subject up for senate attention, opportunity to observe these eminent medico-politicians, or political-medicos, in action on professional topics still is lacking.

When the question of ventilating the senate chamber as an inducement toward senatorial longevity or the proposed new tariff on surgical instruments comes up, however, there will be a chance for comparison, no doubt. Both matters will be talked of by the senate, sooner or later.

Senator Hatfield's medical and surgical background is truly remarkable. It includes service overseas during the war as chief of the surgical division at a base hospital.

He now is a lieutenant colonel in the army medical reserve. Dr. Copeland has no military-medical rank to include in his biographical summary.

The two senatorial medicos have this in common: Both got their medical education outside the states they now represent. Copeland a native of Michigan, started off with a medical degree from Michigan university, in which he later was a professor. His translation to New York occurred only when he was called as dean of Flower hospital medical college in that state in 1908.

His political career began when he was "commandeered" by the mayor of New York city as health commissioner during the World war.

Hatfield started with an M. D. from the University of Louisville, but soon added a New York university degree, five postgraduate courses at the New York polyclinic, a term at the New York post-graduate medical school and a Cornell medical degree.

His political experience began as Mingo county health commissioner in his native state back in 1895 and except for his service in the army overseas he was connected with the medical department of the Norfolk and Western railway from 1895 up to this year, when he entered the senate.

Biographical Note

It is just another of those oddities of the Congressional Director that, while Hatfield requires some 30 lines or more of printed matter to tell what he believes would be interesting of his pre-senate career, the senior senator from West Virginia, Guy Despard Goff, needs less than two lines.

Yet Goff, it will be recalled, was a candidate for the republican presidential nomination a year ago. All he states of himself is that he is a republican, a lawyer, married and was elected to the senate of the sixty-ninth congress.

YOUR HEALTH

Screen Your House—the Cost Is Small and Dividends Are Large

By J. W. Alsobrook, M. D., Plant City, Fla.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

House screening is one of the most important steps in the fight against disease that the layman can contribute. There are few or no areas in the United States where screens are not needed for flies or mosquitoes or both at some season of the year. The country and suburban communities need screens most, and right here let me state that "there is no such thing as an unscreenable house." Every land owner and house owner should screen the houses his tenants live in: the cost is small and the dividends are large.

A sick human is a liability to any community and illness prevented is a great deal cheaper and wiser than illness cured.

The United States public health service, your state board of health, your county health board (and every county in every state should have an efficient, well paid county health board), your city health department—all are striving to eradicate breeding places for flies and mosquitoes, and ultimately to exterminate the pests, but that day is far distant. This utopia will not be reached during your life time, or your children's or grand children's. Your contribution, aside from your taxes, is to screen, get your neighbor to screen, screen your tenant houses, your dog house, your fowl house, your cow barn, your horse stable, your garbage can, not only for your own protection but the comfort of all.

The more common diseases transmitted and broadcast by flies and mosquitoes are typhoid fever, dysentery, malaria, yellow fever. These are all reportable diseases, but our health boards cannot get on the job until after the disease is diagnosed and reported by some reputable and competent physician. Some of our pseudo, quasi or would-be doctors deny even the existence of such diseases, claiming and evidently convincing a large per cent of our population that all disease comes from some malformation or sub-laxation of the spinal column. The real reason for this denial is a lack of knowledge of bacteriology and pathology. Give us more preliminary education in those who practice the healing art and we will do more to prevent disease and educate the public to the part they may pay in making life more livable, profitable and of longer span.

Screening is no small item in the pleasure of life. It excludes the pests that annoy us while working, sleeping or when on pleasure bent. More profitable, it prevents loss of time from illness and lengthens life's span by preventing worries, contamination of food, and disease.

CHILD TRAINING

Mother's Method.

Pauline Herr Thomas.

We lived in the country on a large farm, Father and Mother, five girls and one boy. By the old-fashioned means of transportation, it was a long way to the city. There were, of course, occasions when Father and Mother found it necessary to go to the city together and these trips were all day affairs.

My brother, Tom, had a wonderful orgy on these occasions. He was free to tease his sisters to his complete satisfaction and our unmitigated discomfort. Sometimes he terrified us all with latest make-up as an Indian on the war path—we were very young—at other times he tried out on his helpless victims the latest of his terrorizing weapons of warfare. We actually dreaded these occasional visits to the city. When Father and Mother returned, we were loud in our protests and harrowing descriptions.

Father who was the disciplinarian in the home paid little attention to these complaints. I dare say, they seemed very childish to him. I remember often hearing him say, "Oh, never mind, he will out grow it." But Mother evidently felt that something really should be done; she must have convinced Father, for he took steps, first of remonstrance and then of punishment, but to little purpose.

Meanwhile Tom was growing up. He was not improving as Father had hoped. Indeed things became steadily worse. He now regarded us as an enemy camp, as it were; he became resentful and actually revengeful. Likewise, we became fearful of his revenge if we "told." We complained no more.

This state of affairs had been reached when during one of these dreaded absences on the part of our parents Tom imprisoned us all in a closet. We were there entirely too long for health and indeed safety, for it was a small closet. Let it here be said for Tom, however, that he did not, I feel sure, realize the element of danger. The culprit was standing guard while we screamed and cried inside the door, when Mother walked in most unexpectedly. Caught in the act, Tom quickly opened the door and we all tumbled out.

It was altogether disgraceful. We knew Mother thought so, and I feel sure Tom knew it, too.

I shall never forget Mother as she stood there a moment and looked at us, then turned slowly and looked at Tom. Her words seemed to come straight from her heart as she fixed her steady blue eyes on him and said, "Tom, my dear, I cannot believe it of you. Why, you are a man now, you know."

It must have been a difficult moment for that would-be young man. He slid one hand and then the other into his pockets, shifted from one foot to the other uncomfortably, and then shamefacedly turned and slipped away.

As for us, we were all very much disappointed, for we hoped to see him once more properly punished.

But Mother had chosen a better way. His manhood had been challenged by the one whom he most desired to consider him a man, and in the presence of those by whom he most dreaded to be thought a boy.

Of course, it worked. Never again had we a moment's discomfort when Father and Mother went to the city.

Stories That Recall Others

For a Pie

Tommy, not quite three, is fond of pie, one day his mother remarked that she just didn't know what to have for dinner.

"I know," said Tommy, "have a pie."

"Well, I don't believe I have anything to make pie with," answered mother.

"Oh, yes, mother, you have a receipt," was the response.

Startling Enough

Wee Doris, age five, has a "calory-counting mother," who quite often "slims," and has not yet attained her goal of a "perfect 36." Doris has heard much talk about foods that make one fat.

One night mashed potatoes were served at dinner. Doris pushed her plate back and said: "I don't believe I want any potatoes."

"Why, what's the matter Doris?" asked her father. "Better eat your potatoes like a good girl; they will help you to grow up big and strong."

"That's just it," retorted this modern miss. "I don't ever want to get to be as fat as mother."

Mother is counting calories in earnest!

When he was presented in justice court in Montville Saturday on a charge of assault, John Coman, 30, of Gales Ferry, was held in default of $10,000 bonds pending the outcome of the assault he is alleged to have made on Anthony Cook, 27, of York avenue, this city. The asault took place Thursday at the Montville mill where both worked. A fight started, but the men were separated. When they got outside the mill, Cook got the beating which put him in the hospital. Coman was arrested by the state police Friday. SETTLEMENT OF CHURCH CONTROVERSY EXPECTED

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 26—(AP)—Settlement of a controversy, which for a decade has been a sore point in the Presbyterian church of the United States, which involves control of Princeton theological seminary, Princeton, N. J., and conflict between "fundamentalists" and "liberal" groups at the institution, will be sought at the church general assembly here tomorrow.

Victory for the "liberal" group appears to be in prospect for the first time with the new moderator, Dr. Cleland B. McAfee of Chicago, sympathetic to their cause. The result of a test vote last Friday on the question of procedure in which Dr. McAfee scored a victory over Dr. J. Gresham Machan, ultra-conservative member of the Princeton faculty, is regarded by delegates as signifying a complete triumph Monday.

The "liberal" program calls for creating of a single board of control for the seminary and dissolution of the two boards of trustees and directors, now in conflict. In addition it provides for extension of the power of the president to make possible effective action toward ending faculty conflict.

Directly opposed is the program of the ultra-conservative group who seek to leave the boards as they are now constituted and to cut the powers of the president. Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, accused of "liberalism," so that he would amount to an administrative agent of the faculty and the boards.

CIVIL ENGINEER PRESTON TAKES HIS LIFE WITH REVOLVER BULLET

Leaving preparations that indicated his intention to take his own life, Charles H. Preston, Jr., a well known civil engineer, son of the late Charles H. Preston, who for many years was a well known architect in this city, ended his life with a pistol shot in a room at the Wauregan hotel in the early hours of Sunday morning. No shot was heard by anyone in the hotel, but his body was found on the bed in the room by a maid who went there about 9 o'clock in the morning. Mr. Preston had used a 32 calibre revolver, shooting himself in the right temple, the bullet passing through the skull and breaking the bone on the left side.

Immediately upon finding the body, the hotel authorities notified Dr. C C. Gildersleeve, medical examiner, who gave a verdict of suicidal death by shooting and allowed removal of the body to the undertaking rooms of Church and Allen.

Mr. Preston had not been a resident of this city for some time but he came here Saturday night on the State of Maine express from New York and registered at the hotel about half an hour after midnight. It happened that the room to which he was assigned was between two rooms which were unoccupied for the night, which probably contributed to the fact that the revolver shot was not heard. It is believed this may have been fired two or three hours after he went to the room.

Except for the coat and vest, which had been taken off and hung in the clothes press, the body was fully clothed. On the bureau, neatly arranged in order, were a number of papers and letters, which included a certified copy of his birth record in Norwich, dated Oct. 22, 1925, and a paper labelled "Identification". This was typewritten upon letter paper of the Allerton house, 143 East 39th street, New York city, and was on a fairly fresh, clean-looking sheet that looked as if it might have recently been prepared. It read as follows:

Identification.

The bearer, Charles H. Preston, Jr., is the son of the late architect, Charles H. Preston, who practiced his profession in Norwich for 30 years.

Born at Norwich, May 18, 1876.

Attended the Norwich (Greeneville) schools until the age of 17.

Studied civil engineering in the office of Charles E. Chandler, formerly city engineer, for a three year period.

Studied architecture in the office of his father for several years.

As a civil engineer entered the department of buildings and bridges of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company and had charge of construction work in Boston, Providence, New Haven, Bridgeport, Waterbury and other places on that system.

In 1909 opened an office in Waterbury, Conn., for the general practice of civil engineering and mill architecture and continued this business until 1926.

Was engaged by the New York Central Railroad company for the construction of a steel and concrete viaduct in Clearfield, Penna., a huge storage warehouse at the Hudson river and West 41st street, New York city, changes in their power house at Glenwood, N. Y., and other structures.

As a general contractor in New York city had constructed roads, sewers, water lines, swimming pools, and general grading work.

Life member of St. James lodge of Masons, Norwich.

Member of American Society of Civil Engineers, New York city.

While in Connecticut was a member of Connecticut Society of Civil Engineers and New England Water Works association of Boston, Mass.

In case of death wish to be buried by Church and Allen, undertakers of Main street, Norwich, Conn., on the family plot at Maplewood cemetery, Norwich, Conn.

Other Letters Left.

Besides the two papers already mentioned there was a notice of his death for the Civil Engineers society, another letter sending his safety deposit keys back to New York, another enclosing over $200 for Church and Allen, one disposing of the contents of his trunk, another directing that his personal effects should go to his cousin, Mrs. James W. Semple of 60 Sixth street, and another with some money for John Morrison and directions to look after the care of the cemetery lot.

But little was known here of Mr. Preston's business affairs in recent years, but it is thought that worry over his work in New York and over family troubles may have brought him to a despondent state of mind. His son, Harris Preston, a young man of 17, was the driver of a motorcycle which was in collision in January, 1928 on Preston bridge, this city, with the automobile of Herbert Whitaker, which went off the bridge into the Shetucket river, carrying the seven members of the Whitaker family to their death. Young Harris was so badly hurt that he died some time later in the hospital. Mr. Preston's wife, who secured a divorce from him some time ago, is a resident of this city, and there is a son surviving.

Boleslaw Haberek of New London was presented in the city court Saturday morning on a charge of operating without a license. At the request of City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy the case was continued until this (Monday) morning. Since his arrest, it has developed that Haberek has been in trouble before. City Attorney Cassidy advised the court that he had information that leads him to believe that the accused has been arrested on three previous occasions, once for operating while under the influence of liquor, and twice for evading responsibility.

When Haberek was arrested last Wednesday, at Washington square, by Officer Daniel O'Neil, he was charged with driving without a license. At police headquarters the accused told Chief George Linton that he had left his license at home. He was ordered to appear in court Thursday morning.

He failed to show up and the New London authorities were asked to arrest him for the local police. It was learned that he never had a driver's license. Haberek claims that the only time he was arrested was for parking.

"WORTH WEIGHT IN GOLD"
Verdict of Woman Who Tried Pinkham's Compound

Tully, N. Y.—"It hurt me to walk or sit down without help and I felt sick and weak. My mother-in-law took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she induced me to take it. I am now on the fourth bottle and have also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. The medicines that will do for me what the Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done are certainly worth their weight in gold. I think I have given them a fair trial and I expect to take two more bottles of the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Charles Morgan, R. F. D. 1, Tully, N. Y.

MEMORIAL SERVICES AT ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH

Sunday at St. Andrew's Episcopal church, memorial services were held with members of four patriotic bodies attending, viz: Robert O. Fletcher, post, No. 4, American Legion; and Richard E. Hourigan post, No. 594, Veterans of Foreign Wars, with the auxiliaries of each post.

A special musical program was arranged by the organist, Mrs. Charles Erwin, which included Venite, Te Deum Jubilate, and solo by James Lockhart who rendered At the Cross and Albert J. Turner who sang "Stand Up For Jesus." The St. Andrew's choir sang several songs in a very capable manner. On the altar beautiful flowers were placed by Mrs. Alfred M. Brucksch in memory of her husband who before his death was organist at St. Andrew's church and by Mrs. Schoville.

Rev. E. J. Norris, the rector took as his text St. Matthew 16:25. "If any man will come after me," let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me.

He prefaced his sermon with words of welcome to the men and the women of the auxiliaries.

For the past five or six years Memorial day has been the occasion of greater solemnity than ever before, he said. There have been added to the long list of heroic dead who have filled soldier graves, some thousands more of names. By the side of those who died for their personal freedom and those who died for the freedom of a nation, there now lie those who have died for the freedom of all. They speak to us today of sacrifice. From lives of usefulness and promise they came at the call of their country, to give their last full measure of devotion and make the supreme sacrifice. This they did cheerfully and willingly, not counting the cost, but seeing only their country's need and danger. Thus they teach us of real sacrifice.

How little of sacrifice for the highest things in life there is amongst us. It is a noble thing to die for one's country and is highly commendable, but do we not owe a greater allegiance to God.

The speaker referred to three principles of sacrifice, first, self-denial, second, suffering, and third, self-surrender. He urged that men and women look upon the cross as it is lifted above us and make a full surrender to its appealing arms and hand down the torch of truth to succeeding generations.

Let us cling to the supreme things and to this one great supremacy that righteousness is our national coronation. May God help us to keep the torch of truth burning and to present lives that are consecrated to the highest and noblest ideals. Only the supreme things last. Faith and hope and love endue.

AL GEBRATH AND PARRIGONI SHARE HONORS IN OUTBOARD MOTOR RACES

Al Gebrath of Groton, driving his Bozo III, an outboard motorboat less than 24 hours old, was the star performer at the outboard races held Sunday afternoon on the Thames river under the auspices of the Chelsea Boat club. Gebrath captured first place in the race for class C craft and also took the honors in the free-for-all event. Gebrath however met with stiff competition from Dave Parrigoni of Westerly who piloted a Sallrite in the free-for-all but was forced out in the second heat when his motor went dead.

In the class B event O. Rettburg of Hartford romped away with the first two heats and in the third heat gave William B. Mitchell a thrill. Rettburg had by far the fastest craft in the class but was content to play along with Mitchell and barely nose him out at the finish with a brilliant burst of speed. Mitchell finished second in the event.

In the class C race Gebrath had everything his own way and finished first in each heat without really having to exert himself. Jack Lynch of Groton finished second in this event.

The free-for-all was a spectacular race with Dave Parrigoni winning the first heat after getting a way to a good start. Gebrath gave him a rub all the way but the Bozo III had a tendency to skid off on the turns at each end of the course while Parrigoni was able to cut them short. In the second heat Parrigoni's motor quit dead on the second lap of the course allowing Gebrath to romp home an easy winner. Coming into the third heat Parrigoni won easily while Gebrath experienced motor trouble on the last turn and limped in in fourth place. However, by his first and second places in the previous heats the Bozo III had pile up enough points to win the event. Geoffrey Mflore of Westerly was second in this event.

The marathon race from Kitemaug to New London to Norwich and back to Kitemaug provided plenty of thrills for those in a position to witness them. Dave Parrigoni won easily from a field of five starters and by nearly three quarters of an hour. Parrigoni outdistanced his field early in the race and kept increasing his lead until the finish. Ben Lucas of Norwich in his Bob White finished second.

There were two upsets in this race and one boat caught fire and burned. Boat No. 6, an original model designed by "Young Joe" Moore of Norwich, threw its pilot into the water near Stoddard's Wharf as the craft was on its way to Norwich. The pilot was rescued and his craft towed to the dock.

The second upset occurred near the Norwich state hospital when the sealed by Milt Green and Billy Mitchell spilled them out into the river.

The third accident ocurred on the home stretch when the boat D121, piloted by Bob Zucardy, caught fire from an overheated motor near the Poquetanuck drawbridge. The D121 had second position well in hand when the accident took place. The motor burst into flames and forced the pilot overboard. He was picked up by Geo. W. Moore, in one of the patrol boats and the craft which was a total wreck towed back to the starting point.

The races were witnessed by several hundred people who thronged the dock at the clubhouse at Kitemaug. The weather was ideal but the river was choppy enough to make the racing very interesting for the spectators. There were no upsets over the short course which was from Allyn's point to Montville dock and return.

The officials were: Lewis Chapman of Groton, Lee Dix, Harold Carpenter, and W. E. Mitchell. The course was patroled by W. R. Frisbie, George W. Moore, Joseph A. French, and Ned Hall.

The prizes for the races were donated by Norwich and New London merchants.

VELVETMEN OPEN SEASON WITH WIN OVER MYSTIC

The Velvetmen opened the season at the J. B. Martin diamond Sunday afternoon with an easy win over the Mystic A. C. 11 to 2. The Velvetmen ruined a perfectly good ball game when they landed on Zepp in the seventh inning and shelled him from the mound. Harry Mills, who had pitched the day before came to the rescue and eight runs had counted before he could stem the tide. Nap Liberty played a brilliant game for the Velvetmen and in the seventh inning got two hits, a double and a single. West pitched a nice game allowing but four hits and fanned seven men. The Velvetmen gathered 14 hits off Zepp and Mills. The score:

YANKEES PLAY AT HARTFORD THIS AFTERNOON

HARTFORD, May 26.— The New York Yankees, with Babe Ruth and the entire cast, will visit Hartford Monday for an exhibition game with Heinie Grob's Hartford Senators at the Bulkeley stadium.

Play will be called at 5:15, daylight saving time, and President Bob Farrell of the Hartford baseball club predicts that the greatest crowd ever to see a baseball game in this city will be gathered within the stadium as the umpires call the teams into action.

Hartford has as much interest in that other home run king, Lou Gehrig, as it has in Ruth since it was right here in Hartford that Gehrig started his baseball career which has led him to the eminence as one of the great stars of the national game.

MAYS READY FOR BOUT WITH CANZONERI

Bob Mays took things easily on Sunday and will complete his training today for his bout tomorrow night with Jimmy Canzoneri of New York at the Hamilton street arena. Mays, who had put on little or no weight since his victory over Frankie Curcio three weeks ago, need little real work to get him into condition for his bout tomorrow night. Canzoneri will arrive in New London today and will complete his training for the bout with a light workout at a local gym and a little road work.

Mays in taking on Canzoneri is up against a real boy this time and the betting is just about even. The New York lad comes to New London with a reputation of having met and beaten some of the top-notchers in the lightweight class. Canzoneri is confident of winning this bout as a stepping stone to a match with Kid Kaplan. Mays on the other hand is equally as confident that the same left hand attack that won for him from Curcio will do the same for him against Canzoneri.

Local interest of course centers about the four-round setto between Tommy McCarthy, local idol, and Buster Mello of Fall River. Young McCarthy is in the proverbial pink of condition and although his fighting of late has been limited he does not look at all bad. In fact he is somewhat faster than a year ago and does not appear as awkward. From somewhere he has picked up a neat and forceful punch which should stand him in good stead Tuesday night.

YANKEES SWAMP RED SOX WITH HITTING BARRAGE

BOSTON, May 26.—(AP)—The New York Yankees, swept on by a wave of heavy hitting, swamped the Red Sox under a score of 15 to 4 in the rubber game of their five game series here today. A crowd of 27,000 persons watched the visitors garner 16 hits for a total of 33 bases from five Boston pitchers.

Babe Ruth made his ninth home run of the season and also made two singles and a double. Meusel and Dickey also achieved home runs.

Morris, Boston's batting pitcher, made the best showing on the mound for the home team and, in two times at bat, hit a double and a home run off Hoyt, who was put out of the game at the start of the sixth inning for continual arguing with Umpire Mallin.

SHELTON TEAM SWAMPED IN DUSTY LEAGUE GAME

The J. B. Martin company baseball team trounced the Uncasville-Shelton nine in a Montville Industrial league game on the Shelton grounds Sunday afternoon 15 to 7. As games go the match was not much of a thrill, there being much negative action in the early stages of the game in which the Martin team got a big lead and the later innings bringing no pressure on the Martin pitcher or many brilliant bits of fielding. For the victors Kiley turned in a fine afternoon's work both at bat and in the field. The only redeeming feature of the Shelton boys was a catch by Haronecky in the middle pasture. The Shelton pitchers paved the way for its team's defeat by issuing thirteen free tickets to the initial sack.

WASHINGTON, May 26—(AP)—Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics continued to strengthen their first place position at the expense of Washington by winning today's game, 4 to 3.

Braxton held the Athletics to one run until the seventh inning, but with a two run lead he blew up and three runs crossed the plate. Rommel relieved Quinn in the sixth and held Washington to two hits from then on.

N. F. A. STILL ROLLING ALONG IN LEAGUE LEAD

The Academy is now practically certain of its fifth consecutive league championship, the Wildcats having won their seven games of league competition to date. By winning from Westerly at the campus this afternoon, the Academy can assure itself of at least no worse than a tie. If they should lose the next two games after today, which is not very probable, then Tech, second place club would have to win all here to at least tie the Red and White. Chapman has won four and lost two.

Windham Loses to Manchester

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 26.— Windham high lost the first game of its two-game annual series to Manchester high Saturday afternoon at Recreation park, 6 to 3.

What probably enabled Dayton to pull out of a tough fig in the fourth with the bases loaded and only one out, was that Coach Shay and a few other of his ballplayers decided to have a conference with him, giving the impression that a new pitcher was coming in. He came—in a few innings.

GOSH this has been a busy weekend. How about it?

Saw the Academy-Bulkeley game Saturday and then went to see the motor boat races Sunday. Not much alike but lots of fun both ways.

To tell the truth that Academy-Bulkeley game wasn't so hot. And them Academy boys at the first of the game didn't look so hot either. As base runners those kids are terrible but as hitters and fielders they're the berries.

Some day that poor base running is going to lose them a close game and Saturday looked like the day as they threw away a couple of runs by their loafing.

Bulkeley was without doubt one of the weakest teams to appear here this season. And Paddy Shea, the coach, blamed it all on the umpires. Shame on you, Paddy.

Well it looks good anyway to the boys to have their coach crab a little. It shows 'em you are with 'em when everybody else in the ball lot knows you want to kick 'em in the pants.

Say talk about appreciation, can you beat this? Alex Pasnik gives the Academy a perfectly good set of bleachers and then when he wants a seat he has to sit on an empty soda water case on the sidelines. They should reserve a seat for you Alex.

Them umpires they had was pretty good but I'd rather see old Hank Morin out there any day. You can't tell what Hank says but at least we know he says something, which is more than we can say of those other umpires.

Say folks if you want to get a real thrill you wanta see some of them outboard races. It might be well to call 'em overboard races, if you get what I mean.

Those darned little egg-shells with a motor hanging out behind 'em just skitter across water like a waterbug.

But folks if you ride in one of them don't forget your slicker, boots and umbrella. And be sure and have a life-preserver for they are as changeable as a woman and are liable to leave at anytime.

And when they leave you there's nothing between you and land but a lot of very wet water. But just the same I bet you get a whale of a kick out of it.

They tell me it's bad luck to have a judge toss out the first ball at the opening game. At least it is up in Fitchville where Judge Jack Sweeney heaved the first pill yesterday. His club lost and so did the judge, but I don't know how much.

IOWA EXPELLED FROM BIG TEN CONFERENCE

CHICAGO, May 26.—(AP)—Climaxing one of the most turbulent years since its organization in 1896, the big ten athletic conference has expelled the University of Iowa from its membership on a charge of violating the role against subsidizing athletes.

The drastic action, which stunned the entire conference group by its suddenness, was taken late last night by the faculty committee on intercollegiate athletics, and was surrounded by secrecy. The committee was holding its annual meeting in connection with the big ten outdoor track and field championships at Northwestern university.

Baltic Defeats Waurugan

Sunday afternoon at Sayles field, Baltic, the Baltic team won a close game 5 to 4 from the Wauregan Grays. Pepin pitched good ball for the winners while P. Finn featured at bat and Charon in the defensive play at third base. The game was won in the ninth inning when Liberty walked and come home on Provencher's double.

ACADEMY SCORES 14TH STRAIGHT AS WEISGRABER BLANKS BULKELEY

The Academy scored its most decisive victory over Bulkeley since the War Saturday afternoon at the campus when, behind a six-hit shutout performance by Butsy Weisgraber, they pounded two Orange and Black pitchers for twelve hits and took advantage of seven Bulkeley errors to win, 12 to 0. A crowd of over 3,000 witnessed the game. It was the unbeaten Wildcats fourteenth victory in a row.

Tombari's Homer Starts It

Dayton started on the mound for Bulkeley and went well for about three innings, keeping the Academy away from the plate in the first two stanzas and allowing one run in the third. But, once the team started batting around the second time he proved an easy mark and Anso Tombari started the real fireworks in the fourth with a long home run over the left field fence right after Red Fagan had shot a double to the scoreboard. This really settled the issue for, after Mr. Dayton managed to get the side in order in the fifth, the Wildcats came piling right back with eight big runs in the sixth on singles by Arico, Gibbs, Cummings, Weisgraber, a double by LaCroix, three passes and four errors. Bulkeley went all to pieces in this inning. The Academy added another in the eighth just for good measure.

Bulkeley came near scoring but once, that in the fourth when Jim Brennan, captain-catcher, doubled with one away. Watterson was safe on an error and stole second but Weisgraber fanned Campbell clean-up hitter and forced Gigliotti to an infield roller.

Many Fielding Features.

Anso Tombari was the hitting star for the Academy, driving in four runs during the afternoon and having a home run and a single. Hal Cummings and Butsy Weisgraber also had two hits. The two Brennans, led Bulkeley in all ways, especially the little second-sacker, who had enough pep for three teams. Cummings with a diving catch of Watterson's liner in the first and the subsequent doubling of Jim Brennan who had singled off first, Chubby Gibbs at short, with a stop and long throw from deep short for the last out of the game, a catch by Buck LaCroix in the ninth, when he ran over to the foul line to snare Campbell's pop and four nice catches by Johnny Murphy in left provided the fielding features. Westerly Here Today

Coach Joe Sherman's Westerly high team will furnish the opposition today at 3 p. m. at the campus for the Academy, playing off a league game postponed from last Tuesday because of rain. "Pat" Celestino, a newcomer, has been selected to pitch for the visitors with Louie Green, who blanked Westerly without hit in the first game, pitching for the Wildcats. Westerly beat Stonington Saturday, breaking that team's four game winning streak, and comes here today with high hopes of stopping the Academy's victory string, which has now reached 14 games. N. F. A. is the only undefeated club in the state.

FONTAINE WINS BLIND PAR TOURNEY SUNDAY

John Fontaine was the winner of the "blind par" tourney at the Norwich Golf club over the week end when he turned in a card of 86 which with his handicap of 15 gave him a 71, one stroke over the blind par of 70. Dave Morton was second with a gross 77 and a net 72. William B. Mitchell was third with 91-(18)—73. There were a large number of entrants and many played over the course during the pleasant weather of the week end.

On Memorial day the tournament will consist of eighteen holes medal play, and prizes will be awarded to the low gross and the three low net scores. As many 16's will be formed as the number of contestants will allow, and the championship of each division will be determined by match play, two-thirds of the difference in handicaps being allowed. Each match must be played before the end of the following week.

All club members are invited to enter in the round robin single tennis tournament. Point scores will be recorded for each match and there will be twelve games to a match. The player having the highest percentage of won points will win the tournament. Prizes for winners and a consolation prize.

DODGERS RALLY IN 9TH TO BEAT OUT PHILLIES

BROOKLYN, May 26—(AP)—A counter rally by Brooklyn for two runs in the ninth, after the Phillies had taken the lead with three in the first half of the inning, enabled the Robins to win the final game of the series here today by 5 to 4. A home run by Cy Williams with two on in the ninth gave the Phils their margin, but the Robins came back with the two runs needed to win. Rederick's triple and singles by Gilbert and Bressler figured in the winning rally. Frank O'Doul hit a homer in the eighth.

Doug McWeeny gave only six hits and received perfect support. He never seemed in danger until Williams hit for the circuit in the ninth. Roy and Elliott divided the pitching for Philadelphia.

CARDS DROP TWO GAMES TO PIRATES BEFORE 30,000

ST. LOUIS, Mo. May 26.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals slipped back into second place in the National league pennant race today by dropping both games of a double header to Pittsburgh 12 to 8 and 7 to 5. Thirty thousand fans saw the double defeat.

Taylor Douthit led the Cardinal attack, getting seven hits in ten trips to the plate in the two games, one of them a home run in the first game with the bases loaded. Jim Bottomley, who only two days ago got two home runs in one game, hit for the circuit twice again today, once in each game.

One big inning the sixth, in which they bunched three doubles, two singles and three passes for seven runs, gave the Pirates the first game, which was a slugfest. In the night cap, the Cardinals outhit Pittsburgh but Frankhouse weakened in the pinches to give the Pirates the game.

WESTERLY

MILLER MANSION "THE KNOLLS" BURNED EARLY SUNDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., May 26—A spectacular fire between 2 and 3 a. m. Sunday consumed the large country home on Belvedree Farms, formerly known as "The Knolls," the property of Cash Miller of Westerly and located on the west bank a point of land extending into the Pawcatuck river, just below the William Clark Mills. The owner was in Boston having left Westerly Saturday noon and did not return until early Sunday afternoon to find the show place a mass of smoking ruins.

The blaze caused a destruction of at least $30,000 worth of property. One origin is given as the carelessness of a cigarette smoker of a petting party. Early Saturday morning the conclusion was that the fire was of incendiary origin, as the house was unoccupied and the electric light wire had been disconnected. Shortly before the alarm was sounded, Harry H. Robinson, who is residing at the Robinson place, reports that he heard a sound like scuffling on a piazza and the voices of men and women coming from the direction of the Miller place. He was reading at the time and did not pay much attention to the noise, but later his attention was attracted to an unusual brightness out of doors. Upon looking out the window he saw flames in the southeast corner of the sun room, near a fireplace. Within a few moments the flames had traveled through the first and second floors up into the attic and through the roof and were soon towering 50 feet in the air. Someone had already given the alarm.

During the height of the blaze, firemen and ladders were placed in readiness on the roof of the house of Mrs. John G. Herrold, which is just south of the Miller property, and the owner reports that she heard voices in that vicinity at about 11:30, but thought nothing about it at the time.

A special circus train of 29 cars, seven animal, fourteen flat and eight sleepers of the Sells-Floto circus, passed the Westerly station of the New Haven road, east-bound, about 8:20 Sunday morning bound from New Haven to Boston.

About 6:30 o'clock Saturday morning a Chevrolet coach of Clifford C. Wilcox of Hope Valley, proceeding westerly along Railroad avenue, struck the rear end of the Ford coach driven by Antonio Gencarelli, of Westerly just after it had crossed the West street railroad bridge to Railroad avenue. Both machines were damaged. Officer Robert M. Kessel found that brakemarks showed the Chevrolet had scored the road for 31 feet before the autos collided.

AT AGE 83

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not my small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness — and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of his 47 years' practice (he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1875), he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores it previously had in his private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. Millions of bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are being used a year.

Its great success is based on merit, on repeated buying, on one satisfied user telling another. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have gotten hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us that it helped them when everything else failed. Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

AGED 6 MONTHS

THERE WAS LITTLE EVIDENCE OF ANY SEASONAL SLACK IN BUSINESS LAST WEEK

NEW YORK, May 26.—(AP) —Business approached the normally slack summer months last week with little evidence of a seasonal retarding of activity.

The sustained activity in the steel industry was the dominant feature of the situation. While there was some letup in the demand from automobile manufacturers, takings by shipbuilding, railway and construction interests fully made up this decline. Steel mills held output at or near capacity.

Leading steel executives attending the annual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute, stated that operations will undoubtedly be well sustained during the summer. It was pointed out in trade circles that the present volume of business insight should keep the industry working at a high rate until well toward the seasonal upturn in the fall will be felt.

Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, however, warned of over-confidence, pointing to the comparatively narrow margin of profit upon which the industry has been working. Sloss Sheffield Steel and Iron company of Birmingham, Ala., omitted the quarterly dividend due on its common stock at this time, but this was attributed to special conditions that have little bearing on the general industry.

Of consuming interest was the supreme court decision in the St. Louis and O'Fallon case, ordering the interstate commerce commission to consider current reproduction costs in evaluating the railroads. The opinion was greeted with great enthusiasm in rail circles, but it was acknowledged that it would have little immediate effect, save to delay indefinitely any action of the interstate commerce commission to recapture earnings. Leading rail heads stated that they contemplated no application for higher rates as result of the decision. It was expected, however, that the decision would result in the reaching of valuations for the roads several billions of dollars higher, and that it would permit them to prepare for future requirements with renewed confidence.

Railroad earnings reports for April general showed substantial gains over a year ago, and total loadings of revenue freight for the week ending May 17 again cross the 1,000,000 car mark, indicating an unprecedented distribution of goods for this time of year.

Automobile output was maintained at a high level, and some manufacturers will undoubtedly make new production records this month. Some apprehensions were felt, however, that the recent declines in the stock and grain markets may injure sales. Lessened takings of raw materials indicated that the industry is preparing for the seasonal letup.

Both gasoline and crude oil prices were advanced substantially during the week, and President Hoover called a conference of governors of producing states to consider the plan of an inter-state compact for the purpose of preventing wasteful production. Non-ferrous metal markets remained quiet, but prices were generally steady. The hide markets, finally took a definite turn for the better, but effects of the long depression were increasingly evident. Some congestion in the footwear markets was apparent, and some manufacturers were said to be planning to cease operations temporarily.

Wet and cool weather still had an adverse affect upon crops and retail trade. The latter having a depressing influence on the textile industry. Grain prices rallied somewhat, but again fell off to near their recent low levels late in the week.

The credit outlook was still clouded. The federal reserve advisory council's recommendation that reserve banks be permitted to raise their rediscount rates from 5 to 6 per cent. caused a drastic break on the stock market and had a somewhat adverse effect upon business sentiment.

The week's insolvency record, as reported by R. G. Dun and company was definitely better, with only 410 failures, 65 less than a week ago and 16 less than the like week of last year.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES

Wee Hummingbird

With buzzing wings, wee hummingbird,
With squealing chirp, click-clicking word,
You come in slender, greenish coat
And sparkling ruby at your throat,
You whir and whiz through all the hours
In and out among my flowers.

You chase away the robber bees
And sip pink honey where you please.
Your slim, long-handled little bill
Is never, never, never still,
But like a fairy quill sucks up
The sweetness from each flower cup.

And when the honey season's over
You flit, you tiny roguish rover,
To frolic through the winter time
With blossoms of some sunnier clime
And so goodbye until next summer,
Wee ruby-throated hummer!

Dog and Cat Epitaphs

ON A DOG

In a shallow bed near by Lies one who never told a lie.
Not so wise, but yet he could
Tell the evil from the good.
Fond and faithful, tender, brave.
Here I lay him in the grave.
Happy could I certain be
Men will say as much of me.

A NEIGHBOR'S CAT

Underneath this rocky grot
Lieth one by man forgot,
While his owners were away
On their summer holiday,
He starved to death the first September,
Man forgot. God will remember.

—W. E. Soudamore.

Birds in San Remo.

The woefullest of prisoned things
Is a prisoner with wings!
Let a cage be wide it crowds
Intimates of peaks and clouds;
Yet an eagle's penned here . . Group
Follows group about his coop,
Eyes and bars a double ring
Hemming in this broken king,
While the far horizon's rim
Is a third—the worst to him!

Here there is no cage too small
For a bird; in every wall,
Every window-sill are nails
Holding little battered jails;
If by chance a bird is seen
In the trees' eternal green,
It is like a hunted thing
Hiding there, it dares not sing!

Gardens are as silent places
As the cypress-guarded spaces
Where none wake to count the hours;
Have a caution all you flowers
Yearning, petal-winged, to fly!
It is better far to die,
Fading in a dusty dish;
Yearn enough you'll have your wish—
So the law—but what are wings
Saving ache to captive things?

It were well to be like stars,
Only out at night when bars
Cast no shadow; not behold
Birds the sun stripes black and gold,
Tragic birds of Italy;
Well for stars they do not see
Blinded birds here, flying things
With no room to lift their wings!

I would shout this to all lands,
Make a trumpet of my hands.—
Listen! There's one cage for birds,
One, like this,—a cage of words!

Isabelle Valle.

The Hymn of Hate.

And this I hate—not men, nor flag, nor race,
Not only War with its wild, grinning face,
Not strike it till its eyes be blind as night
Shall all its members tremble with affright!
Oh, let it hear in its death agony
The wail of mothers for their best-loved ones,
And on its head
Disband the venomed courses of its sons
Who followed her, deluded, where its guns
Had dyed the daisies red.

All these I hate—war and its panoply,
The lie that hides its ghastly mockery,
That makes its glories out of women's tears,
The toll of peasants through the burdened years,
The legacy of long disease that preys
On bone and body in the after-days.
God's curses pour,
Until it shrivel with its votaries
And die away in its own fiery seas,
That nevermore
Its dreadful call of murder may be heard;
A thing accursed in very deed and word
From blood-drenched shore to shore!

—Joseph Dana Miller.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE AWAKES

The pigeon is, next to the English sparrow the most familiar bird in our cities and towns. Like the sparrow, it is bold in the presence of man and his works and manages to pick up a living in the yards and streets. It is a case of almost perfect adaptation to environment.

The common pigeon appears to be related to none of our native American species, such as the mourning dove, but to the rock dove (Columba domestica,) a cliff-dwelling shore bird of Europe. It was probably brought to this country in a domesticated state, and, escaping, reverted to many of the life habits of its more remote ancestors while adapting itself to its new surroundings. It offers as interesting an opportunity for study as any of our less accessible wild birds. Its flight, its habits of nesting and breeding, its general appearance and inherited instincts are all those of the European wild bird; they apparently lay dormant while its immediate ancestors were living in a state of domestication and restraint.

There are some two hundred varieties and strains of fancy and domesticated pigeons, including the fantails, the pouters, the tumblers, and the carriers, all of which appear to have been developed from the wild rock dove. Whenever these have escaped and joined the free flocks in the towns, their distinctive characteristics have disappeared, merging with those of the primitive type. It is rather a wonderful bit of natural history, when you come to think of it. Details of form and feathering, by which ornithologists determined species, are those of the rock dove.

The rock dove is found today on the craggy shores of Scotland and Ireland and the Islands to the north, as well as in some parts of England. There are also some in Scandinavia and in the mountains of Spain, Portugal and Italy.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES

Autobiography of the Poppy

Dear Uncle Jed: I was once in a little bag with many seeds enjoying myself with my friends. But one day a little girl took us off the shelf and we all wondered where we would be next. All of a sudden the bag tore open and the little girl took a handful of my friends, among whom was myself. She dug many little holes and put one or two of us in each. I felt very lonesome without my friends. All at once I got the greatest scare I ever had. I was covered with sand, where I felt very thirsty and uncomfortable. But soon I was rewarded for my waiting, because the little girl sprinkled us with water. About two weeks later we grew and were again enjoying ourselves in the fresh air. We grew very quickly, for the sun shone each day, and then we blossomed. My friends were red and pink while I was white. The little girl came each morning and took great care of us. She watered us and pulled out the weeds from our roots so we prospered. But one day she picked us and put us in a pretty pale pink vase with a gold border. She put us in a room where a little sick girl lay. This was the happiest day of our life, because we made the sick girl very happy because she was always admiring us.

JENNIE JAKUBOWSKA, Age 12.
Norwich.

An Apple Tree

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to you and the Wide-Awakes. I am telling you the autobiography of an apple tree.

It was a warm spring day, out in the fields and orchards, while I was a little apple root in a store with many others. A little boy came in and bought me. He took me into the orchard and put me in the ground and covered me up. In the ground it was terribly dark and uncomfortable. I could see nothing, none of my friends or the beautiful world. I stayed there the whole summer and through the weary winter, until spring came and I sprung out of the ground and was a little green twig.

Years rolled by and I grew big. Each year sweet smelling pink and white blossoms covered my branches. How surprised the boy was to see them. But the wicked wind came by one day and blew most of them off. I was then very sad, because the blossoms that were left did not smell so sweet and I did not look so pretty as before.

But something else happened which surprised me very much. After the blossoms were gone little green apples came in their place. And in the fall were nice golden russets. After my fruit was ripe, the boy picked them and stored them in the cellar. The other trees did not have such large and sweet apples as I.

How glad I was when he took them off, because my branches raised up higher and I could look up at the sun each day.

Each year I had such fruit until I grew old, then it was not so large and sweet. But still I was happy in the orchard with my friends until I was cut down.

The Taro Plant

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second letter that I have written to you. I am going to tell you about the taro plant.

The chief native vegetable of the Hawaiians is the taro plant, which grows in water. The national dish, poi, is obtained from the root of the plant. To prepare poi, the root of the taro plant is first baked and then it is pounded into a very moist paste. Water is added and the mixture is allowed to ferment for 48 hours.

An acre of land will supply taro for an average family for a year.

A Great Friend of Norwich

Dear Uncle Jed: I enjoy reading the Wide-Awake circle very much. I'm also very much interested in the Social Corner and especially the letters to the editor from "Dad" Shaw. I wonder if there are any Wide-Awakes who read his letters? He is the finest man I have met and would like to tell you a little about him. Although his hair is as white as snow and he is way past a half century, he has a wonderful memory and is very active. Besides his everyday routine, which calls him to work at 7 o'clock in the Passaic Rubber Manufacturing company, where he is chief inspector of 2,500 employes and has to put in a report for every previous day's business, he attends to a welfare society of 1,250 members. Then he writes for at least five papers. We receive one each week that he writes sporting stories for. I have learned a great deal about baseball from these stories, as he is a great baseball fan.

Imagine having a large electric sign in his town which says on it: Read Dad Shaw's Sporting Stories. He has made a great many friends. I've heard him say among the thousands he hasn't an enemy; if he had, he'd apologize. I hope you all will have the pleasure in meeting a gentleman like "Dad." Wherever he goes, or whatever he does, he always highly praises his home town, Norwich.

JOHN PISOWLOSKI, Age 12.
Norwich Town.

My Swimming Lesson.

Dear Uncle Jed: It is some time since I have written to you, but as I have something interesting to say I thought my story would interest your boys and girls.

Last Monday I took my first swimming lesson. Mr. Lind, a member of the Red Cross Life Saving corps, who is physical director of the same, was kind enough to give three free swimming lessons to boys and girls over 10 years of age who wished to learn. My friends thought I should take advantage of the opportunity, as it is very important that every boy and girl should know how to swim.

My greatest trouble was to keep my feet up; but I did not get discouraged. With my second lesson it was much easier, and I found myself swimming. I am very much delighted, and as we go to the beach every summer I will now enjoy those trips more than ever.

The lessons were given in the Y. M. C. A. rooms in Willimantic.

When I am a little older it may be possible for me to join that society. I am 11 years old and in the fifth grade in school.

RAYMOND O'CONNELL, Age 11.
Willimantic, R. F. D.

Making Paper

Dear Uncle Jed: I am to tell you and the Wide-Awake friends the autobiography about paper. I was first a piece of dirty rag laying out in the street. One day a man came along with a bag and picked me up, put me into the bag and went off.

He brought me to a mill where I many of my friends were put into a large cauldron and boiled until we were clean. Then they took us out. We were dried and put through many machines and were soon made into beautiful white, soft crape paper.

Then we were brought into the dyeing room and dyed into different colors. My color was a deep red. We were rolled up, packed into big boxes and shut up and sent away.

It was a long trip before we arrived at the city of Norwich. We were taken out and put neatly into the window of a 5c and 10c store.

I was soon sold to a young lady. She took me home and started to work on me and my friend, the green paper. She first cut us up into strips, made four beautiful roses of me and leaves of my friend. She twisted wire around us, then put us into a pretty blue vase with a gold rim and put us on the table. We looked beautiful.

The next day guests arrived. When they saw us they admired us greatly. From that time we became very proud and lived happily ever after.

FRANCES NARUSIEWICZ, Age 12.
Norwich.

Newfoundland

Dear Uncle Jed: Newfoundland is a colony of Great Britain, but not a part of the Dominion of Canada.

It is nearly as large as the state of New York but has only about a quarter of a million people.

A ship of the Labrador coast is under the government of Newfoundland.

The island has many lakes and rivers but much of it is rocky or marshy and unproductive.

There is some timber, and English firms have built large paper and pulp mills, where iron, coal, silver, copper and lead are found.

The principal industry is fishing.

A narrow guage railroad crosses the island from east to west, ending at St. John's.

WESTMINISTER

Even the birds have become desperate over weather conditions. A pair of robins built their nest on a beam in Ben Davis' barn and a similar occurrence is reported from the Nash farm in Howard Valley.

Rev. and Mrs. Harry E. Small, Mrs. Malcolm Wibberly, Mrs. Mary Rollinson and Mrs. Maria Barstow attended the 43rd annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. held at the Baptist church, Willimantic, Wednesday. Mrs. Wibberly was one of the speakers.

Community Memorial Observance.

A community memorial service in which Westminster churches will unite, is to be held at the plains church, Sunday afternoon at 3.30 (daylight saving time). The children o' the Frost and Baldwin schools will give a program and the Wibberly band will furnish music. Rev. Harry E. Small will be one of the speakers. It has been decided to hold a community memorial service, one each year alternately between the three churches, the children of each district to take part in their turn. There will be morning service at Westminster church as usual.

At the Westminster church Sunday, Rev. G. T. Goodenough, pastor of Jewett City Congregational church, conducted the morning service in exchange with the pastor, Rev. Harry E. Small.

The junior choir of Dayville Baptist church gave a minstrel show at Westminster church, Friday evening in which two hours of wholesome fun was enjoyed by those present, the Wibberly band furnished good music.

Frank E. Koch and little grandson of New Rochelle motored up to spend a few days at the family summer home in Westminster.

Misses Ethel and Florence Newton were Danielson visitors Monday.

UNION

Memorial day is to be celebrated as usual at Union Center. Flowers are to be brought to the town hall in the morning by children and others willing to help. The line of World war veterans, school children and citizens led by Frank's Junior band of Stafford, will form at the hall at 11 a. m. (daylight time) to march to the three sections of cemeteries at the Center. After returning with flowers to the monument near the hall, the line will disband and at noon, lunch will be as usual on the basket picnic plan. The exercises in the church will open at 1 p. m. (daylight time). The band, which has been engaged for the day leads to the church and assists in the afternoon exercises. The school children as in former years, will help with songs and recitations.

Thursday morning, May 23, the mercury stood at 46 degrees before sunrise. The temperature remained the same for about an hour.

Apple trees are in full bloom, few petals having fallen yet. Plowing was long delayed by nearly daily rains, and now the ground is often too wet for harrowing and planting.

Several from Rock Meadow district attended the Clifton Wright auction at West Ashford this week.

Mrs. Levi Boynton, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. William Lucarder, of Longmeadow, Mass., visited recently at the home of Charles R. Webster.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Moore and son, Charles of Worcester, spent the week end at their Mashapaug cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis M. Baker of New York were at Union Center for the week end.

POETRY

If I Could Paint the Master

If I could paint the Master,
I would paint
Oh, first of all, a face most wondrous sweet
With eyes that looked me through with gentleness,
Yet searching and inviting, filled with Love.

In robes of flowing white I would array
That holy form, that housed the soul of God
While He sojourned to point us to the Way,
And bore the mighty pains that bought our Peace.

His hands should be outstretched to bless me here,
And beckon, too, that I should nearer draw,
For while I linger in the flesh, I may
In spirit rise to converse sweet with Him.

And as I kneel to hear what He would say,
To guide me through dark ways this world doth yield,
I see the glory that transfigures Him
And fills my soul with courage, joy and Faith.

Above His head it shines and 'neath His feet,
And reaching out to all, as He doth reach;
I see its glory, offering pardon free—
In very shape around Him, shines The Cross!

By Helen Shaw Thomson.

Refuge

I shall go down from the stark, gray-stone towers,
Out from this town—the dogs howl at its gates—
The sad clocks strike the eternal hours
And my refuge waits.

I shall go forth with sandals and a crust,
Before the evil, stupid, friendly feet
Have stopped my singing mouth with choking dust,
Stamped from the common street.

For home has planted vineyards in a place
Of valleys where a heart may lie at ease,
And dreams can daily with a shy young thought,
Naked among the silver birches trees.

There Angels will play a willow harp,
Soft as an autumn light upon a hill,
And dipping swallows leave light water rings
Which widen with a motion that is still.

—Hervey Allen.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Sybil Thorndyke, England famous Shakespearean actress, will receive an honorary degree from Edinburgh University.

Two Missouri politicians polled 101 votes for membership on a county board. They tossed a coin and the republican won.

A judge of a Connecticut town court decided the police force was overweight. He leads the members in daily reducing exercises.

Flat tires have never stopped the fire department on Park Point, across the United States ship canal from Duluth. For 25 years a trolley car fire engine has clanged its way over the street railway tracks to answer fire alarms. The unique fire department was introduced in 1903, after a boathouse blaze caused a loss of $62,000. The city pays the street car company $30 a month for use of its tracks, and the tram fire crew consists of two fire fighters and a motorman. Business has been dull of late. Only 21 runs were made in 1928.

Driving along a Kansas City, Mo., street, Glenn Hakes met a team of mules. The mules were driverless, obstinate, and in the middle of the street. It was impossible to pass them, and in the hope that the animals would instinctively step aside, Hakes stopped his car. Not so. The mules advanced steadily and the only alternative was to back the automobile. At this mules quickened their pace, and soon there was a peculiar race in progress. Then Hakes backed into the courthouse driveway, the mules still following. The Marathon was ended only when Hakes's car was up against the courthouse wall.

HOUSE TO DRIVE AHEAD ON TARIFF BILL THIS WEEK

WASHINGTON, May 26. — (AP) — With approximately 50 committee amendments approved and as many more awaiting disposition, the house will forge ahead with consideration of the tariff bill tomorrow under a rule calling for a final vote late Tuesday.

Passage of the measure by a comfortable majority is regarded as a foregone conclusion, even though some of the farm group republicans have received setbacks in attempts to gain duties on some commodities higher than those carried in the bill. Concessions in other directions have served to bring them into line.

One of these concessions, in the form of a committee amendment to levy a duty of 10 per cent on hides, a free list commodity for more than 20 years, will be brought to a vote tomorrow, along with two other amendments placing duties on leather and boots and shoes which have been on the free list since enactment of the Underwood law in 1913.

The latter two amendments, providing for rates ranging from 12 1-2 to 30 per cent on various kinds of leather and 20 per cent on boots and shoes, were brought out as a concession to the New England and other eastern representatives.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Peter Sees the Babies Again

By Thornton W. Burgess

Never think you know it all;
You'll find you're riding for a fall.
—Old Mother Nature

Peter Rabbit visited the Smiling Pool every day, hoping that he would see the babies of Clippe the Grebe again. He had just a glimpse of them leaving the nest. It had been so sudden and unexpected that he really hadn't had a good look at them. So he spent considerable time around the Smiling Pool.

It was three days before he saw them again. Peter was sitting half hidden under a fern where the Laughing Brook enters the Smiling Pool. He had sat there so long that the had begun to doze. His eyes would close for a moment or two and then he would awaken with a start. At last when he opened his eyes after one of these little naps, he discovered Mrs. Grebe swimming just a little way off. At first that was all he saw. He was just about to ask her where her children were when he received such a surprise that he paused with his mouth half open. He had quite lost his voice. Yes, sir, Peter had quite lost his voice. You see, a very small head had suddenly appeared from among the feathers on Mrs. Grebe's back. Then it disappeared. It was all so unexpected that for a moment or two Peter almost doubted that he really had seen that little head. Yes, sir, he almost doubted it. He began to wonder if he hadn't imagined it. Then that little head reappeared and in a moment two others appeared. Those babies were riding on their mother's back.

They were very tiny babies. They were so little that it was hard work to imagine them as swimming. Yet they could swim, for he had seen them when they left the nest. Of course, only such little babies could possibly hide on their mother's back. Just how they did it Peter couldn't see. At first he thought they simply snuggled down under the feathers of Mrs. Grebe's back, but presently Mrs. Grebe swam nearer and then Peter saw that it was not the feathers of the back that they were hidden under, but the rather long feathers of the shoulder close to the wing. They seemed to be enjoying their ride very much. Peter could see but three.

"Good morning, Mrs. Grebe," said Peter.

Now Mrs. Grebe was not in the least startled. Her eyes are very keen. She had seen Peter all the time. "Good morning, Peter," said she.

"I see you are giving some of your family an airing," said Peter. "Where are the others?"

"How do you know there are any others?" asked Mrs. Grebe.

"I saw your babies leave the nest," replied Peter. "There were six of them then. Has anything happened to the other three?"

As if in answer, a fourth little head popped out from among the feathers. Then a fifth and a sixth.

"Oh!" exclaimed Peter.

Just then one of the babies came wholly out and slipped into the water. His brothers and sisters followed. They seemed to be just as much at home in the water as their mother was. First one and then another would dive. Of course, they didn't dive very far and they were not under water very long. But to see such little fuzzy birds fearlessly going under water was something Peter couldn't get over. You know, he, himself, does not like the water. But these babies did. They were having the best time ever

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Marquette Auto

The new Marquette which will be offered to the public in the near future is an exclusively built and designed product of the Buick Motor company. The motor and nearly all of the other mechanical parts of the new Six will be built and assembled in units of the mile and a half long Buick plant at Flint, Michigan.

Preparations have been under way at the Buick factory since last December to house the manufacture of the motors for this new addition to the Buick line. One unit of the big plant, comprising 75,720 square feet of floor space has been given over exclusively to additions to this plant as such expansion becomes necessary. Other units of the Buick plant have been arranged to handle the production of additional Marquette requirements.

It is only through the practice of the most modern scientific principles of factory management that the Marquette is able to enter the medium price field. Buick has been able to hold the price of the car down in the range at which it will be offered by the additional use of facilities and machines already installed.

This plant economy is further augmented by the existing world-wide Buick distributing and service organization which has been in the making for the past quarter of a century and into which the new line will fit with a minimum of additional expense. These factors have produced enormous savings in the production and marketing of the Marquette and have enabled Buick to offer the new car at a price within the reach of millions.

However, all of the Buick factory facilities were not adaptable to the production of the Marquette, which is a distinctively new creation and Buick for many months past has been a heavy producer of shop equipment and specializing machinery. In addition to many other new mechanical installations a gravity carrier system has been installed in the Marquette motor assembly plant which is now in operation.

Breed Theatre

Richard Barthelmess, an adventurer of the high seas, has arrived at the Breed theatre. Last night a crowded house witnessed the opening of "Scarlet Seas," the First National star's newest feature.

Enthusiasm ran high and the general verdict was a favorable one, both for Barthelmess and the production.

Not in a long while has Barthelmess appeared to better advantage or in a more colorful role than as Steve Donkin, the roaming seaman whose lack of respect for "God or man" met the crucible of fate and found his soul therein.

The picture teems with action and production values. A fleet of ships was used and countless extras took part in the spectacular scenes "somewhere east of Suez" and on the high seas.

The sea sequentes were brilliantly executed and are of authentic origin. Types were evidently selected carefully and the story intelligently handled giving the tout ensemble a feeling of genuineness so valuable to the sincerity of a motion picture feature.

Several years ago Barthelmess was seen in another sea story called "Fury", and it has been a happy thought that gave him another story with such a background at this time. His success in "Scarlet Seas" should duplicate the long list of successes this popular star has already built up in the last two years such as "The Patent Leather Kid," "The Noose," and "The Wheel of Chance."

GAMBLING PLACE AT NEW LONDON RAIDED EARLY THIS MORNING

NEW LONDON, May 26—The police raided the gambling rooms at 5 State street, conducted by Athanasios K. Diamonddis, at 1:30 o'clock this morning and arrested Diamonddis charged with maintaining a gambling house. They also arrested Henry Cruz, Pasquale Viallaitis, Jose Pumarollo, Edward Gindna, Juan Santos, Peter Sugrea, Joseph Chicone, Christos Paul, John Boras, Mayinlo Carrasa, Diomicio Cruz, Thomas Humercilla, Severino Sringa and Juan Pedro, all of New London, Groton, Mystic and the submarine base, charged with frequenting. The police have known for some time that Diamonddis was proprietor of the resort and early this morning when it was known that many players were in the building, Sergeant John Courtney, Automobile Patrol Officer Clarence Martin and Patrolmen Edward Skoczylas, Braxton Hill and Frank Philopena entered the place and arrested the entire gang.

LOCAL RELATIVES AT NEW YORK ORDINATION

Rev. Daniel Joseph Shea, son of Mrs. Catharine Shea and the late Michael Shea of New York and a nephew of the late Cornelius Shea of this city, was ordained into the priesthood Saturday morning at 8 o'clock at St. Patrick's cathedral in New York. His eminence Patrick Cardinal Hayes ordained Rev. Father Shea who celebrated his first solemn mass at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament in New York Sunday morning. Three cousins of the young man Daniel, James and Dennis Shea of Winthrop street, and Patrolman James McKenna of Riverview avenue, were present at the ordination ceremonies. FATHER TIPPED POLICE WHERE TO FIND DAUGHTER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 26— James Darling, 103 Shaw street and Doris Chappell, Main street, were presented in the city court Saturday on a charge of lascivious conduct. Both pleaded guilty. Darling was fined $25 and costs and the young woman was fined $10 and costs and placed in the custody of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield. The arrest of Darling and the young woman, who is 20, was the result of action of the latter's father. He went to police headquarters at 4 o'clock Saturday morning and stated that his daughter had left home during the night and that he had reason to believe she would be found at Darling's home. Patrolman Braxton Hill went to Darling's and found the young woman nude in bed. Darling was attired only in his trousers, having provided himself with that portion of his raiment when the officer ordered him to open the door.

The screams of the woman caused the fellow to run away and residents who heard the cries notified the police. Broadway Theatre

When Maurice Chevalier, soldier of France, and lion of the continental stage, came marching into the silver-sheet at the Broadway theatre last night he gave his audience a great big thrill, and kept them enthralled every moment that his spirited voice—and body were before them. For with Chevalier it is not alone the animation of vocal tone which "gets" people, young and small—but it is also that temperamental language of the hands, the face, the feet. With Chevalier it is well, we might say just "it," but the man's artistry calls for a more elaborate definition. It is genius born of spiritual inspiration.

In his current, and first, movie—"Innocents of Paris," at the Broadway theatre, Chevalier plays the part of a happy-go-lucky push-cart singer of the Flea Market district of Paris. He gets a chance to go on the stage with his songs and pantomime, and the plot affords him every opportunity to present the gorgeous values of his full repertoire of songs—lyrics and ballads, which have established him in actual life as the reigning king of entertainment in Europe.

The picture is all-talking, and it might be added, all-Chevalier — but the work of his supporting cast is none the less adequate and pleasing. Sylvia Beecher, a beautiful young actress recruited from the stage, is the purveyor of the love interest with M. Chevalier.

SINGS FIRST MASS IN HOME CHURCH AFTER ORDINATION TO PRIESTHOOD

Rev. Richard Fanning, son of Mrs. Annie Mullin Fanning and the late Corporation Counsel Joseph T. Fanning, sang his first solemn mass here Sunday at 10.30 in St. Patrick's church. The young man had been ordained to the priesthood Saturday at St. Joseph's cathedral, Hartford, by Rt. Rev. John J. Nilan, D. D., bishop of the Hartford diocese, with twenty-one other candidates for holy orders. This had been a most inspiring ceremonial, witnessed by an immense congregation. Vested as deacons in amice, alb, girdle, stole and maniple, with a folded chasuble on their left arm, and holding a candle in their right hand, the candidates went before the bishop, kneeling in a semi-circle. Then the archdeacon, who was Rev. Joseph E. McCarthy, vice president of St. Thomas' Seminary, called the names of the ordinands, to come forward and receive priest's orders. After their solemn questioning as to their fitness for the great gift to be bestowed upon them, Bishop Nilan gave them their commission to offer sacrifice, to guide, to preach and to baptize. The hundred or more priests in the sanctuary joined in the litanies and other prayers when Bishop and priests laid both hands on the head of each ordinand in turn, continuing the custom which has prevailed from the days of the Apostles. There followed the solemn investing, the anointing of palms, and the other solemnities of the commission, in which Rt. Rev. Bishop Nilan gave his charge to the young candidates with customary vigor and earnestness. There was the resumption of the mass in which all participated, the communion of the newly ordained, the profession of faith by the new priests, finally the Gospel according to St. John, in which all joined. Then each young priest in turn gave his solemn blessing to the entire congregation. At the close of the service each blessed his relatives and friends individually.

First Solemn Mass

Sunday morning, in his home church, Father Fanning had as his deacon Rev. John J. Reilly, of St. Patrick's, the sub-deacon was a Norwich boy, Rev. Anthony Murphy, now chaplain of St. Francis hospital, Hartford. Rev. William A. Keefe, rector of St. Mary's was arch-priest, Rev. James A. O'Meara, of Montville was master of ceremonies, Rev. Myles P. Galvin was censer-bearer. Seated in the sanctuary were Rt. Rev. Msgr. John Neale, of Meriden and Rt. Rev. Msgr. Michael Henry May, rector of St. Patrick's. In the processional the candles were borne by Father Fanning's youngest brother, John G. Fanning and James Chester.

To give a young priest to the service of God is always a great joy to any Roman Catholic parish and the day was a festival event at St. Patrick's albeit of such solemnity. The Altar society had adorned the three altars and the sanctuary with flowers and decorative baskets of blossoms in white and tints of pale pink. The organist, Henry J. LaFontaine, selected Mozart's majestic Twelfth Mass to be sung by the choir, the soloists being Mrs. Bernard M. Coyle, Miss Sadie A. Driscoll, Miss Edialie Allaire, Horace F. Corning and Walter F. LaFontaine. Miss Driscoll's "Et Incarnatus," the "Quoniam Tu Solus" by Mr. Corning and just before the sermon Veni Creator sung by Henry J. LaFontaine were outstanding solos during the superb musical program. The offertory, Luzzi's setting of Ave Maria, was magnificently given by Father Fanning's cousin, Edward Vincent Gibbs, of Providence.

Later, following the mass and during the bestowal of his blessing by the newly ordained priest, Mr. Gibbs sang with beautiful phrasing and marvelous depth of tone, "Oh, Lord I Am Not Worthy." One of Mr. LaFontaine's interludes, at the offertory was "Hymn of the Nuns" (Wely) with judicious and effective introduction of the chimes.

An Eloquent Sermon

The rector, Monsignor May delivered the sermon his text from St. John 15-20, "You have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and have ordained you, that you should go and bring forth fruit and that your fruit should remain—as my Father hath sent me, even so I send you."

With nicety of phrase, masterly marshaling of facts, and cumulative points of evidence and authority, Monsignor May set forth the proofs of the divine commission received by the consecrated priest who is called as was Aaron. Saint Thomas has said that the priest of Christ has imprinted upon his character an indelible sign through his ordination. By divine authority he is vested with power which dwarfs such power as was that of Adam, of Moses, of Joshua, as they exercised power over material things. To him is given by Christ Himself the power, in the words of the consecration to call down Almighty God Himself to our altars; he is empowered to break the shackles of sin, to reconcile offending man to his God. He is the representative of Jesus Christ in the confessional, not through any merit or attainment of his own; but the Saviour who said "All power is given Me in heaven and on earth," has commissioned the chosen priest to continue the Redeemer's earthly mission, to teach, to preach, to sacrifice, to educate, to assuage human ills.

The priest has his own soul to save in the midst of a world of temptations, it is his mission also to save the souls of others. Though weak, yet is he made strong by the commission given him by God. It is his life-work to minister to the sick, to relieve the ills of the distressed, to aid the poor, to come in all things his Exemplar, Christ. Twenty-four hours of every day he must be subject to the calls of his people; aiding, inspiring, heartening, consoling, urging and leading them to truth, charity, humility, virtue, courage, loyalty to God and country.

Monsignor May made a beautiful and affecting reference to the significance of the services of the day, beseeching the earnest prayers of the great congregation for the young priest so recently receiving his chart and his commission to go forth to follow in the footsteps of his heavenly Master.

At the conclusion of the mass the people moved to the sanctuary rail, where each received individually the blessing of Father Fanning.

The ushers for the mass were John P. Corcoran, Alexander Kilroy, William J. McKnight, Leonard Desmond and Michael J. Murphy.

Later, at her home, 31 Lincoln avenue, the young priest's mother gave a breakfast for the clergy, relatives, intimate friends, her son's college mates and others.

There were present for this, people from Providence, Attleboro, Hartford, Springfield, Milton and Malden, Mass., Summit, N. J., New York, New Bedford, and other cities, all joining with the home folks in congratulating Father Fanning on the signal honor which God has bestowed upon him. At the breakfast Monsignor May said grace and at the conclusion of the finely appointed meal which was served by Mrs. Berkoff, the young priest made the brief prayer of thanksgiving, in which all joined.

The tables and rooms were adorned with exquisite spring flowers, many of them sent with best wishes and loving messages from friends and neighbors.

Tuesday, Rev. Father Fanning will go to Hartford with the other ordinands and it is probable that at that time they will receive from Bishop Nilan their appointments for the summer season at least. Father Fanning made his theological course of four years at St. Mary's seminary, Baltimore, following four years at Holy Cross college; he was graduated from Norwich Free Academy in '21, and was winner of the Newton Perkins medal in Latin in his class.

In Hartford, at the ordination Saturday morning, Rev. John J. Reilly was sponsor for Father Fanning. His usher at the cathedral, where pews were reserved for the family of each ordinand, was William B. Disco, Jr., of McKinley avenue.

TOLD OF TRIP TO MISSIONARY FIELDS

The intricate problems that the Baptist missionaries face, the work they are doing and intend to accomplish in the future with additional funds from this country were told by Miss Evelyn Cranska of Moosup in an address on the topic, "A Trip Around the World in Thirty Minutes," at the evening service in the Central Baptist church Sunday evening before a fairly large audience.

There is a great demand for higher education in Japan, said Miss Cranska, adding that over 500 young children were turned away from the Baptist missionary school at Tokio the semester she was there. There is no higher education for the women, she said, save what is given them by the missionaries.

Miss Cranska spoke of the large number of small children who are employed in the silk mills in the near east, many of whom become blind by reason of the terrible conditions existing in the mills. She said they worked from five in the morning until six at night, have no time for rest and never see the light of day, day in and day out. Miss Cranska pointed out that the missionaries are doing their utmost to adjust conditions for the better.

Ten out of 17 men in the cabinet of Japan are graduates of the Baptist mission schools, she continued. The natives are willing to carry on, if they get a little help from us, she said, in speaking of college in the Philippines. The young natives say to us, give us money, so we can go out and preach the gospel. What do we say? We haven't the money. We tell them the United States cannot afford to send the money.

Miss Cranska also gave her audience a sidelight on the pitiful sights in the near east. She also told of the eagerness of the children to acquire an education at the missionary schools and the congregations at church, so large that the windows and every available space are occupied by the worshippers.

CHORUS PRESENTS PURSE OF $50 TO DR. ERB

Friday night after the concert given by the Norwich Choral society, the third under the leadership of Dr. J. Lawrence Erb of New London, a purse of $50 in gold was presented to Dr. Erb in the name of the chorus by Miss Margarete Suck, a member of the committee, in appreciation of the gratitude of the chorus to their leader. A beautiful bunch of La France roses was presented to Mrs. Erb.

The concert of Friday night again has made Norwich people realize that it may well take a fine place among those cities which are constantly and untiringly bringing the best music can offer, in its most wonderful form, the ensemble of voices, before the public.

Norwich showed its thorough appreciation by the fine attendance and the generous and spontaneous applause offered. Naturally, the chorus as well as the leader and the committee, who, one and all, have worked untiringly and often against odds, feel highly gratified and much encouraged to find their efforts so well appreciated and there is firm determination to carry on the work so well begun.

This determination culminated to a promise at the last rehearsal when Dr. Erb informed his chorus that he was obliged to take a year's leave of absence, that he would not be able to continue his work as director of the Norwich Choral society next fall, and at the same time urging the members to continue the work, which had been such a pleasure and benefit to all.

It is with regret that the members realize this fact, because the hours of practice have been very happy ones, very profitable ones; they have helped to form a strong link among the singers and the leader, all working for the same end "to interpret the wonderful language of music," which accounts for the ease and responsiveness displayed in the rendering of such varied styles of compositions as presented on Friday last.

The committee of the society, having solicited the advice of Dr. Erb in regard to a leader for the next season, will meet in the near future to take the necessary steps so that the good work may be taken up early in the fall.

This was given by Arnold Smith, assisted by Gavin Pitt, secretary of the chorus, and Miss Viola Hill provided the incidental music.

After the pictures all marched upstairs to the young people's room, which was decorated in pink and white. A gold piece which was concealed in a bouquet of lilies of the valley was presented to Mrs. D. A. Pitt, leader of the chorus, the presentation being made by Perry Coles.

The opening ritual was in charge of Assistant Scoutmaster Ralph Smith. The troop inspection was in charge of the Scoutmaster Rev. George Warren Potter with the help of Asst. S. M. Smith. A song period was led by Assistant Scoutmaster Lewis E. Aldrich. The 100% duty pins were presented the following Scouts by the Scoutmaster: Senior patrol leader, Arthur Bennett; patrol leader, Wallace Wagner; asst. patrol leaders, Donald Olsen and Clayton Rose; bugler, Edward Jordan; scouts, Edward Gallagher, Arthur Beeman, Albert Eyberse, George Kinney and John Laskowski.

Corey, who besides being a life saver is assistant physical director at New London Y. M. C. A. While Mr. Corey did most of the talking the other two life savers demonstrated the work. He told of the swimming strokes and dives, he explained the holds and breaks to be used with a person near drowning, then described the various ways life saving is accomplished, beginning with the boat, the oars and the grappling irons. He also explained the method of artificial respiration.

Mr. Capell spoke briefly about a souvenir book issued by the New London Corps and then presented one to each person present. At the close of the demonstration hearty Boy Scout cheers were given each of the life savers. The attendance at the meeting was about forty.

MISS ANNE MORROW AND COL. CHAS. A. LINDBERGH MARRIED YESTERDAY

Ceremony Was Performed by Rev. William Adams Brown in the Morrow Home at Englewood, N. J.—Miss Morrow Wore a Simple White Chiffon Dress, Short Veil and No Gloves—Carried Bouquet of Blue Larkspur—The Honeymoon Plans of the Couple Were Kept Secret—Only Members of the Immediate Families Witnessed the Ceremony.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., May 27—(AP)—Miss Ann Morrow, daughter of Ambassador and Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, and Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, were married at the bride's home here this afternoon.

The bride wore a simple white chiffon dress, with short veil, made for her by Miss Mary Smith, the family dressmaker for years. She wore no gloves, but carried a bouquet of blue larkspur plucked from the Morrow garden, just beneath the drawing room window where the couple exchanged their vows.

Apparently decided upon the spur of the moment, the ceremony took even the most intimate neighbors of the Morrows by surprise and completely scooped the small army of reporters and news photographers who for weeks have looked forward to depicting the romantic event in great detail in print and picture.

Col Lindbergh and his fiance went for a ride in the early afternoon and stopped for a brief visit at the home of a friend in Englewood. Shortly after their return—barely time for the bride to change her chic motor ensemble for the soft chiffon—the small wedding party gathered in the drawing room and centered about the minister. There were no bridesmaids, no best man, no music, it was stated authoritatively. Just the brief ceremony of the Presbyterian church.

The complete informality of the wedding was attested by the fact that before it took place Colonel Lindbergh went into the garden of the Morrow home, picked a bouquet of blue larkspur and white columbine and handed them to his fiancee to carry at the ceremony.

The colonel wore the same dark blue suit in which he had appeared on all of his visits to Englewood.

Besides the bridal couple and the clergyman five people were present at the wedding. They were Ambassador and Mrs. Morrow, their daughters Elisabeth and Constance, and Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, mother of the aviator.

Lindbergh and his bride left the estate at 4.30 p. m. General Morrow and Dr. Brown left two hours later, and at 7:30 the ambassador motored to the home of his brother, who also resides in Englewood.

So far as could be learned, Colonel and his bride told nobody where they were going when they left.

LINDBERGH ORDERS HIS PLANE SERVICED

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., May 27—(AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh has ordered his Blue Falcon plane serviced for a takeoff tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock, or possibly earlier.

Although the colonel had given orders this morning that his plane be serviced, the fact did not become known until tonight, after announcement had been made in Englewood, N. J., that Lindbergh and Miss Anne Morrow had been married at her home there.

Officials at the field said the plane was serviced during the day and tonight was ready for a flight. Beyond confirmation of reports that the colonel planned to take off at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning, or possibly earlier," nothing further could be learned regarding tomorrow's flight.

NO DETAILS GIVEN WITH MARRIAGE ANNOUNCEMENT

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., May 27—(AP)—Ambassador and Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow late today announced the marriage today of their daughter Anne to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

The announcement said simply: "Mr. and Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow announce the marriage of their daughter Anne to Charles A. Lindbergh at Englewood, N. J., May 27, 1929."

No details were given, the reply to questions in every case being "that is all."

News of the wedding came as a complete surprise. No advancement of the date had been made, although there had been many newspaper guesses, most of which had favored mid-June.

It was all the more surprising since every large newspaper of this section and some considerable distances away have besieged the Morrow estate since the family first moved there this month and followed them to the Maine summer camp and back. In addition, many news picture agencies have kept photographers in close proimity for weeks.

Apparently the "Lone Eagle" dodged all the best efforts of this army of observers for from no source during the day came anything indicating that he had arrived at the home or that there were any preparations for a ceremony today.

Ambassador Morrow arrived only yesterday from Mexico City and instead of a wedding announcement, it had been expected that he and Mrs. Morrow soon would make public a date for the ceremony.

Since the formal announcement that the ceremony had taken place, however, it was recalled that only a short time after the ambassador drove through the guarded gates of his estate here from his train yesterday, Col. Linbergh and his mother arrived in the colonel's automobile, drove at once to the house and remained for two hours. During their visit some of the watchers reported that a man of clerical appearance also arrived at the estate and immediately was admitted. This combination of events was taken by the observers to indicate that arrangements for today's ceremony were made immediately after the ambassador arrived.

When the ambassador stepped from his train at Newark yesterday, efforts were made to obtain some indication of the wedding date, but to all queries he courteously replied that he had "nothing to say." He drove with Mrs. Morrow and their daughter, Constance from Newark to his estate here and from the time of his arrival no word was forthcoming from the home until formal announcement of the wedding was made late today.

AN OUTLINE OF THE LINDBERGH ROMANCE

NEW YORK, May 27—(AP)—A quiet young man who "isn't a bit sentimental and doesn't care for girls" spent Christmas of 1927 as guest of Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow in Mexico.

The fact that his flight to Paris the preceding May had idolized him in the hearts of feminine America had served only perhaps, to make him all the more retiring—even to the point of bashfulness.

But in the seclusion of the ambassador's home, near the capital of a nation whose traditional adjective is "romantic," he found refuge from the plaudits of the world and became again, even if temporarily, a private citizen. In this setting he met the diplomat's 22-year-old daughter Anne, pretty and brunette, who had been graduated from Smith college the preceding June.

Charles A. Lindbergh, whose paramount interest is aviation and who dislikes to talk about anything else, found that she, too, was intensely interested in flying.

Soon the colonel was taking her for short flights. He returned to the Morrow home whenever possible, and they went for strolls or drives together through the picturesque country.

Rumors of a romance for the calm young colonel began to float about. At first they were undecided whether to attach to Anne or her elder sister Elizabeth.

Along in November appearances began to favor Elizabeth, whom Lindbergh had met at the same time he met Anne, and who, it was pointed out, was the more sober of the two and hence more the colonel's "type."

But in Mexico City they still thought Anne would be the future Mrs. Lindbergh, despite all denials. When Lindbergh took off from Valbuena field last November for the United States, he gave Anne a beautiful and daring aerial salute. She was at the field with her family, and Lindbergh, after climbing to a little height, circled and dipped low over her head.

Some three months later Ambassador Morrow, who previously had reminded inquiring newspapermen that the matter was, after all, rather personal, announced the engagement.

Former President Plutarco Elias Calles, a friend of the young couple, was delighted to learn the news.

His daughter, Ernestina (Mrs. Thomas Arnold Robinson), who had been one of the first to suspect the romance, merely remarked:

"I told you so."

EFFORT TO OVERCOME FARM RELIEF DEADLOCK

WASHINGTON, May 27—(AP)—Leaders in congress gave serious consideration today to overcoming the deadlock in the farm relief conference committee over the export debenture plan as a part of agriculture legislation.

There was no immediate reaction from their discussion to indicate that an early agreement would be reached but most of the conferees expressed the opinion that the difficulty would not prove insurmountable.

The senate members of the conference committee said they would stick squarely by their opinion that the house should agree to give a general discussion to the two farm bills passed separately by the house and senate and report a disagreement on the debenture section. The house members on the other hand said they would decline to negotiate until the senate members agreed to the elimination of the plan.

The committee was not called by Chairman McNary today but indications were that a meeting would be held soon. Meantime the parliamentary situation is considered to be such that another vote in the senate on the debenture plan seems probable. Leaders who have made a check of the senate membership declared there had been no defection from the debenture roll as it stood when the debenture plan was agreed upon last month.

POCKET VETOES BY THE PRESIDENT UPHELD

WASHINGTON, May 27—(AP)—The validity of pocket vetoes by the president was upheld in a unanimous decision handed down today by the supreme court, regardless of whether the legislation in question was sent to the white house in the closing days of a session which was not the final session of a congress.

The court, in an opinion summarized by Justice Sanford, construed the word "adjournment" in the constitutional provision relating to vetoes as meaning the end of any congressional session as well as of a congress. It held that congress, before ending a session, must give the president the ten days granted him by the constitution to act on bills passed or else assume responsibility for the failure of those on which he does not act.

The case in which the decision was rendered involved the Okanogan and other Indian tribes in Washington, which had failed in an effort to have the court of claims hold that a pocket veto had not killed a bill relating to claims held by them.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

CANTON, China, May 27.—(AP)—Five transports bearing 8,000 fully equipped troops that deserted the Kwangsi cause arrived today from Hankow and anchored off Shamten, the foreign colony. They came presumably to assist the defending Kwangtung armies and 8,000 more are expected shortly.

BRESLAU, Germany, May 27.—(AP)—A lockout of 50,000 Silesian textile workers began yesterday. The workers refused to accept lower wage schedule in the spinning mills and the employers rejected demands for higher pay in other branches of the industry. Depression of the Silesian textile industry during the past few months had already thrown 10,000 other operatives out of work.

LONDON, May 27.—(AP)—The English racing world was shocked to learn of the death of Aubrey Hastings, 51, famous trainer of steeplechasers who collapsed and died Saturday after playing polo at Cirencester, Gloucestershire. Hastings prepared Billy Barton for his grand national efforts and the Marylan horse still is at the Hastings-training quarters at Wroughton. Hastings trained four grand national winners.

ENDURANCE FLYERS TO BE WELL REWARDED

FORT WORTH, Tex., May 27—(AP)—Reg L. Robbins and James Kelly today began to reap some of the rewards in store for them as the new holders of the world's endurance flight record.

Rested by a long sleep after completing 172 hours, 3 minutes, one second of continuous flight in their single motored monoplane Fort Worth, the air men awoke today to find presents and lucrative offers pouring in on them.

The acclaim and bids for their services were in sharp contrast with the little aid the former railroad mechanic and the erstwhile cowpuncher received in preparing for the endurance test.

Scores of offers for vaudeville engagements, newspaper and magazine articles on the flight and various positions with aircraft concerns were received.

Robbins and Kelly had not decided what course to follow, but friends expressed the belief that they would go on an aerial "barnstorming tour."

Robbins and Kelly will receive $5500 each from the Fort Worth association of commerce and $5,000 will be divided between K. K. Hoffman and H. S. Jones, who refueled the endurance ship during its flight of more than seven days which ended Sunday afternoon.

Approximately $2,000 will be paid to Robbins and Kelly by aircraft companies which offered the men $100 an hour for each hour they exceeded the former record of 150 hours 40 minutes, 15 seconds set by the army monoplane Question Mark.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BALD HEADED CLUB

CHESHIRE, Conn., May 27.—(AP)—When they put their heads together the effect was as eggs in a basket.

They were the bald heads, come together as the Bald Headed club of America for the 17th annual time in Waterman's Waverly inn, here tonight. Lacking a combat point on their heads, they seized upon the latest discovery—a hair 500,000 years old and plucked from a fossil—and split hairs over it.

And when they had finished, President D. N. Clark, of Shelton, his term expiring delivered a hairless farewell, while the members voted for L. P. Case, of Winsted, to succeed him.

Patrick FitzHenry, of Waterbury, objected to Mr. Case for president because he had not taken him on a hairless fishing trip, as E. R. Stevenson, of Waterbury, was moved to remark that it was the first time he had known Patrick FitzHenry to object to a case, a bald headed one at that!

Most of the evening was spent in inspection of heads, to see whether this one or that had lost a hair or two since the last meeting in Bridgeport, or if those who had got into the club on false pretenses—by claiming potential bald headedness—were entitled to remain members. Stevenson admitted he was parading under false guise, for his cranial coverage is still the same mop that it was 12 years ago when he entered the club.

Choosing carefully— to make certain no member who was not totally bald became an officer—the club elected Robert L. Chamberlain, of Greenwich, its first vice president; C. L. McNeil, of Torrington, second vice president; I. A. May, of New Haven, secretary and William F. Peet, treasurer.

PLANE MISS MINNESOTA FORCED DOWN FOR FUEL

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 27.—(AP)—The monoplane Miss Minnesota, forced down today when its fuel supply was exhausted during an attempt at an endurance record, narrowly missed crashing, an hour prior to the end of the flight.

The plane barely escaped a crash as Gene Shank, the pilot, pulled out of a dive less than 100 feet above the earth.

Miss Minnesota ran out of gas after an attempt to refuel had failed. During the attempt a weighted rope hanging from the refueling plane became entangled in the elevator of the plane and sent the ship diving toward the ground. Quick work by Shank prevented a crash, but the refueling plane lost its entire load of gasoline.

For more than an hour the Miss Minnesota, damaged, continued to circle the field until her fuel was exhausted. Then Shank landed the craft in a farmer's pasture, a mile and a half from the Robbinsdale airport.

ELDERLY WOMAN STRUCK AND KILLED BY AN AUTO

Warner is being held on complaint of the witness pending a further investigation.

Violent Decline In Securities Prices

Result of Decline in Wheat Prices and Pessimism Over the Credit Outlook.

NEW YORK, May 27—(AP)—A bad smash in Chicago wheat futures, which carried the May option below $1 a bushel for the first time in 15 years, coupled with the growing pessimism over the credit outlook, were held responsible for another violent decline in securities prices today on the New York stock exchange. Seventy-five stocks dropped $5 a share, or more, a few of the high priced specialties falling $12 to $32, while the general level of bond prices sank to the lowest point in years.

Measured by the Associated Press indices of 50 leading industrial and 20 leading rails, the reaction was not quite as severe as last Wednesday's but it brought the industrial average down to a new 1929 low. The index of 20 leading utilities dropped 6.2 points as against 3.9 on Wednesday, but it is still 20 points above the year's low.

Much of the early selling originated in the middle west and probably represented liquidation by speculators to protect margins in grain, but as the session progressed and prices drifted steadily lower with no signs of a rally, hundreds of impaired marginal accounts were sold out and a powerful short interest built up. At their closing prices today, many of the popular industrials and rails were selling $25 to $75 a share below the year's high levels, while a few high priced specialties were down $100 to $200 a share under the year's peaks.

There was no change in the credit situation today. Call money renewed unchanged at 6 per cent and held steady at that level all day but time money rates continued firm around the highest levels in nearly 10 years.

FELTOVIC SENTENCED TO DEATH FOR MURDER

BRIDGEPORT, May 27.—(AP)— For the first time since January 13, 1921, the death sentence was pronounced upon a convicted murderer in Fairfield county today, when Judge Isaac Wolfe, who retires from the bench upon reaching the age limit this fall, ordered in criminal superior court that John "Spirits" Feltovic, of this city, be hanged at the state prison at Wethersfield, on July 15. Feltovic, who is 19 years old, was convicted by a jury of the murder of Lester Jacobs, manager of a chain grocery store, in this city on March 25, last. The jury deliberated one hour and six minutes.

Feltovic received the verdict and the pronouncement of sentence more calmly than most persons in the courtroom.

The verdict marked the culmination of one of the speediest first degree murder trials in the state of Connecticut and Feltovic is the youngest person to be sentenced to death in this state.

Counsel for the defense filed a motion to set aside the jury verdict as contrary to the evidence and against the weight of the testimony.

Judge Wolfe will pass upon this motion at a later date. A denial of the motion will give the defense the right of appeal to the supreme court of errors, meeting in session in June in New Haven.

Mrs. Willebrandt Is Expected To Resign

As Assistant Attorney General in Charge of Prosecution of Prohibition Cases.

WASHINGTON, May 27—(AP)—Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, the first woman to be appointed to a high government office, soon is expected to retire as assistant attorney general in charge of the prosecution of prohibition, narcotic, internal revenue and customs law violations.

While her resignation has not yet been submitted to President Hoover, friends of Mrs. Willebrandt said today she probably would leave the justice department next month to return to private law practice. For some time she has had under consideration important offers from several large law firms.

Mrs. Willebrandt is enroute to Waco, Texas, to accept a degree from Baylor university, and the expectation is that she will formally tender her resignation soon after her return and take up law practice in the east, although her home is in California.

Friends of Mrs. Willebrandt, who frequently has held the spotlight of publicity both in connection with prohibition cases and politics, said she had wanted to retire at the end of the Coolidge administration, but had consented to continue in office because of the rather large number of changes in the high personnel of the department of justice which had to be made after the change of administrations.

Since last March 4 general but wholly unconfirmed reports have been that Mrs. Willebrandt was not wholly satisfied with her own situation in the department. One report was that she wanted full authority in prohibition prosecution cases since she was to have full responsibility.

Another was that if the prohibition unit were transferred from the treasury to the justice department, as President Hoover has proposed, she desired to have personal direction of the legal aspects of the enforcement work, with the large legal staff in the unit placed under the direction of her division.

There also had been reports that she wished to have administrative charge of the whole unit, but this her friends deny emphatically, asserting that she had no desire to become an administrative official. Such reports were circulated in congressional circles and were followed by talk in some quarters at Capitol Hill of a filibuster on the transfer legislation if the unit as a whole went into the prosecution division.

Appointed by President Harding in September, 1921, Mrs. Willebrandt more than once came under attack because of moves made in prohibition enforcement, more recently in connection with raids on New York city night clubs and her suggestions to dry court attorneys that the terms of the recently enacted Jones law be applied only in commercial bootleg cases.

Mrs. Willebrandt was one of the original supporters of Herbert Hoover for the presidency and was active in both the pre-convention and regular presidential campaigns. She was assailed for an address during the campaign before Methodist ministers at Lorain, Ohio, in which she attacked former Governor Alfred E. Smith on the prohibition question.

MRS. WILLEBRANDT WOULD NOT DISCUSS THE REPORT

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 27—(AP)—Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt refused to discuss reports from Washington that she intended to leave the attorney general's office. She was here for three hours this afternoon on her way to Baylor university, Texas, to receive an honorary degree.

"I'd rather not discuss it," was her only reply to questions. She asked where the report originated and was told from several sources, drawing the comment, "Washington should be called the 'windy city.'"

DISSENSION AIRED AT CONVENTION OF FRANCO-AMERICAN UNION OF CONN.

HARTFORD, May 27—(AP)—The smouldering of a quarrel which for several months has been threatening the existence of the Franco-American Union of Connecticut, central organization for 40,000 members of French societies in this state, burst into full blaze in the convention of the union at Lyric hall here this afternoon.

Ostensibly, the 148 delegates debated the authority of the executive committee to name Hartford as the site of the convention, originally set for Taftville, after delegates from the latter town had requested a postponement until November. By vote of 82 to 77, a motion for adjournment was defeated, thus upholding the executive committee.

Members of the union, however, admitted that the quarrel meant that the disagreement over parish funds which embroiled French organizations in Rhode Island about five years ago had spread into Connecticut, despite continual efforts to keep the question out of the organizations in this state.

The agitators against the use of parish funds for Catholic high schools in the Rhode Island case, in which the diocese was finally upheld by court decisions and by a decree from Rome, have turned their attention to gaining control of the St. Jean-Baptiste society, according to some members of the union.

A national convention of St. Jean-Baptiste, will be held at Burlington, Vt., in October. The defeated faction in today's contest wished a postponement of the union convention, in which St. Jean-Baptiste is one of the larger societies represented, until after the Vermont convention. Thus it was charged, they believed that in the event of their faction gaining control of St. Jean-Baptiste, the union would be under obligation to support their policies.

Boos and cat-calls frequently interrupted the speakers this afternoon, and at times three or four speakers were on their feet at once, exchanging informal arguments until brought to order by President Omer Tellier, of Taftville.

The issue primarily at stake was injected into the convention at the first business of the day following the roll call, when Ernest P. Beaurexard, of Hartford, moved for adjournment.

The debate, entirely in French, continued for more than three hours. Taftville delegates, together with their followers, insisted that the executive committee had no power to name Hartford as the convention city, after Taftville had been chosen in the 1926 convention.

Executive committee members, however, pointed out that the convention had first been set for October of 1928, that one postporcement had already been granted the Taftville members, and that when a second was requested only one week before the date set, it was imperative that a site be chosen by the executive committee.

Aproximately 150 attended a banquet of the union at the Hotel Bond tonight. Michael J. Dalkie acted as toastmaster, and the speakers included: Henri T. Ledoux, of Nashua, N. H., president of the St. Jean-Baptiste society; Lucien San Soucl, of Woonsocket, R. I., editor of La Tribune; Assistant Corporation Counsel Philio H. LaFleur, of Hartford; Albert E. Trothier, vice president of the Franco-American union; Rev. Ulric Bellerose, of Putnam and Mr. Castonguay.

NEW FIGURES PREPARED BY REPARATIONS EXPERTS

Technicians Have Worked on Computations That May Revive Negotiations—The Difference in Actual Payments Between the Two Points of View Would Be About $151,200,000—An Endeavor is Being Made to Reconcile the Divergent Opinions.

PARIS, May 27—(AP)—Technicians worked through the night on computations that the experts of the reparations conference tomorrow may use them to give new life to the negotiations.

Owen D. Young and his staff today gave vigor to the committee, which was considered moribund at the end of last week, by examining with other experts a new possibility of a way out of the deadlock between the Germans and the allies.

The operation most favored takes the form of a new calculations as to what the annuities originally proposed by Mr. Young would yield if they began at other dates than April 1, 1929, which was the basis for the original calculations. The experts tonight would not reveal what the new dates were.

The creditor experts still insist that payments under the Dawes plan must continue at least until the end of this year, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht holds to his demand that they cease with April 1929.

The difference in actual payments between the two points of view would be about 630,000,000 marks (approximately 151,200,000). The creditors relied on this additional sum to enable them to agree on a reparation of payments among themselves which would permit acceptance of the young annuities.

Since Dr. Schacht rejects this view it is necessary to find some way of reconciling the divergent opinions.

WIDOW ARRESTED WITH PART OF $75,000 LOOT

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 27—(AP)—The arrest in Hutchinson, Kas., of Mrs. Minnie Rayl, prosperous widow residing there, and recovery from her possession of part of the loot taken in a $75,000 bank messenger car holdup here last Friday led today to identification of a man held as a suspect in the robbery. Bob Thompson, 23, the elder man's foster son, and Mrs. Bob Thompson, were being held for questioning. The two men were arrested at Seminole Saturday night and Mrs. Thompson was brought here today.

SELLING SENDS GRAIN PRICES TO LOW LEVELS

CHICAGO, May 27—(AP)—Dollar wheat, once the hope and of late the dread of the farmer, became his ambition again today as a flood of selling swept grain prices to record low levels.

May wheat was submerged to 98 3-8 cents on the Chicago Board of Trade, a drop of 2 5-8 cents from Saturday's closing price and the lowest price for May delivery since September 1915, when a sale at 93 cents was recorded. Six years ago cash wheat sold at 36 in July.

Wheat today was for sale at prices 50 cents a bushel less than a year ago and more than 30 cents under the peak of the season in February. Since then wheat has been on the toboggan, the skids greased by an almost immovable surplus of the commodity left over from last year's enormous North American crop.

That surplus remained the prime factor in the glutted market. Every price reduction and freight rate cut here has been met by competing prices in Canada and the Argentine, and prevailing estimates today held that 350,000,000 bushels would be carried over at the end of the crop year, throughout the world.

MEETING TODAY OF THE LAW ENFORCEMENT COMMISSION

WASHINGTON, May 27—(AP)—Members of President Hoover's law enforcement commission were gathering here tonight for the first and organization meeting to be held tomorrow in the cabinet room at the executive offices.

George W. Wickersham, chairman of the commission, who has been a guest at the white house since Sunday, will preside and the expectation is that each of the ten other members will be present for the first discussion of procedure during the afternoon.

The president will have the ten men and one woman as luncheon guests at the white house and is expected to meet with them later in the cabinet chamber to express his views as to the scope of the work that is to be undertaken.

Mr. Hoover has said he regards the problem of lawlessness in the United States as the foremost problem before his administration. Among his ideas of how it is to be met is one for reorganization of the judicial and law enforcement machinery, a gigantic task within itself and one which will require months of investigation and study.

ANOTHER DELAY IN THE PROPOSED OCEAN FLIGHTS

OLD ORCHARD, Me., May 27—(AP)—Cross winds and rain toward mid-Atlantic today caused another day's delay in the proposed flight of the Green Flash to Rome.

MEMORIAL DAY PLANS HAVE BEEN ANNOUNCED

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 27—The recent re-organization of the American Legion post coupled with a consciousness of the ever decreasing numbers of Grand Army veterans are causing an unusual amount of interest locally in the plans for Decoration day. For some years past, or since the abatement of the feverish enthusiasm immediately following the close of the great war, the legionnaires have been but thinly represented in the impressive exercises. This year, however, there are some 100 members prepared to participate. The Civil War veterans will be led by James Haggerty, state commander of the Connecticut department and youngest surviving veteran in this state.

The graves of 477 veterans will be decorated during the day in the various Windham cemeteries. The morning pilgrimage to the "three Windhams" and St. Joseph's R. C. cemetery will start from the town building at 7:30 o'clock with Lieutenant Jeremiah McCarthy of A. C. Tyler camp, No. 8, United Spanish War Veterans as marshal. Music will be by the Elks' band and the veterans will be accompanied by a platoon from Company C, 169th Infantry, a number of Boy Scouts and friends. The customary route is to South Windham, Windham Center and over the back road to North Windham will have to be altered this year owing to reconstruction work now under way on the back road. The detour will be from Windham Center via Brickton road and Lafayette street in lower village to the North Windham highway. From the North Windham cemetery the procession will countermarch to St. Joseph's cemetery, where one of the priests of the parish will invoke prayer and deliver a short oration. Rev. H. H. Critchlow of the local Methodist church will speak at the Windham cemeteries.

Upon returning to the town building the Woman's Relief corps will serve their annual dinner to the Grand Army veterans.

The afternoon procession from the town building to the Willimantic cemetery will be under Major Joseph R. Morrison of the First Battalion, 169th Infantry, Connecticut National Guard, who has named the following aides: Lieut. Jeremiah A. McCarthy, Robert O. Snow and Fred N. Flagg, Spanish War veterans; and T. Frank Cunningham, Albert J. Piche and Charles H. Reynolds, World war veterans.

At the cemetery the main oration of the day will be delivered by Captain Frank P. Fenton, Spanish War veteran.

The afternoon procession will be in three divisions made up as follows: First: Platoon of police, marshal and staff, B. P. O. E. band, Company C, 169th infantry, C. N. G., Garde Sacred Heart, Boy Scouts; second division: Knights of Columbus Boys' band, World war veterans, Spanish War veterans; third division: Band, Anne Wood Elderkin chapter, No. 23, D. A. R., James J. Shea unit, No 13, American Legion auxiliary, A. C. Tyler auxiliary, U. S. W. V., Francis S. Long Woman's Relief corps, No. 28, Gold Star mothers, disabled veterans of the World and Spanish war, Grand Army veterans in automobiles.

The line of march will be up High, down Valley, down Jackson, up Union and up Main to the cemetery.

Of the 477 graves to be decorated 345 are of Civil war veterans, 32 Spanish-American war, 37, World war, 32 of the war of 1812 and 24 of the Revolution.

Following is the necrology list for the year, numbering ten: Charles H. Clarke and John F. Lennon, Civil war, buried in the Willimantic and St. Joseph's cemeteries, respectively; William E. Jackson and William J. King, Spanish war veterans buried in New Willimantic and St. Joseph's cemeteries and six World war veterans: Captain (Dr.) Owen O'Neill, Harry A. Noel and Henry J. Kelley, buried in St. Joseph's cemetery; Elmer W. Morse, buried in Willimantic cemetery; Frank L. B. Grant, buried in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Arthur H. Packer, buried in Mt. Hope cemetery, Mansfield. Timothy Gilion, member of Francis S. Long post, No. 30, G. A. R., who died a short time ago, is buried in a Pawtucket, R. I., cemetery. The grave of one allied veteran, Thomas Ogden, in the new Willimantic cemetery is also to be decorated as well as those of 18 Windham soldiers buried out of town. The American flags and markers will be placed at the graves this week by committees of the various organizations.

BIG COURT BUSINESS FOR MANSFIELD JUSTICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 27—Justice of the Peace Byron D. Houston of the Mansfield town court disposed of four automobile violation cases at a session of the court held in the Spring Hill town hall this afternoon. All of the cases represented arrests made by State Policeman Henry Heinold of the Stafford Springs barracks, three of them involving drivers for the Universal Trucking company of Bridgeport. Grand Juror Walter F. Storrs acted as prosecutor.

Frank Allaire of 78 Lee avenue, Bridgeport, was fined $10 for having defective brakes, $5 for failure to have a mirror on his truck and $5 for not having a horn. The total was $31.70 which was paid.

Francis J. Moran of 1115 Penbroke street, Bridgeport was fined $25 for reckless driving and $5 for failure to have a mirror on his truck. The total was $36.70

Luther M. Green of North Scituate, R. I., another driver for the Bridgeport trucking concern was fined one dollar and costs for failure to have a license. His assessment was $12.70. All three pleaded guilty.

The fourth case was that of Stephen Kiss, Jr., of Mansfield, who was fined one dollar and costs on each of two counts: not having an operator's license and no registration. He pleaded guilty and paid a total of $13.70. The arrest in this case came about Saturday in a peculiar manner. Kiss was out trying his Ford car before having secured the proper credentials and was traveling along the Warrenville highway when he spotted State Officer Heinold approaching from the opposite direction. This caused Kiss to become nervous for fear he should be stopped by the officer and in his hurry to turn up a side road he drove the machine into sand and it turned completely over, pinning Kiss and his younger brother underneath. Officer Heinold helped extricate the men. All in sympathy he asked Kiss what had caused the accident for which there seemed no plausible reason. Kiss explained the circumstances and was consequently notified to appear in court. Kiss sustained a cut on his arm while his brother escaped injury.

The equipment includes a battery of eight dynamic loud speakers that literally "spray" the large playhouse with a veritable barrage of sound and music in perfect synchronization with the actions portrayed on the screen. The Capitol theatre which was declared by experts, including D. W. Griffith who visited here a few years ago, as a happy "accident" for accoustical perfection is unusually well adapted for sound movies as indicated in the presentations of the past few days.

Fire alarm signal No. 33 sounded about 3:45 p. m. Monday, called the Ahrens-Fox motor pumper with Fire Chief Egger and men down the Westerly-Watch Hill road to the home of Cora M. At the rear of the brick house, formerly the sub-station of the Westerly and Weekapaug line of the Shore Line Electric Railway, the firemen found the flames had practically consumed the brooder house and of its population of about 150 chicks only eight scarred survivors remained. An attempt had been made to fight the fire with a small garden hose for some time before the fire department was called but a strong wind blowing at the time made the work fruitless. The recall was sounded at 4:15.

TWO PERSONS SLIGHTLY HURT WHEN CARS COLLIDE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 27—Cars operated by Treasurer Clifford H. Starkweather of the Danielson Trust company and by Alfred A. Lord, of 230 Hillside avenue, Pawtucket, were in collision at Brooklyn this morning, and as a consequence of the accident John H. Hennessey, whose business address is 230 Fifth avenue, New York, and whose home is in New Jersey went to the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam for observation, as did Lord. Hennessey was a passenger in the Lord car. Mr. Starkweather escaped without anything more serious than a shaking up. This afternoon Hennessey was able to leave the hospital, but Lord remained as a patient to receive treatment for cuts on the head, arm and knee.

Mr. Starkweather, resident at Terrace farm on a road leading out of Brooklyn to Pomfret, was coming out of this dirt road onto the state highway near the Hyde place this morning just as the Lord car came bowling along from the direction of Danielson at a good rate of speed. The Starkweather car was out in the state highway when the Lord car crashed into it. State Officer Elton Nolan who checked up the case ordered Lord to appear in court to answer to a charge of failure to grant the right of way. A good testimonial as to the value of having non-shatterable glass in a windshield was the manner in which the shield in the Lord car came through the accident. It bears two outward bulges, as though the heads of the men in the machine had butted it, and a crack, but it did not break or splinter.

Oiling of Danielson's streets was at a standstill today because of an unusual pair of happenings. A big tank truck, with heating apparatus, that has been in use here the past week in oiling operations was ordered out of here by the owners yesterday to go onto another job at Stamford. It started out, went off the highway and down a bank near Portland, this state, and the two men with it went to a hospital in Middletown to be treated for their injuries. To replace this truck another was ordered yesterday to proceed here from Springfield to be ready to resume the oiling work this morning. At Munson this truck was struck by a train at a grade crossing and completely wrecked, and one of the men riding on it so severely injured that it was said today he was not expected to live. First Selectman Charles A. Tillinghast said this forenoon that another truck of the oiling company had been ordered here and was expected to arrive today.

Landlord W. S. Brown of the Attawaugan hotel is confined to his home at his fine Shepard Hill farm near Wauregan as the result of being attacked yesterday by a pure bred bull that is the sire of his thoroughbred herd of cattle. Mr. Brown, who will be incapacitated for from two to three weeks, has several broken or cracked ribs and various painful contusions and abrasions, but considering his unfortunate experience is fortunate to be alive. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Brown took the bull, a huge animal weighing about 2600 pounds, from where it had been picketed on a section of lawn near the Brown home, to replace it in the box stall in the barn. Customarily when Mr. Brown does this he has one of his farm hands at the stall to assist in stabling the bull. Yesterday he was alone, and as he entered the stall with the bull the animal lowered his head and butted him low down on the right side and then, evidently, ran his head upwards. The fact that the bull has been dehorned protected Mr. Brown from being disemboweled. Mr. Brown was rendered unconscious and when he came to found the bull, which had refrained from trampling on his body, peering intently down at him. Mr. Brown managed to get out of the stall without again being attacked and called for help. He was assisted to his home and Dr. J. L. Gardner of Central Village called to attend him.

The late hours of Sunday produced a considerable grist of business for the town court to dispose of this morning. Ernest Giarard of Boylston, Mass., charged with reckless driving, was fined $25 and costs by Judge W. Fenner Woodward, $20 of the fine being remitted. With costs the accused paid $18.50. Giarard explained that he was traveling at a high rate of speed that he might quickly reach the bedside of his sister, reported to be in a dying condition in a Worcester hospital.

John Krous, 18, of East Douglas, Mass., was found guilty of operating a motor vehicle while he was intoxicated and was fined $100 and costs. Not having a sufficient sum with him, Krous was held at the barracks for several hours after court until a relative could come from East Douglas with the money and pay the charges imposed by the court. Merril Baer, 19, was fined $1.00 and costs for operating an unregistered car, and John Zela $5 and costs for having been intoxicated.

Another case scheduled for a hearing this morning, but continued until Monday of next week is that of Patrick Minihan of 846 Main street, Willimantic. Minihan was ordered into court late Sunday afternoon following a collision at Main and Stearns street between his machine and one driven by Henry M. Day of Pomfret. Minihan will be charged with failure to grant the right of way and with operating a car while he was intoxicated. Minihan denies having been drinking and has retained Attorney Harry E. Back as counsel to appear for him when the case comes up for a hearing.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock at L. E. Kennedy's funeral home, funeral services for Francis J. Jaeger, veteran of the Civil war, who died in Ashaway, R. I., were conducted by Rev. Chester J. Armstrong of the Baptist church. Relatives and friends, including comrades of McGregor post, G. A. R., Sons of Veterans and members of McGregor W. R. C., were in attendance. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were De Forest Wells, Elmer Keene, Frank Moore and Kenneth Warren, representing Colonel Edward Anderson camp, Sons of Veterans. This morning at 10 o'clock at the home in Ashaway a service was conducted by Rev. William Simpson of the Baptist church in that place. A prayer also was read by Mrs. Mary E. Wright, representing Harriet Beecher Stowe tent, No. 2, L. O. V. U. C. W., of Westerly.

What appeared to be a well verified rumor that the former quarters of the Brooklyn Savings bank in the Phoenix block are again to be occupied by a financial institution were current here today, but no one in a position to discuss the matter with authority would talk about it for publication. There has been a bank in the quarters mentioned for many years, it having been occupied by the Windham County National bank before that institution moved to its present home, thereafter being taken over by the Brooklyn Savings bank until that institution occupied its new building on April 1.

John Babbitt, 11 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Babbitt of North Grosvenordale is recovering from serious injuries sustained by him Saturday afternoon when he was struck by a motor bus. The youngster is at the Day Kimball hospital in this city. It was said today by the hospital officials that the lad has improved somewhat since the casualty and will regain his health unless unforeseen complications set in.

Young Babbitt was the proud possessor of a new toy automobile and on the occasion of the collision with the bus was driving his toy on a side street near an intersection of the state highway. The motor coach was proceeding north at a moderate rate of speed when suddenly the youth darted across the street. The driver attempted to avoid hitting him by steering clear of his path. The boy started back and in doing so pushed the toy into the path of the bus. The front wheel hooked into the little auto and crumpled it under its weight and throwing the boy to the side of the road. An examination at the hospital disclosed his injuries as consisting of a number of fractured ribs and bruises about the body.

Although conditions are not alarming at present, circumstances are now existing in the towns of Woodstock and Thompson whereby it will be necessary to continue to enforce the rules of the quarantine on dogs in Putnam Warden Ernest L. Chandler said this morning.

THE COUNTY HOME SITE.

When the county commissioners decided to acquire the site for the county home that has been obtained from the board of trustees of the Norwich state hospital, at what was formerly the site of the Davis place on the brow of the hill overlooking the latter institution, it was in keeping with the desire that the home be retained within the limits of Norwich and it is believed that it will receive general approval.

Certainly no more attractive site could be sought. There is a beautiful view down the Thames river and across to the hills of Montville and Ledyard in addition to the view back over the southern part of the city, west of the river. At any season of the year there are many reasons to pause and view the surrounding landscape, whether one is a stranger or a local resident.

Furthermore the site will place the institution on an improved road where it will have the benefit of bus though not trolley service, where it will be able to obtain city water from the main which runs to the state hospital and where it will be able to sewer into the Thames river. The location is one which will give plenty of freedom for the institution's children on high ground where plenty of the best air will be obtainable.

The willingness of the hospital trustees to give up what was acquired with the idea of utilization for the site of a new superintendent's home some day, is to be commended. It displays the proper spirit and cooperation and means the retention in Norwich of the county home which has been here ever since it was established back during the days of County Commissioner Ayer who sold his property on Smith avenue for that purpose.

With the appropriation which has been provided there should be an imposing structure erected at a point where the permanency of the home should be insured and the inmates properly cared for. It should mean a modern home in all respects, a credit to the county, and it is to be hoped that that will also mean a fireproof building.

In relocating the home in Norwich and placing it where they have, the commissioners have acted wisely and well.

THE COUNTRY ROADS.

The prediction has been made that the old country roads are going, that they are to give way to the modern highway because they have no place in the present day transportation scheme.

If those who live in the country were so confident of it as the prophet there would be much rejoicing, for it is to be realized that those who live on such roads have long been clamoring for relief. They know, as no one else, what the ordinary rural road is. They know it from long experience and because it is impossible for them to avoid it. They are desirous of better roads even though they are not demanding cement highways and are not seeking that the picturesqueness of the country road be eliminated by big cuts and straightening operations. What the country resident is seeking is a road that can be used with reasonable safety and certainty at all seasons of the year. To them it will be a happy day when the predicted change takes place.

Attention has been concentrated on getting the main thoroughfares in shape to take care of the present day traffic and do so expeditiously. Hard surfaced roads have been built over long distances and they are needed to take care of motor vehicle traffic, but for the accommodation of the ever increasing road transportation it is important that other avenues of travel be opened. The country roads in many instances are in a position to offer much relief if they are put in proper condition, if they are given attention as to better foundation and better grades.

The country road is the objective of many motorists who want to get away from the congestion of the main thoroughfares and who delight in the charm of country roads. The demand isn't that such roads be despoiled as to scenery or widened beyond the bounds of reason. It isn't expected that they will be cemented, but there is a reasonable demand for so surfacing them that the present day objectionable features will be eliminated and there will be something more than a quagmire in the springtime.

It is not solely for those who like to drive on country roads that this should be done. The legitimate plea or attention comes from those residents who must use such roads before they can use any other.

WHEN THE BRITISH VOTE.

While Memorial day is being observed in this country the British election will be going on across the water and the expectations are that there will be a big display of interest. It is an election in which it has been made clear that there is a larger number of women than there are men voters. It is not from that situation so much as from the belief that the time is ripe for a change that so much enthusiasm has been displayed during the campaign.

At the present time the conservatives are in the saddle. They have had full control of parliament during the present regime and they are desirous of retaining it. On the other hand the laborites and the liberals believe that there is an opportunity for them to make substantial increases and they have shaped their course in that belief. They have waged a campaign that is calculated to break down the conservative majority and they are confident of results.

The election is going to revolve about the unemployment situation, and if the responsibility for it isn't placed at the feet of the conservatives they are going to get the blame for not providing a remedy for it. The situation exists and there is no doubt about it. Whether the conservatives were responsible for it is not likely to enter into the question with many of the voters. Consideration may not be given to that point, but inasmuch as it exists, the conclusion will be reached that someone else ought to be given a chance to remove it as long as the conservatives have failed. On that basis much voting will be done on Thursday.

If the laborites and liberals can take enough seats in the house of commons away from the conservatives neither party may be able to secure a majority, but it will force the conservatives out of power and make a coalition government necessary. That can hardly be regarded as a desirable thing because it means anything but permanency and will require another election in a short time, but it is the way of getting rid of the conservative government. Whether there will be enough of an upset on Thursday to switch control is now the big question.

RURAL CHANGES.

It makes little difference what the state is in the eastern part of the country it is possible to find evidences where former occupants of farmland have left certain localities without others taking their places. This is not only true of the states but also prevails in the provinces of Canada.

The reasons for it are many, but Dr. H. C. Taylor, director of the rural survey in Vermont takes the view that "To have retained Vermont's rural population in numbers as great as formerly in the face of the decline of the lumbering industry and in spite of the economic necessity of consolidating small farms into larger ones suited to modern commercial agriculture, and to have maintained this population in spite of the fact of a great decline in the size of families, would have been an economic disaster. The fact that the rural population has not been maintained is a mark of progress, showing the power of adjustments to new conditions."

Condition have changed and people have changed. In many states those who formerly occupied the farms that are without occupants have passed on, their families are scattered and engaged in something other than agriculture and those who might in other days have been interested in getting their living in that locality are drawn elsewhere. Developments in other states have made agriculture a different proposition than it was in the early days, and yet it is not to be overlooked that there are still opportunities for those who will employ modern methods to do much with idle land in eastern states in this day and generation.

ENDURANCE FLIGHTS.

Endurance flights depend upon the machine and upon the operators. Weather conditions can help or hinder. When it was demonstrated that refueling was possible in the air the way was cleared for the performance by the Question Mark by which aviators remained in the air for a record-breaking period. There was no reason to expect that it would not be exceeded. In fact it was accomplished under those conditions which made it certain that it would not be long before others would set out for a new mark and do so with every expectation of reaching the goal.

That has been accomplished by the monoplane Port Worth. Its operators felt the restraint of their quarters, but they stuck valiantly to their task. They demonstrated that refueling was no longer one of their handicaps. They were favored by good weather and as long as the engine continued to function they were content to see the mileage pile up and the hours roll by. The result is that they are the holders of the endurance record temporarily. They had hoped to do better than they did and would have but for the trouble that developed with the propellor. They were aloft for over 172 hours, pushing the record ahead almost a full day, but while they are receiving the plaudits for their accomplishment others are out to beat it.

Success or failure in such efforts must depend upon the ability of the operators to stick to their long grind and to the continued operation of the engine. Just as long as man and machine can keep going and fuel can be provided flight can be sustained. It is getting so that it will not be long before it will be weeks instead of days by which these endurance flights are measured.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Gradually President Hoover is finding out what kind of a senate he has on his hands.

Mrs. Knapp of New York is planning to "clear her name." That being possible, why, oh why, did she ever let it become otherwise?

We used to talk about a "winter's coal supply, but present day experiences show that it is an "all year round" supply that is needed.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, May 27—Connecticut has been accorded a very high and valuable office in the appointment of Col. Earl D. Church of Hartford as commissioner of pensions just sworn into office.

Secretary of the Interior Wilbur paid a high tribute to Col. Church in talking with newspaper men about the appointment, saying he had made the recommendation largely on the experience Church has had in insurance matters and his general knowledge of what is needed in pension matters. Col. Church, who held a major's commission in the World war, received a distinguished service medal for gallantry in the Argonne defensive, and will come to the pension commissionership with a war record of his own that will be very valuable to him in gaining the confidence of those under him. Senator Bingham took the leading part in recommending Col. Church for the position.

Senator Bingham will deserve all the laurels that can be thrust on him for pushing the Washington air port to a finish. President Hoover believes Washington, as the capital of the nation, should have a port that can be made something for the rest of the country to live up to. Senator Bingham feels the same, and as he is chairman of the airport commission he is doing tremendous work to carry on the work as quickly and as thoroughly as possible, the selection of a site and commencement of the work. Senator Bingham will introduce immediately a bill asking for an appropriation of $500,000 for the establishment of the port. Senator Bingham believes the appropriation should be turned over to the national park commission to negotiate for the land, as the best means to avoid a possible hold up in purchase of land for the site, or unfair prices. "If the commission has the handling of the purchase we shall know exactly what we can get and what it will cost" added Senator Bingham. There are six sites now under consideration.

The appointment of First Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett of New Hampshire to the Canadian boundary commission, where he will be accorded the chairmanship, is good news for the many New Englanders here who were insistent Bartlett should be retained by the president in some important capacity, when they found he was not to be named postmaster general, as many had hoped would be done.

The Canadian boundary commission this year takes on added importance as before it will come the proposed St. Lawrence waterway project.

Representative John Q. Tilson has this week received a commission from President Hoover to be colonel in the ordnance department of the U. S. army. Col. Tilson will be on duty only when specifically ordered to active duty, but then will have all the power and authority of a colonel of the United States army.

Col. Tilson has a fine war record as well as an enviable record in congress. As having served in the Spanish American war, held the office of lieutenant colonel in the Connecticut infantry and as ordnance expert of the military affairs committee of the house during the World war, Col. Tilson was selected by Presidents Harding and Coolidge to act in a confidential capacity as an observer as to conditions in Europe after the war had ended. And now his commission places him in the line of active duty, when ordered.

If President Hoover could order dismissal of senators and members of the house, whose work he did not regard as satisfactory, as he did in the good old days when he was secretary of commerce, the farm bill and a partial revision of the tariff would soon be passed and in a form "to the queen's taste."

It's a new thing for the president to be merely one of three equally powerful branches of federal government, instead of the entirely responsible head of a branch of a branch, as when he was chief of a department. And what did President Hoover do when he found congress was running up against so many snags that his carefully prepared program seems likely to fall to the ground? Well, he went fishing. Just packed up his kit, took along a few friends and hied himself to the tented camp in Virginia, far away in the woods and by the side of the best trout stream hereabouts.

He permitted no newspaper correspondents to make the trip, so no one can tell whether he placidly fished or "took it out" on every fish that nibbled the bait.

No one can predict when or what the tariff, farm bill and reapportionment will pass congress. Predictions run all the way from August 1st to December first. Floor Leader Tilson laughed yesterday when asked to predict a date and said "You might as well ask me how long is a string?" Another leader replied, "How old is Ann?" to the same question. And that's all they know about it.

President Hoover is still carrying faint traces of that famous "black eye" he got down at his tent fishing camp a week ago. They say he had to stand exactly as much quizzing and ragging and as many "where did you get it? or try raw beefsteak," as if he had been a mere private citizen instead of the chief executive of the nation. And as the president's automobile got stuck in the mud, on that trip and had to be pulled out by a mule team, some folks even suggested "Did the mule do it?" Anyway, the dignified and distinguished president of the United States went round a few days with a black eye that would have done credit to Jeffries. But the whole fishing party told the same story of a low hanging tree branch having committed the indignity.

"The massing of colors Sunday, was a patriotic religious ceremony participated in by the bishop of Washington, and the chief chaplains of army and navy, with men of the World war sponsoring the magnificent service.

One hundred flags in mass formation under a color guard, were at the head of the processional. They were followed by 41 large groups of the clergy, and various groups representing organization flags. A religious service followed in which the bishop and the chaplains took part. Kipling's "Recessional" was made a part of the closing service; a bugler sounded "taps". Following the benediction the bugler sounded "to the colors," and the ceremony, after patriotic and religious music by the Marine band, closed with "Star and Stripes Forever." More than 20,000 people attended the ceremony, which took place in the open amphitheater of the cathedral.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Jahncke says he will not feel at home as long as he is addressed "Mr. Secretary" and gave out a strong hint, that if he could choose a title, he would retain the one by which he is best-known down in his home state of Louisiana, which is "Commodore." That comes from the fact that he was commodore of the crack yacht club down at New Orleans, and the title suits him to a T. Of course there is no danger of getting him confused as commodore is no longer used as a naval title. While to the general public it may seem as if he had something big in mind, "it makes me feel at home," as the secretary says, is probably the true reason.

I recall that the late Secretary of War John W. Weeks of Massachusetts, responded most quickly and with the broadest smile to his title of "captain" which he earned between his graduation from Annapolis and his entrance into political life. He became entitled to congressman, "Mr. Secretary" and Mr. Senator, but somehow he loved best of all to be called "Captain Weeks"—and most of his old time friends called him captain, even though higher titles were his by right.

They say that Secretary Jahncke grous first into his confidence about his preference, and that he had to stand a good deal of guying on the score that the next thing would be that he appointed himself "admiral."

It's nip and tuck between Secretary of the Navy Adams and Assistant Secretary Jahncke, as to which has the best and longest record as an amateur yachtsman.

THE RING AND THE LOOK.

John O'Connell Peterson, cashier of the Fifth National bank, combed his graying mustache adjusted one of the new ties that had been bought especially for these two weeks at the seashore and went out on the boardwalk. Mrs. Peterson stayed in the hotel. And John could not imagine what was the matter with her. They had planned this trip to the seaside for months ahead. Now that Jimmie was out of college and Mary married, they felt they could afford it, the first time they had been able to take a "really classy vacation," as Mrs. Peterson put it.

There had been two weeks of turmoil in preparation. The old baggage simply wouldn't do and there were so many clothes to buy. Then everybody in town, it seemed to John, had to have a special "good-by" visit. You might have thought that they were going to China, and that for five years!

Well, here they were, and it was quite evident that Emily Peterson wasn't having a bit of a good time. At first her husband, anxious, disappointed, tried cross-examination.

"Aren't you feeling well, Emily?"

"I'm all right, John."

"Don't you like this hotel?"

"It's fine."

"Don't you like the sea air or the beach?"

"They are lovely,"

"Well, then, what's the matter?"

"Nothing."

But something was the matter Emily could deny it if she would. All the enthusiasm she had displayed before the trip had somehow melted away after they had been at the seashore aday or two. She didn't want to bathe in the ocean; she didn't want to ride in the wheel chairs; she didn't want to walk the boardwalk. When they met the Angelos, from home, she exhibited little interest in them.

"I thought I understood Emily after all these years," said John Peterson to himself as he walked with the speed of irritation down the boardwalk, "but I'll be darned if I do!"

With increasing annoyance he passed by a group of the garish buildings which lined the boardwalk, the bowling aleys, rug auction salesrooms, soft drink and salt water taffy emporiums that characterize the "seashore" as much as the waves themselves. A sign atop a fantastically decorated booth made him pause.

"Are you in trouble?" said the sign. "Consult the oracle inside. The oracle will advise you briefly and cryptically what to do; but you will understand. Consult her; 25 cents."

Half angry at himself for being so foolish, John tossed a quarter on the cashier's sill, then entered through papier mache Greek columns into the temple of the oracle. Inside, in the semidarkness, amid hangings of an indefinite color and texture, burned an antique oil lamp on a stone-topped table. Beside it was a pencil and pad. A poster instructed: "Write your question here and pass it through the slip in the floor to the oracle."

John had never felt quite so foolish in all his days. He wrote briefly about Emily, deposited his slip, waited. Soon the answer came back, a card about the size of a special delivery stamp. It read, in a rather scrawly handwriting, "Watch her eyes."

It it were possible, John felt even sillier than ever as he stared at Emily, that evening, across the table in the hotel dining room, and yet—how could he keep from trying it out? He watched Emily's eyes. They seemed quite normal to him, same nice eyes they had always been.

They had reached the dessert course when he thought he detected a change of expression in Emily's face. It deepened into a look of dismay. He looked at her eyes, followed their glance across the room. What was she looking at? She looked and at her hands, then once more across the room. Then she very palpably sighed.

John's eyes followed Emily's. What was on her hands? What was it across the room? Hands—Mrs. Angelo sitting at table with her husband—Emily's hands—Mrs. Angelo's hands—by George—could it be possible? He had it!

"Emily," he said, "I think that gold wedding ring of yours is getting a bit old-fashioned. I think maybe we can afford one with diamonds, like Mrs. Angelo, in memory of this second honeymoon."

"You darling," whispered Emily, across the table. "I think it would be wonderful. Let's go walk on the boardwalk when you've finished your coffee. I believe there's a moon."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Another Question.

Mr. Editor: Why is it that more of the taxpayers' money is thrown away by our gas and electrical department? I received a circular letter through the mail signed by the past secretary of the board of gas and electrical commissioners more than one week after his retirement.

If $3,000 a year is not enough for the general manager, pay him $10,000, or $15,000, but why use the taxpayers' money to furnish capital to make a job for the general manager's son.

Opposed to Revised Charter.

Mr. Editor: Those questions regarding the city charter in today's Bulletin are timely. We need enlightenment on what is proposed, and we haven't received it.

As I understand it it is not a new but a revised city charter, one with the various amendments made over a long period of years brought together, and then some changes made.

It is about these changes that the citizens have reason to show some concern. One of them, I understand, makes the city clerkship an appointive instead of an elective office, creates a full time office with a fat salary, for no work and in my opinion Norwich has no more need of it than a cat has for two tails. It would be much better to combine it with the city treasurership and let one official serve both offices.

The same is true about the probation officer. We have no need for a full time probation officer.

Little has been said in regard to these efforts to slip something over on the people. The proposed changes are certainly not the result of a public demand and in the belief that there may be other similar jokers in the revision and other salary boosts which are not called for I am going to register my opposition election day by an emphatic No. As much as we need a new, up-to-date charter, the present effort in that direction is an awful joke.

As a citizen, I believe that the changes provided in the revised charter furnish the best reasons for refusing to accept it.

Memorial Day

Mr. Editor: How the years do roll along. We look forward to the coming of the year of our majority, and after we reach that time, we note the years are getting shorter; at least they seem so. And it seems but yesterday when I stood on Washington street in Norwich and saw a few of those old Boys in Blue as they moved slowly along in a motor car, for they had arrived at that mile post on life's journey that made them realize that nature must be assisted. To me how different they looked, for I see another picture. I see them as the years roll back when they were just on the threshold of early manhood, full of life and vitality. And now with the lapse of years they appear, old, bent, and with the weight of years upon them. Your heart is touched with a sense of reverential gratitude for you see in these men, not mere men, but the saviors of your country, the defenders of your flag, heroes every one of them. It is their day, Decoration day, May 30th, when in every little village and town these few remaining boys carry on that labor of love for those who have gone on before. And this will continue until the last one remains and taps are sounded and he, too, will look forward with a Christian's bright anticipation of a glad union on the other side. In the southland those other Americans have their Memorial days on April 21st and 26th when they too, gather together to render the same labor of love as do their brothers in the north. Today as we look upon the happenings of those days, no one can dispute the honest valor of those brave men on either side, for they were Americans, although for a time divided in their opinion. But we do know they too fought as true Americans to protect their homes, as we did in the north. Those Boys in Gray fought for the cause they thought was just and that old sectional feeling has gone. Today there is only one country and one flag, that glorious old emblem the Stars and Stripes, and as those Boys in Blue hear that old inspiring strain, The Star Spangled Banner you can see again the flash in their eye as we old timers did in 1861 to 1865, and today we who follow after can do no less than honor those glorious old Boys in Blue, who offered all, gave all, as Americans either by birth or adoption, for they placed on the altar of their country, their loyalty and their devotion.

And when those soldiers are passing by whether they are the Boys in Blue or the Veterans of the World war and their company flag is waving in the breeze take off your hat, stand at attention.

And the one who carried the burden of this terrible war was the immortal Lincoln. I think perhaps you young people of today love to listen or at least read a story of Father Abraham. Here is one that was told by Lincoln himself, and it shows the courage and grim humor of those Boys of 1865. There was a soldier of the army of the Potomac being carried to the rear with both legs shot off, who happening to spy a pie woman asked her if the pies were sewed or pegged. It seemed neither death nor danger could quench the grim humor of those Boys in Blue.

You no doubt are aware that those boys came from every station in life and the story is told of a young soldier, a farmer boy, who fell asleep at his post. He had been condemned to be shot, but Lincoln, commenting on it, said: "It is not to be wondered at that a boy raised on a farm probably in the habit of going to bed at dark, should when required to watch full asleep, and I cannot consent to have him shot for that act." The sequel of this act of mercy was brought to light when the dead body of this boy was found on the field of Fredericksburg. And next to his heart was found a photograph of Lincoln, across which he had written "God bless Abraham Lincoln."

The Civil war, Spanish-American and World war veterans with their united efforts kept the old flag of our country still waving over the "Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave."

Proper Treatment of Hay Fever

By Aaron Brown, M. D., New York.
(From Gorgas' Memorial Institute.)

Seasonal hay fever is due to the irritation of the lining membranes by pollen grains, the pollen being the fertilizing agent of plants. This pollen is carried to the plants either by the air or by insects. The important thing to remember is that only those plants that are pollinated through the air are factors in causing seasonal hay fever, because the pollen is light in weight and profuse in amount and may be carried by the wind for considerable distance. The pollen of plants carried by insects is heavy and scanty in amount and affects people only by direct contact. Flowers that are bright colored or white can be disregarded as factors in seasonal hay fever because these are insect-pollinated and are of little importance in causing seasonal hay fever.

There are two main varieties of seasonal hay fever: The early or spring type and the late or fall type. Early hay fever is caused by the pollens of the grasses, the principal ones being timothy grass, plantain, orchard grass, sedge, sweet varnal, June grass, sorrel, red top and corn. Early hay fever lasts from May 15 to July 15. A small percentage of people may suffer in April or early May. Here we find that tree pollens are the cause of the trouble, the offending trees being the ash, beech, birch, hickory, oak and poplar.

Late hay fever lasts from Aug. 15th to frost. Most people are free of symptoms before Oct. 1st. Late hay fever is due to the high and short ragweeds.

The treatment of seasonal hay fever consists in first determining the pollen or pollens that affect the person, and secondly giving injections of solutions of extracts of these pollens in gradually increasing amounts. These extracts are simply solutions of the pollens and are harmless. We test the affected person by applying solutions of the pollen to the skin, and so determine not only what pollens affect the individual but also how sensitive the person is. Proper treatment depends upon making a correct diagnosis. Treatment is best started eight or ten weeks before the expected onset of the disease, and injections are given from five to seven day intervals to build up the patient's resistance before the pollens begin to fly. These injections are continued throughout the season.

In general, by this treatment we can offer some measure of relief to over 95 per cent of our patients, 25 per cent being entirely relieved, 50 per cent being moderately helped. In only 3 to 5 per cent of our cases are we, at the present time, unable to be of any aid.

The following rules are useful for hay fever patients during the season:

1—Limit your exposure to pollens by (a) staying away from the open fields. If you must go into the country, go in a closed car.

2—On hot, dry and windy days you will be more comfortable indoors. If you go out, use a pair of goggles.

3—Nights hang a wet sheet over the open window or use a little electric fan with its current directed against the open window.

4—Do not have flowers in the house in hay fever season.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 27—The gray, dingy old pile on Pennsylvania avenue housing the state and war departments now is to have its memorial to heroes of peace as well as war.

It is an imposing structure, despite an architectural aspect out of keeping with either ancient or modern art standards. It has long been the place of deposit for tributes of one kind and another to the memory of gallant men who gave their lives in battle for the flag.

The building even boasts a bronze tablet in memory to the horses and mules killed in action in France. And now it is to have somewhere about the endless corridors a similar reminder of the score or so men in the diplomatic or consular services who died tragic deaths on duty.

The list goes back to 1790. In that year Col. William Palfrey of Massachusetts, appointed, according to the yellow old records, "consul to reside in France," sailed in December on the U. S. S. Shillala. The ship was lost at sea, Palfrey with her.

Imbrie Honored

The last entry on this roll of honor was Robert W. Imbrie of Washington, D. C., murdered by a mob of fanatics at his post as vice consul in Teheran, Persia, in 1924.

Between those two names runs the long record of tragedy at sea, in earthquakes or other great disasters in far countries, and of Americans shot down in the exercise of their peaceful duties.

After Palfrey, for instance, came Joel Barlow of Connecticut, minister to France in 1811. It was his mission to pursue Napoleon into Russia, seeking to discuss with the emperor of the French terms of a new treaty with the United States.

Barlow was caught in the horror of the French retreat from Moscow. He died of privation and exposure at Zarnowice.

Six Lost at Sea

Besides Palfrey, six others were lost at sea en route to or from their posts. These included Alfred L. M. Gottschalk of New York, consul general at Rio de Janeiro, gone to the port of missing ships with the collier Cyclops in 1918, that strange modern sea mystery.

There also is listed Robert N. McNeely of North Carolina, lost when the S. S. Pessia was torpedoed in the Mediterranean.

James A. Holden of Massachusetts, consular agent in Santa Domingo, sailed homeward aboard a Gloucesterman in 1827 and was never heard of again; John E. Meircken of Pennsylvania went down with the Lafayette in West Indian waters in 1832; Edward W. Gardner of Massachusetts, lost en route home from Samoa; Rounseville Wildman and his family of California, lost with the S. S. Rio de Janeiro at the entrance to the Golden Gate in 1901.

It is a long list of peace soldiers killed in action. And it has taken nearly a century and a half for some of them to be recognized formally for what they were.

Burgess Bedtime Story

A Diving Family

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Each has his own peculiar art,
Which fits him best to do his part.
—Old Mother Nature

The six babies of Mrs. Grebe had climbed up on her back and were once more riding around as she swam with them. Peter Rabbit, who was watching them, began to wonder what would happen if some danger suddenly appeared.

"If Mrs. Grebe were alone," thought Peter, "she would dive. But what under the sun would she do with those babies? I think I'll ask her."

So, when Mrs. Grebe was near enough, Peter did ask her. "Supposing Mrs. Grebe," said he, "danger should suddenly appear, what would you do with those babies?"

"Take them with me out of harm's way," replied Mrs. Grebe promptly.

"But you couldn't do that!" cried Peter.

"What's the reason I couldn't?" demanded Mrs. Grebe.

This was too much for Peter. "Well, I don't see how you could," said he, rather lamely.

Mrs. Grebe chuckled. "It's the easiest thing in the world," said she. She glanced over her shoulder. All the babies were hidden under the feathers. She looked over at Peter. Then, without a word, she dived in that sudden way a Grebe has. Peter gasped. He wondered what would happen to those babies. A moment later he saw Mrs. Grebe come up on the other side of the Smiling Pool. She swam back to where Peter was.

"Where are your babies?" gasped Peter.

First one little head, and then another, appeared, as if in answer to Peter's question. The babies did not seem at all surprised at what had happened.

"Did—you take them with you all that distance under water?" demanded Peter.

"Certainly," replied Mrs. Grebe. "Why not?"

"But—but—" Peter didn't know what to say. It seemed to him that this was the most remarkable family he had ever seen. It was just as if Mrs. Grebe had pockets and had carried her babies in those pockets while she swam under water. She chuckled as she watched the expression on Peter's face.

"You know," said she, "we are a diving family."

"I should say so!" exclaimed Peter. "It really is nothing at all," said Mrs. Grebe, "to swim under water. I believe in teaching children at an early age what they must know when they grow up. Now these babies of mine are no more afraid under water than they are above water. If I couldn't carry them with me under water, what chance would they have to live to grow up?"

Peter shook his head. "I don't know," said he. "They certainly are most surprising babies. I never was more surprised in my life. It is certainly very nice for them. Do you always carry them that way under water when you dive?"

The eyes of Mrs. Grebe twinkled. "Not always just that way," said she. "Perhaps some day I'll show you how I take them another way. I see Dipper over there now and I really think he ought to have a look at his children. Good by, Peter."

Again she dived and when she came up she was right beside Dipper. Almost at once the babies slid from her back and began swimming around her.

COOKING EXPERTS MAKE DISCOVERY

Decide by Unanimous Vote in Favor of Cooking Vegetables in a Small Amount of Water with the Addition of Sugar

Unusual cooking tests were conducted recently in New York by a group of famous cooking experts. The purpose of the experiments was to discover the most delicious of all ways for cooking vegetables.

The various ways of cooking vegetables were tried. Ordinary seasonings were used, and experiments were made with varying amounts of water. Then sugar was tried. In every case cooking vegetables in a small amount of water, with sugar, won the unanimous vote of the experts.

Add a dash of sugar in cooking spinach, use little water, and note how much better the spinach tastes.

Put two cups of shelled peas and four scraped and sliced young, tender carrots in just enough water to cover, adding a tablespoon of granulated sugar. When nearly tender, add one chopped, small onion and a tablespoonful of butter. Add salt and pepper and a dash of sugar. Simmer until the onion is cooked.

The use of sugar can mean that children and adults can be encouraged to eat enough of these healthful foods.

Use a dash of sugar in cooking peas, lima beans, string beans, corn, carrots, beets, parsnips, sweet potatoes, squash or onions, and notice the added delicacy of flavor. Most foods are more delicious and nourishing with sugar. The Sugar Institute.

MOTHERS now learn value of MAGNESIA

Because it is so helpful in keeping babies and children healthy and happy, every mother should know Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

This harmless, almost tasteless preparation is most effective in relieving those symptoms of babies and children generally caused by souring food in the little digestive tract, such as sour-belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, colic. As a mild laxative, it acts gently, but certainly, to open the little bowels in constipation, colds, children's diseases.

A teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia does the work of half a pint of time-water in neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding and preventing hard curds. Its many uses for mother and child are fully explained in the interesting book "Useful Information." It will be sent you, FREE. Write The Phillips Co., 117 Hudson St., New York, N. Y.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

"Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor, Chas. H. Phillips, since, 1875.

Leaving a trail of cases and soda water bottles between Boswell avenue and Norwich avenue, narrowly missing hitting two men on Norwich avenue but colliding with a telegraph pole near No. 1 mill of the Ponemah company at Taftville, John Wisneske, 26, of 102 Roath street, this city, was arrested in a garage in Jewett City about 12:15 o'clock this (Tuesday) morning on charges of driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor and evading responsibility.

Wisneske is charged with being the driver of a Reo truck, owned by Lucy Glowacki of No. 16 Soule street, Jewett City, loaded with soda bottles in cases which was driven over Boswell avenue in such a manner that three cases and bottles were thrown into the street. Continuing on to Taftville, the truck narrowly missed hitting two pedestrians, and then collided with and broke off a telegraph pole about four feet from the ground. The driver failed to stop, but, after hitting the pole, left a trail of 22 cases and soda bottles in the street.

The local police were notified and State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh and Serat. Matthew Delaney of the local police department, started on a search for the truck driver. They trailed him to Jewett City and found him in a private garage in that place. He was sitting behind the wheel, in a stupor, when found by the officers.

Wisneske was brought to local police headquarters and after being booked, was locked up for the night. He will appear in the city court this (Tuesday) morning.

DEMOCRATS CRITICIZE CHARTER POINTS DEMOCRATS PROPOSED

Recent published reports that the democrats proposed to make political capital out of what they term defects in the revised city charter which comes up on a referendum vote at the city election in June brought the comment Monday from one who was familiar with the work of the charter commission that points to which the democrats are said to object were all of democratic origin.

Objection to the charter, it was reported, was to be made by the democrats because of its provision for a full time city clerk, a bi-ennial election and the payment of salaries to all the city commissioners. These, it was pointed out, were all suggestions made by democrats, when the charter revision commission asked to have citizens submit suggestions while the commission was at work upon the revision. The points which the democrats have elected to attack would thus appear to have been suggestions made by democrats who thought them advisable to have included in the charter.

The provision for the appointment of a full time city clerk, instead of a part time as at present, is said to be objected to on the part of the democrats on the grounds of expense, as it is expected the salary for such a service would be from $1,500 to $2,000. It was the thought of the commission, it is understood, that a full time city clerk would be a step towards putting the city business on a better business basis. With the city clerk on duty all the time, he would be able to keep the city's business affairs and common council records and property on a much better system than ever before, he would be a source of information for the mayor or citizens at any time in regard to public business. As to comparative expense, it is claimed that a full time city clerk would cost not so much more as the present clerk is paid a salary of $750, there is $20 a month more paid to a woman typist in connection with the work of the office, and the printing of the council journal costs $750 yearly, much of which it is claimed, could be saved with the full time city clerk, who could keep on file in his office many matters which now are printed in the council journal, such as the detailed bills of departments and other matters.

In connection with this change in the office of city clerk, it is understood that the commission was given assurance by Weston C. Pullen, the present city clerk, that he would not be a candidate for the office if the citizens voted approval of the revised charter.

One of the provisions in the revised charter is to make the mayor ex-officio a member of all commissions, and this, it is claimed, would tend towards more efficient city government through possible coordination in the work of different departments, which otherwise might pursue their work independently, because of each not knowing what the other was doing.

The suggestion that all members of city commisisons be paid salaries would put members of the park board and recreation commission on the new salary list. While the city was under democratic control, the members of the common council voted themselves salaries for attendance upon meetings and the members of the water board and gas and electric commissioners already are paid for attendance upon meetings.

An assessment clause in regard to sidewalk, paving and other street improvements, which would allow assessments upon property owners benefitted by the improvements has also been said to arouse opposition on the part of the democrats. It is stated, however, by one familiar with what the commission did that this is nothing new, but this assessment power existed in the old charter, but has rarely been exercised.

When the revised charter was presented in the legislature, only one change in the charter was made there. The revision had set a salary of not to exceed $500 for the probation officer. The words setting the amount of the salary were stricken out, but a check upon what may be paid is furnished by the provision that the amount must be approved by the mayor and the judge of the city court.

TO DECIDE RIGHTS IN GROTON IRON WORKS CASE

A mandate was filed last week by the circuit court of appeals at New Haven, reversing the decision made by Judge Edwin S. Thomas in the case of P. LeRoy Harwood, trustee in bankruptcy for the Groton Iron Works, against the United States shipping board. The case began as a suit against the Fleet corporation for $13,000,000 for alleged breach of certain shipbuilding contracts.

It was tried in the U. S. court at New Haven, where it was decided that the bill should have been brought in the court of claims against the United States government, as the contracts were government contracts, and that the great bulk of the claims were in any event settled by a contract containing a general release.

The circuit court of appeals reversed the decision that the Fleet corporation could not be sued on the contracts but affirmed the decision that the great bulk of the claims were settled and released by the new contract.

The case has been remanded to determine the rights of the parties as to transactions subsequent to the settlement contract and arising under that contract only. It is not known yet whether or not the case will be taken to the supreme court of the United States.

Life of Bunyan at Y. M. C. A.

An interested group assembled at the local Y. M. C. A. Sunday in attendance at the 4 o'clock service.

After the hymns and prayer the great story "Pilgrims Progress" by John Bunyan was shown on the screen, some 60 slides being used. Secretary Edwin Hill briefly described each slide and the lessons of the story were brought out very vividly. The great lesson was that the followers of the Lord must expect opposition and sometimes that opposition leads to suffering and death, but if only a Christian stands true to the end his reward is very sure.

Louis Mell officiated at the piano and Stanton Smith and Madison Ayres operted the lantern.

STATE HOSPITAL TRUSTEES VOTE TO SELL LAND

At a special meeting Monday the board of trustees of the Norwich State hospital voted to sell to the commissioners of New London county about seven acres of the former Davis property for $5,000. The decision to sell the land followed a discussion of several hours duration and a visit to the site, on which will be erected the new New London county home. Members of the board residing in other sections of the state voiced some opposition to the sale.

The meeting was called to order about 11 o'clock with Dr. James J. Donohue of this city as chairman. The Davis farm, containing 68 acres of land, was recently purchased for $8,500 by the board of trustees, Elisha Waterman of Lebanon and Charles Smith of Noank represented the county commissioners and the commissioners' engineer, Shepard B. Palmer, was also present.

It was stated at the meeting that the trustees were empowered by law to make the sale should they so decide, subject to the approval of the board of finance and control of the state. The decision to sell the land will, it is understood, be approved by the finance and control board.

It was explained to the meeting by Dr. J. J. Donohue that the local members of the board of trustees, Judge Arthur F. Libby, Charles A. Hagberg and himself, had met recently with the county commissioners and that the local trustees were unanimously in favor of selling the land to the county.

Commissioner Smith stated that he and Commissioner Waterman were in favor of the county home being retained in Norwich. Mr. Smith expressed the opinion that the hospital site is an ideal location for the new home. Mr. Waterman spoke of a summer home for the children for which more land would be required. He asked for sewer rights to the Thames river to which there was no objection.

Mr. Hazberg, one of the trustees, called attention to the fact that the price the hospital was getting for the land is about half of the price paid for the 68 acres.

Dr. E. J. Burdsall, superintendent of the hospital, stated that he was agreeable to whatever action was taken by the board.

Judge Huxford, one of the trustees, expressed some opposition to the sale. He stated that the Davis property was purchased to provide a home site for the superintendent of the institution. He attempted to confine the sale to five acres.

Mr. Palmer, engineer for the county commissioners, exhibited and explained a blue print showing the proposed location of the new home. As there was some discussion as to the exact site desired, a recess was taken, during which all present at the meeting visited the site. The new county home will be erected on the Military highway, next to the property of Walter F. Lester. It is on the easterly side of the highway, about a mile north of the hospital. The frontage is about 1,000 feet, and the site overlooks the Thames river and the surrounding country.

The board, at an executive session decided to sell the land to the county, through the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the board of trustees of the Norwich State hospital approves the sale of certain tract of parcel of land, consisting of about 7 acres, being a portion of the Davis farm, so-called, located in said town of Norwich, and belonging to the state of Connecticut, to county commissioners of New London county, or their nominee, for the consideration of five thousand dollars, and appoints the finance committee and our attorney as a special committee to prepare the necessary contract for the sale of said land, in accordance with Chapter 156 of the public acts of Connecticut, January session, 1927, and that when the said contract has been approved by the special committee herein appointed signed by the county commissioners of New London county and submitted to the board of control and finance for its advice and consent; if the same be consented to by the board of control and finance, then this board of trustees approves and ratifies the act of the said special committee and the trustees of the same in meeting now assembled will sign a contract for the sale of said premises on behalf of said Norwich State hospital. It shall be the duty of said special committee to submit a map-tracings, description of property which shall compare with the tracings and incorporate the same in the proposed contract. Our attorney shall secure a certificate of title to said premises.

The new home will cost approximately $250,000 and the preliminary work will be started next month.

The local members of the board of trustees were named a committee to draw up resolutions on the death of Henry Haskell Gallup, late of this city, and for years a member of the board. The committee later reported the resolutions, which were adopted as follows:

Whereas, Henry Haskell Gallup chairman of the board of trustees of the Norwich State hospital has been taken by death;

Now therefore, Be it Resolved:

That this board is aware of a real loss to this hospital; conscious of his earnest and successful efforts in securing the hospital for Norwich; mindful of his valuable services for many years as trustee and his wise council as chairman of this board, appreciative of his sympathetic nature and generous spirit; in all of which he set a fine example of what an his best a public servant might be.

Be it Further Resolved, That this board note and preserve upon its records this resolution of respect to the memory of our late chairman and that a copy of the same be sent to his bereaved family.

Among the trustees present at the meeting were Charles A. Hagberg, Dr. J. J. Donohue and Judge Arthur F. Libby of this city; Charles B. Pinney, Stafford; Judge Frederick W. Huxford, Stamford; Dr. George E. Evans, New Haven; Dr. Frederick E. Wilcox, Willimantic. Judge Nelson J. Ayling, counsel to the board, was also present.

MADE MEMORIAL ADDRESS AT NOON SHOP MEETING

Another interesting meeting was held under Y. M. C. A. auspices Monday noon at the plant of the Richmond Radiator company. Rev. C. H. Ricketts was again the speaker, and his topic was "Paying tribute to the dead." Mr. Ricketts spoke in part as follows: "The atmosphere of the country at this time lends itself to this topic. As usual I looked for a scripture passage upon which to base my thoughts for today. I found this passage in Genesis; "And Jacob mourned for his son many days." There is a very great difference between heathenism and civilization in the matter of respect for the dead. A missionary some years since saw the chieftain of a tribe drag his own daughter through the streets to the outside of the village and then threw the dead body into the rubbish and in a few days the wild beasts had devoured it. They paid less respect to the dead than we do to a dead dog. A fine picture in contrast was Queen Victoria, when she lost Prince Albert. Her heart was sore and the burden heavy, but she did not go to pieces; she was calm in her sorrow; she held herself steady, and buried him among the illustrious dead in Westminster Abbey. When we lose a child or other loved one, we don't want to be heathenish; we should be thankful that sorrow cannot utterly crush us; we have something to stay by us. The Christian has a helper at the time of sorrow. Jacob mourned for his son a long time since, and Abraham went to Bethel, to mourn for his loved one. They had a religion that strengthened them. Egypt, one of the oldest nations had great respect for its dead five or six thousand years ago. They very carefully and successfully preserved their dead, and surrounded them with beauty; this is a little hint that they even believed in immortality. Very few people today disbelieve in the hereafter. We respect our dead by monuments. Never have I seen a more beautiful monument than that of Napoleon. I saw the monument to Lord Nelson, and because of what the man was and did, it impressed me much more than the monument of Napoleon. When I visited Westminister Abbey, I felt that it was no place for frivolity, but for silence and profound respect, for buried there was the great minds of England. Our mother country pays great respect to its dead. At Washington, D. C., we saw the Washington monument soaring five hundred feet high; erected to a great and noble man.

Then that beautiful building erected to Lincoln, who made himself immortal. These two great Americans were entirely different, but both were great and heroic for our America. I noted a beautiful monument at Northfield, given by Helen Gould in memory of her father, for a dormitory for poor girls; a very appropriate monument. Almost every college has on its campus buildings built as monuments and they are serving large numbers of young men and women.

Then we also remember our heroic dead with services, appropriate to the occasion of Memorial day. I recall when my older brother went away to war, and how mother kissed him and father said farewell. When the weather was cold, mother used to say, "I wonder if my boy is cold tonight?" My brother came back, but I think of the many who never came back. Men, we can not, we must not forget to honor and respect those who have defended us; let us not cease to do them suitable honor as the years pass."

$5,000 FIRE DAMAGE TO WILLIMANTIC HOUSE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 27. —Damage estimated at over $5,000 was caused by fire and water as a result of a blaze of undetermined origin in the pretentious three story wooden residence at 1511 West Main street, at about 9:05 o'clock tonight. Suspicious circumstances connected with the blaze are being investigated by Fire Chief Wade U. Webster. The present owner of the place, which was known as the Randy Robinson home, Charles Barrett, painter, went hysterical at the scene of the fire and was controlled with difficulty by several men. The fire was discovered by Marie Steiner who was riding by the place with Fireman and Mrs. William Bigley, as their guests. Bigley stopped a car operated by Frank Brisbois of Storrs and asked that the fire department be called. A bell alarm was sounded from Box 14, calling out all the apparatus and call members. Over 1,000 feet of hose was laid to combat the blaze, which was fighting a stubborn battle in the recesses of the attic, where it gained considerable headway for a time. The recall was sounded at 10:24 o'clock. The second floor of the house was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. George S. Hutchinson and family, who moved there recently. Barrett maintained a room in this apartment. The lower floor was unoccupied. Mr. Hutchinson is a representative of the U. S. chamber of commerce. Barrett's actions caused considerable excitement as he struggled to gain admittance to the burning building. It was rumored that he had a quantity of money hidden in a wall and that this was destroyed in the fire. Insurance in the amount of several thousands of dollars is said to have been carried on the property. At the time the fire was discovered all of the occupants including Barrett were away. The second and third floors were badly gutted and the furniture and walls were ruined by water. Barrett had spent considerable recently in repairing the place.

STOCK MARKET YESTERDAY MET WITH ONE OF THE WORST BREAKS IN YEARS

NEW YORK, May 27—(AP)—For the second time in less than a week the stock market experienced one of the worst breaks in years today, as prices dropped to around the lowest levels of the year in a relentless but orderly stream of selling.

The Associated Press index of 50 leading industrials was sent down 7.7 points to a new low for the year at 291.7, which is a shade under the previous low reached in the break precipitated by the call money crisis of late March, when the index was depressed to 291.8. The low level reached today is about 15 points under its position at the beginning of the year, and nearly 24 points under the record level of May 4. The decline during the violent collapse last Wednesday was 8.7 points.

The drop today was surprisingly orderly, considering its extent. The day's transactions aggregated by 4,952,670 shares, about 50,000 less than on Wednesday. Although there was a notable absence of panicky selling, stocks failed to find any solid support right up to the closing gong.

An important factor in the decline was the renewed weakness of the grain markets with May wheat breaking below $1 a bushel for the first time since 1915. Much of the selling was said to have come from the middle west. The critical stage reached by the reparations conference also tended to unsettle confidence. In the meantime, the bull faction appeared to have been completely demoralized by the continued uncertainty of the credit outlook, with the federal reserve banks still holding the threat of 6 per cent. rediscount rates over the market's head.

The borrowing demand for stock indicated that there had been a tremendous amount of short selling. Shorts found no cause to cover their commitments in the closing transactions, as a severe money pinch is expected shortly, what with the Memorial day holiday currency demands leading up to the huge demand for credit incident to the mid-year settlements. Call money was again in ample supply at 6 per cent although there was a moderate calling of loans in the forenoon. Tighter money is looked for tomorrow, however, as banks are expected to call funds for the semi-weekly settlements with the federal reserve.

Commission house advices over the week end generally advised a lightening of commitments, and gave virtually no buying recommendations save at substantially lower prices. Traders called upon for higher margin appeared completely discouraged by the repeated margin calls and complete uncertainty of credit during the past few weeks, and were glad to unload their stocks and get out of the market.

There was practically nothing in the day's business and industrial news to justify the collapse of stock prices. Railway earnings reports for April reflected the extraordinarily high level of distribution maintained during the month. There was nothing to indicate any decline in the near-capacity operations of steel mills, automobile factories and several other heavy industries. The market appeared to feel, however, that these matters had been largely discounted and apprehensions that a sharper than usual summer decline may follow the record industrial activity of the forepart of the year caused widespread nervousness.

The widest breaks were a drop of 32 points in Adams Express which fell to 510, 240 points under its record price, and Case Threshing, which dropped 25 points to 310, a new low for the year, and 199 points under its best 1929 price. General Electric, Borg Warner, United Aircraft, Commercial Solvents, and Johns Manville, lost from 10 to 15 points. General Motors dropped more than 4 points to a new 1929 low at 70 1-8, and Radio sold down 5 points to 54 3-8. U. S. Steel dropped about 4 points, and the new stock, traded on a when-issued basis, sold down 5 points to a new low at 162. More than 100 issues reached new low ground for the year, including most of the coppers, and many of the rails. Kolster Radio broke nearly 8 points to 25 1-8, which contrasts with a record price of 78 3-4 earlier in the year.

The commodities were generally weak. Wheat prices broke 3 to 3 cents a bushel, on reports of beneficial rains in Canada, where the crop had been threatened with drought. Corn dropped 3 cents and more. Cotton closed easy, unchanged to 50 cents a bale lower, after an early advance influenced by unfavorable weather.

Foreign exchanges were fairly steady, with sterling cables moving up again to $4.85. The Canadian dollar, however, fell to a discount of about 5-8 of one cent.

ACADEMY NOSES OUT WESTERLY IN WEIRD AND LOOSELY PLAYED GAME

The Academy indulged in another of those wild ball games Monday afternoon at the campus but by dint of some hard-hitting managed to win out over Westerly high, 11 to 10. It was a close call for the undefeated Wildcats, who now have won 18 straight games. Monday's was also their eighth straight conference win.

Both teams played loose ball, eleven errors being chalked up and a few more of omission were made that are not put down. The game was played before the smallest crowd of the season.

Both starting pitchers, Louie Green for the Academy, and Pat Celestino for the invaders, failed to last the distance, both retiring under fire during the big fifth inning spree, when each club scored six times. There were no out and two men on bases when Green went out while the Academy had three runs in their half of the inning when Tucker took the mound. Butsy Weisgraber, Academy ace, who blanked Bulkeley Saturday was forced to take the mound again and he finished the game.

Tombari Gets Third Homer

Westerly was leading for most of the game, scoring two in the first and being tied in their half, scoring two more in the third while the Academy scored one in the fourth on a home run by Anso Tombari, through the left field gate, his third of the season, six in the fifth, giving them a 10 to 3 lead only to have the Wildcats come back with the same number in their half of the inning, to make the count 10-9. The Academy then tied it in the seventh and won out in the eighth.

Umpire Hank Morin's decisions did not please Coach Joe Sherman of Westerly at times and there was considerable wrangling. The game was held up for about ten minutes while the Westerly mentor and his umpire, Mr. Greenwood, argued it out about a decision. Itchkawich, Westerly catcher, smashed one into left field that bounced through the wire fence and went outside of the field. Hank claimed that someone kicked the ball away, whether away from Tombari or not, it didn't matter. When the kicking was done Itchkawich was around second. He continued on to third and made it before Tombari's throw came in. Hank won the decision and the alleged kicker soon disappeared. This really didn't count in the end for, after Weisgraber passed the next man, he got the next three men on easy infield outs.

Westerly, which was beaten 7 to 6 by Green at Westerly, being blanked with one hit ,showed a decided reversal of form in the hitting line and took kindly to the little left-hander's offerings. A pass to Christy, a ball, a single by Stenhouse, a stolen base, wild pitch and sacrifice fly netted them two in the first. They scored two more in the third on singles by Dolan, Dottle and Novak, the runs coming in after two were away. Two errors also contributed to this scoring.

The Academy had scored two in the first on doubles by Cummings and LaCroix and an error on Fagan's grounder to short. They scored again in the fourth on Tombari's circuit clout with none on, he being the first batter of the inning.

Fifth Inning Eventful

Then the big fifth inning for both teams. Westerly scored with five singles, a sacrifice, a pass, and two errors, mixed in with dumb playing by the Academy. However, the Wildcats came right back with the same number on singles by Gibbs, Cummings, LaCroix, Tombari, Fontaine, a couple of errors and three stolen bases, two of these being a pretty double steal by Chubby Gibbs and Hal Cummings.

The tying run came in the seventh on Weisgraber's single with two gone, a passed ball, Arico's single to right center and Itchkawich's muff of the throw-in. The winning run came on a pass to LaCroix, who came all the way around when Fagan singled to left and Dolan fumbled the ball.

The Academy cannot play this way Thursday against Warren Harding and expect to retain its state title.

At Windham Today

The Academy nestle Windham at Willimantic today in a league game. By winning this afternoon, the Wildcats can clinch their fifth straight league title and the first under the new conference arrangement. Red Fagan, who has not pitched in nearly a month, being confined to the outfield for his timely hitting, will hurl for the Academy with Buck LaCroix in center and probably Jack Pepin, who is recovering from the after-effects of vaccination, on second base. The rest of the team will be the same as played against Westerly Monday. The Academy has now won eight league games and Chapman Tech with four victories and two defeats is the only team now standing the chance at least tieing them. The game starts at 3:45 D. S. T. and Warren will pitch for Windham.

PHILLIES WIN BOTH GAMES OF TWIN BILL

PHILADELPHIA, May 27—(AP)—Ray Benge and Claude Willoughby pitched the Phillies to a double victory over the Boston Braves today by scores of 2 to 1, and 5 to 1. Willoughby, who allowed but seven scattered hits, had a shut out victory in the second until Harper hit a homer in the ninth. Cantwell and Leverett, who relieved him in the eighth, were nicked for ten hits. Whitney hit a homer for the Phillies in the second game. Benge and Bob Smith had a keen pitching duel in the first game. Smith's wildness forcing in the winning run for the Phillies in the sixth inning when he walked Friberg with the bases filled. Scores:

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 27—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates slugged their way to second place in the close National league race today by taking the third game of the series from the St. Louis Cardinals 10 to 1. The Cards, who Saturday were in first place now are in third place, a half game below the Pirates.

Petty was in form, allowing the Cards only seven hits. The visitors knocked Hallahan out of the box after three innings and were even more powerful against Sherdel who relieved him. Grantham hit two home runs. His first came in the third with two men on base and his second in the fifth with none on. High hit safely in his 14th consecutive game. Score:

LOWLY REDS STRIKE BACK AT THE CUBS

CINCINNATI, May 27—(AP)—The National league cellar occupants gave indications here today that they had not curled up passively for the remainder of the season. Cincinnati defeating the Cubs, 8 to 5, and thereby ending a string of nine defeats.

The Reds' victory followed a meeting of the club directors this morning.

President C. J. McDiarmid, discussing the fate of Jack Hendricks said it would not be wise for the Cincinnati club to change managers at this time of the year, regardless of the poor showing Hendricks has made. Hendricks announced before the season started he would take all blame, and likewise credit, for the position in which the Reds finished. Score:

Susie Says

The Wildcats looked more like house-cats in yesterday's fracas.

I've seen lots of poorer games but I just can't remember where. There was more dumb baseball crowded into that game than there are seeds in a tomato.

Them Academy boys looked like a third rate grammar school club and it was more by good luck than anything else that they managed to squeeze out a win.

Those that bet on the Academy were willing to sell their bets for less than nothing when Westerly took a seven run lead. The teams, however, were very evenly matched. Figure that one out.

And Hank Morin. Oh, Hank, I was so disappointed in you. You shouldn't lose your temper that way. Why, my heart was all aflutter when you got into that terrible altercation with that nice Joe Sherman.

Honestly, Hank, old dear, I thought you was going to pull a gun on that other ump when you threw down your mask and protector and reached for your hip pocket. Gosh what a relief it was when you pulled out that "Knotty Problem" book.

And Hank that ain't no way to treat a brand new cheat protector, to throw it in the dirt when there's an argument. Hang on to it, it might stop a haymaker sometime.

Say folks didja ever sit in the close proximity of a middle-aged woman fan who thinks she knows all about the game? Don't it just slay you to hear her gentle words of encouragement screeched out in a rasping voice?

Yep, I sat in back of one yesterday. She was telling the Westerly boys how to do it when I made some remark to a friend who was sitting next to me. The first thing I knew she was handing me a beautiful panning.

Honest I didn't know what it was all about as I had paid no more attention to her than if she had been in the next county. I apologized for something I hadn't done but that didn't shut her up. Finally her hubby give her a dig in the ribs and says "Shut up." And she shut. Thanks, mister.

Have to go up to Willimantic this afternoon and see the slaughter. I missed the other massacre.

But— If the Academy plays the kind of ball against Windham that they played against Westerly they are liable to be the slaughtered and not the slaughterers.

MAYS-CANZONERI BOUT AT NEW LONDON TONIGHT EXPECTED TO BE TORRID GO

TONIGHT'S CARD
Star Bout—10 rounds
Jimmy Canzoneri vs. Bobby Mays
Semi-final—8 rounds
Johnny Thomas vs. Jimmy Flores
Six-Rounder
Joe Russo vs. Battling Brusso
Preliminaries—4 rounds
Bennie Novak vs. Battling Eurk
Tommy McCarthy vs. Buster Mello

Fans all over eastern Connecticut have been stirred with interest at the bout tonight at the Hamilton street arena, New London, between Bobby Mays of New London, state lightweight contender, and Jimmy Canzoneri of New York and it is almost certain that the stadium will be packed. The fans go to the arena tonight expecting a battle that they will not forget for some time to come.

Mays, who is very popular with local fans, meets one of the best boys of his career in Canzoneri, a two-fisted fighter who has gained recognition just through his ability to throw punches. Mays, a clever boy on his feet and a great defensive fighter, will be taxed to the limit to stave off the attack of the New York lad. Mays being a southpaw is one thing in his favor and is the one thing that is bothering Canzoneri who has fought but few left-handers and not with such good results. In winding up his training Sunday Mays had a front tooth broken loose in a collision in the ring but the doctors say that his injury is not at all serious and that he will be fit for tonight's engagement.

There is a strong supporting cast for the feature bout. In the semi-final Johnny Thomas, former New England flyweight titleholder, is to go eight rounds with Jimmy Flores of Newport. It is a midget whirlwind who throws plenty of gloves during his turn in the ring. Fans can expect plenty of action from these youngsters.

Joe Russo of Westerly, well known for his slugging, does battle with Battling Brusso of Fall River over the six round route. Joe is a hard-hitting welterweight that takes and gives plenty of wallops. Another slugging match that will possibly end in a K. O.

The principal preliminary for Norwich fans is the one in which Tommy McCarthy, local featherweight idol returns to the ring against Buster Mello of New Bedford. McCarthy is up against a real tough little battler and will have a very busy evening.

The opener is between Bennie Novak of the sub base and Battling Eurk of Westerly. The show starts at 8:30 o'clock.

OVER 100 RUNNERS HAVE ENTERED FOR DUWELL 10-MILE ROAD RACE

With still 12 hours to go the entry list for the fourth annual Duwell 10-mile race, to be run here Thursday afternoon, showed the names of 102 athletes last night. It is expected that by the time that the list is brought to a close that no less than 115 will be registered. Included in the list are the names of America's best distance men, Clarence DeMar, Whitey Michaelson, Jimmy Zinc, Cyril Hill, Arthur Gavrin, Fred Ward, Max Lamb and Bernie Bern. Ward and Gavrin, members of the American champion marathon team, Millrose A. A. of New York, were returned winners in the two most recent marathons. On Friday of the past week Ward ran to the Canadian championship at Toronto and the following day Gavrin placed first in the annual marathon at Washington, D. C.

Included in the late entries received last night was that of Joe Quirk of the Dorchester A. C., former national long distance walking champion. Quirk holds a record for a walk from Boston to Rocky Point, R. I., having covered the 62 1-2 mile distance in 11 hours, 14 minutes. Another top liner to file entry late Monday was Harry Fagerland of the Finnish-American A. C., New York. The latter has placed well in front in practically all of the Metropolitan runs during the past three years.

The leading teams to be represented in the entry list are the following: St. Josphs of Newark, N. J., Millrose of New York, Dorchester A. C., of Dorchester, Mass., Cygnet A. C., of East Portchester, Conn., Waterbury Boys' club, Hone A. C., of Westerly, Finnish-American A. C., La Habido K. of C. of Yonkers, N. Y., New York Athletic club, Brooklyn Harriers, Good Shepherd of New York, Conn. Aggies, Duwell A. A., New York Y. M. C. A. and last but not least the Melrose, Mass., American Legion post, DeMar's club.

With the closing of the entry list this evening all of the runners will be allotted numbers through a drawing and the list will be published either Wednesday or Thursday. The guessing contest, being conducted by the Duwells in conjunction with the race will be closed tonight, no more contest blanks to be received after that time.

The committee in charge of the Booster club, the method through which the Duwells are raising the funds with which to defray the expense of the race reports splendid cooperation about town. The goal of $500 is still a distance away, however, and a determined effort will be made today and tomorrow to clean up the campaign.

WHITE SOX TAKE TWO HARD GAMES FROM TIGERS

CHICAGO, May 27.—(AP)—The White Sox gave a great exhibition of pitching from beginning to end today to take both games of a double-header. A late rally gave them the opener by a 7 to 5 score while they pulled out the second game, 6 to 5 in a 14 inning struggle.

The Sox came from behind to tie up the second game by Bill Cissell's home run in the ninth inning after Earl Whitehill had let them down once in the twelfth inning and again in the thirteenth to keep the battle on even terms. Tommy Thomas, the fourth pitcher for the Sox, drove in the winning run with his single over second in the fourteenth. It brought in Hunnefield, who had walked and stolen second. Autry also got a homer for Chicago, the only hit off Whitehill until he weakened in the eighth. Shea hit one for the Tigers.

McLain went down as the winning pitcher of the first game doing a neat job after he had relieved Akins at the start. Thomas also finished that contest. Lil Stoner was the victim of a four run rally in the eighth that cost him a victory which was almost in his hands.

FORMER FEDERAL SERVICE MAN LAW-BREAKER WITH PONY, NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 27—Foitois Vassolaridis, 43 Bank street, is of the opinion that he knows more law than do the police, for this evening he was arrested charged with conducting an exhibition without a license and maintaining a nuisance. He will be in court tomorrow. Vassolaridis was on Shaw street with his pony, which he was commercializing, since patrons were solicited to ride on the animal, for which a fee of five cents was charged. Saturday night Vassolaridis was on Winthrop street for the same purpose and was ordered by Patrolman Patrick Sheehan to desist, unless he obtained a permit. Vassolaridis entertains the opinion that because he was in the federal service during the World war he can charge for rides on the animal without paying a fee to the city.

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 27.—The case of Dr. Arthur H. Meyers, recently arrested on a charge of failing to report a case of smallpox to the health officer of the town of Groton, was dismissed today by Judge C. C. Costello in Groton town court. After a lengthy hearing Judge Costello announced that the evidence was of such a conflicting nature that a conviction would be impossible.

Literature knows of "three men in a boat," motion pictures have also introduced three in a boat—although one of them was a woman.

In the newest Richard Barthelmess starring feature, "Scarlet Seas," produced by First National and now playing at the Breed theatre, the star himself, Betty Compson, the leading lady, and James Bradbury, Sr., spent four days in a lifeboat, alone and drifting, attended only by a motion picture staff ensconced on a barge floating nearby.

This experience was a necessary scene called for in the script and demanding unexpected physical hardships. For those four days, the three cast members drifted in a lifeboat while large waves, blinding sprays and a burning sun lent an atmosphere quite in keeping with the mood of the scene. The result, as patrons of the Breed will see, is said to be realistic and thoroughly dramatic.

John Francis Dillon directed "Scarlet Seas."

She Put A Million Wives Into Pretty Clothes

Nelly Don Proved Lovely Bright-Colored Frocks as Practical as the Old-Fashioned Drab Ones

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Nelly Don hated drab house dresses. So she made gay ones—only a few at first. They sold amazingly. Now her business totals $2,000,000 a year.

In spite of hard wear, they are practical, she finds. Because with modern Lux cleansing they wear and wear!

"The very best way to wash the lovely, bright colored materials we use," Nelly Don says, "is with Lux. Lux has no harmful alkali and with Lux there is no rubbing.

NELLY DON

No matter how delicate a color or pattern, it can be washed in Lux time after time—often for years—and still look just like new."

OBITUARY

Cornelius J. Downes

Monday morning at 4:25 o'clock Greeneville lost one of its most prominent citizen when Cornelius J. Downes passed away at his home, 42 Prospect street, following an illness of about ten days. Mr. Downes was a registrar of voters for the democratic party. He was born in Norwich on Nov. 26, 1873, the son of the late John and Johanna Costello Downes. He was united in marriage in this city to Nellie T. O'Neil at St. Patrick's church. For the past 30 years he had been registrar in this city and on different occasions served on committees about the town. Politically, Mr. Downes favored the democratic party and was ever active in its betterment. Fraternally, he was affiliated with the Foresters of America, Knights of Columbus, White Cross council, No. 13 and the Modern Woodmen of America. He was a loyal and devoted member of St. Mary's Memorial church where for the past number of years he was a collector at the church. As a member he was very active, and was ever ready to assist in any of the church projects. The deceased is survived by his widow, three sons Joseph D., Raymond F., Cornelius J. Jr., and one daughter, Dorothea. He also leaves four sisters, Mrs. James McGough of Johnsburg, Pa., Mrs. John Hess of Staten Island, N. Y., Mrs. William Murphy of Nogthbridge, Mass., and Mrs. Joseph Campion of this city.

The passing of Mr. Downes takes from the city one who was ever interested in its welfare, having spent much time in assisting in the government of its affairs. He was ever willing to assist his fellowmen and always had a kind word for everyone. His many friends here and elsewhere extend to his surviving relatives and the immediate family their heartfelt sympathy in the time of their bereavement.

The Ladies' Guild of St. Andrews Episcopal church held their regular weekly meeting Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Prodell of Preston with a large number present. Mrs. Charles Erwin, president of the society, presided over the meeting. It was voted at the meeting that a strawberry supper would be held at a later date. After business was transacted a social hour was enjoyed which was followed by refreshments served by the hostess.

Automobile Hit Dog

HOUSE PASSED THE TARIFF BILL BY VOTE OF 264 TO 147

Bill Was Written by Republicans of the Ways and Means Committee—The Measure is Designed to Protect Thousands of Products of American Farms and Factories From Foreign Competition—Provides For Reorganization of the Tariff Commission and Grants Increased Power to the President—The Bill Now Goes to the Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP)—The tariff bill written by the ways and means committee republicans and designed to afford additional protection from foreign competition to thousands of products of American farms and factories, was passed by the house today by a vote of 264 to 147.

The measure, carrying substantial increases in import duties on articles embraced in every section of the seven-year-old Fordney-McCumber law, provides for a reorganization of the tariff commission and the granting of increased power to the president in the matter of changing rates. It now goes to the senate, where the finance committee plans to hold extensive hearings before reporting it for consideration of the floor.

With plans under way for an all-summer recess, it was the opinion of republican leaders tonight that the proposed legislation would not be taken up by the senate itself for several months.

More than 100 amendments proposed by the ways and means committee were given further approval en bloc.

Before the final vote a motion by Representative Garner, of Texas the minority leader, to return the bill to the ways and means committee was rejected by 254 to 137 votes.

Garner had requested that the measure be sent back to be changed so it would abolish the present tariff commission and flexible provisions authorizing the president to raise or lower duties as much as 50 per cent, and set up in its place a fact-finding board of four to be appointed by and made responsible only to congress.

The Texan also wanted restored to the United States customs court the power of review of valuation methods, which the bill transfers to the secretary of the treasury, and another amendment incorporated adjusting rates on all schedules so that the duties shall not exceed the actual differences between the cost of production in the United States and abroad.

Twenty democrats joined 244 republicans in voting for the bill, while 12 republicans and one farmer-labor combined with 134 democrats in opposing it.

Representative Rainey of Illinois, a minority committeeman, while praising Chairman Hawley for his conduct of the public hearings, declared if the senate changed the bill without improving it "it will help the country, and if it fails to change it at all, God help the republican party."

Representative Treadway of Massachusetts, a majority committeeman thanked Rainey for his words of "commendation and condemnation" and declared the latter, coming from Rainey, is looked upon as a compliment. He added that the bill represented practically the unanimous voice of the republican party.

The increase of sixty-four hundredths of a cent to 2.40 cents in the existing duty of 1.76 cents a pound on Cuban raw sugar was regarded as the most far-reaching change in rates made by the bill. Considerable opposition to the new duty was voiced in debate but no opportunity was given to amend it under the rules.

Other duty advances are on such important commodities as wool, live cattle and meats, dairy products, grains, textiles, glass, paper, furniture and clothing of all kinds.

Articles transferred from the free to the dutiable list and given substantial rates of protection include hides, leather, boots and shoes, cement, brick, shingles and cedar, maple and birch lumber.

In view of the raise from 31 to 34 cents a pound in the rate on raw wool, compensatory increases are provided on manufacturers of wool. Similarly compensatory rates are placed on sugar by-products.

Although raw cotton is left on the free list, cotton manufactures are given substantial raises in rates as a means of helping the New England textile industry. The measure recreates the tariff commission by giving the president authority to terminate the terms of the present six commissioners at his will by sending the names of their successors to the senate for confirmation. He could retain any present member, however, if he so desired.

The new commission would be composed of seven members instead of six and the president would be authorized to ignore party affiliations in selecting his appointees. The present law provides that not more than three commissioners may be of the same political party.

Salaries of the commissioners would be raised from $7,500 to $12,000 and their terms would be for seven years instead of twelve as at present.

To speed up the commission's work in determing the necessity for rate changes the bill proposes that it may take into consideration differences in conditions of competition between domestic and foreign articles in the principal markets of the United States instead of confining itself to production, as provided in existing law.

In exercising his power under the flexible provisions the president would be allowed, if he deemed it necessary, to base rates on the American selling price or to reclassify articles in order to effect rate changes.

MABEL WALKER WILLEBRANDT TO LEAVE GOV'T SERVICE JUNE 15

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP)—Mabel Walker Willebrandt, around whom the prohibition controversy often has swirled, passes from the government service on June 15 carrying the praise of President Hoover for her "legal ability" and her "moral courage."

The resignation of the woman assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition prosecutions was announced today by the chief executive within an hour after it had been received by mail from Mrs. Willebrandt, who is in Waco, Texas, to receive an honorary degree from Baylor university.

In a letter accepting the resignation "with deep regret," Mr. Hoover said he could not "allow this opportunity to pass without an expression of the indebtedness of the American people and of the government for so many years of effective public service."

"The position you have held has been one of the most difficult in the government," the president added, "and one which could not have been conducted with such distinguished success by one of less legal ability and moral courage."

Mrs. Willebrandt, who first tendered her resignation on March 6 with a request that it become effective on April 1, is to become Washington counsel for the Aviation corporation at a retainer which greatly exceeds her salary as assistant attorney general.

Early selection of a successor to Mrs. Willebrandt is expected, but administration officers declined to say today who they had under consideration.

INSISTS THAT HOUSE VOTE ON EXPORT DEBENTURE PLAN

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP)—Reassembling of the farm relief conference committee before the end of the week was confidentialy predicted today by leaders who have been trying to bring the house and senate into agreement over disposition of the disputed export debenture plan.

The committee's negotiations were halted last week after house members had refused to discuss differences in the two farm bills passed separately by the house and senate unless the debenture plan was eliminated.

Senator McNary of Oregon, chairman of the conference, said he thought another meeting would be held Thursday or Friday and that plans to insure uninterrupted negotiations probably would be agreed upon.

Additional notice from the debenture group that a vote in the house on the plan will be insisted upon was given in the senate by Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi.

The agriculture leaders may rest assured," he said, "that the senate will not recede until the house has voted."

WORLD ALTITUDE RECORD FOR LIGHT AIRPLANES

EAST ST. LOUIS, Illinois, May 28.—Ascending to a height of 24,800 feet above Parks airport here today in a 680 pound low wing monoplane, Barney Zimmerly of Marshall, Mo., broke the world altitude record for light airplanes.

His mark is unofficial pending a check of a barograph of the National Aeronautic association by the bureau of standards in Washington.

The height recorded by Zimmerly's altimeter exceeded both the record of 23,250 for single seat planes held by Paul Bazmer, German flier, and the record of 19,562 feet for planes weighing less than 331 pounds, held by Captain G. DeHavilana of England.

Discarding his straw hat, Zimmerly drew on a fleece lined flying suit over his summer suit, put on a fleece lined helmet and went aloft with 20 gallons of gasoline and a supply of oxygen at 11:45 a. m. He landed at 1:44 p. m. He said he could have gone 2,000 feet higher if he had not run out of oxygen, as he experienced no trouble.

Zimmerly used a Barling N. B.-3, a monoplane made by the Nicholas Beazley company of Marshall, which employes him as test pilot. The plane is powered by a five cylinder radio air cooled motor.

The new record was made during the qualifying races for the Gardner trophy airplane race to Indianapolis and return on Memorial day.

WORKING ABOUT SUMMER ESTATE OF THE MORROWS

NORTH HAVEN, Me., May 28.—(AP)—Work about the grounds of the summer estate of Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow and on the interior of the 26 room house was continued today without any definite information regarding the possibility that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and the former Anne Morrow might spend part of their honeymoon here.

The guest house, commonly called "honeymoon cottage," which sits in a group of fir trees a short distance from the main house, remained unfinished on the inside. Looking through the first floor windows, it could be seen that the electric fixtures had not been installed, nor the plumbing connected. The wall paper in the living room was only partly hung.

Workmen were cleaning the interior of the main house, but it was said the young couple could be easily accommodated. There are no servants at the house, the two maids who preceded the Morrow party here last week, having returned to New York. The only persons living on the estate are Hubert O. Grant, the caretaker, and his wife.

ACTRESS BEBE MONTCLAIR MARRIES JOSEPH FOX

RYE, N. Y., May 28.—(AP)—Bebe Montclair, of Weston, W. Va., actress, was married here tonight to Joseph Fox, actor. The ceremony was performed in the home of Justice of the Peace Edwin C. Thomas after the couple motored to Greenwich, Conn., where they were balked by the five-day law.

Mr. Fox is a resident of New York and has played in musical comedy productions. His bride is a screen actress and vaudeville performer. They will leave for Hollywood July 1 to take part in various productions.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

AMOY, Fukien, China, May 28.—(AP)—Dr. C. H. Hollenbeck, reformed Presbyterian church missionary at Lungyenchow, west of here, is being held captive by communists.

VATICAN CITY, May 28.—(AP)—Pope Pius has appointed Monsignor Thomas O'Donnell, bishop of Victoria, B. C., as coadjutor with the right of succession to Monsignor Edward J. McCarthy, archbishop of Halifax.

LONDON, May 28.—(AP)—A Riga dispatch to the Daily Mail said a revolt had broken out in Bokhara, which is that part of Russian Turkestan which borders Afghanistan, and that General Budenny, inspector of soviet cavalry, had been sent to crush it.

BERLIN, May 28.—(AP)—General Erich Ludendorff, Germany's war time quartermaster general said he would seek an injunction against the Munich publishing house, Drei Masken, which is contemplating publication of "When I Was Ludendorff's Wife," purporting to be the memoirs of his first wife, Frau Margarethe Ludendorff.

SENATE MAY VOTE OPENLY ON EXECUTIVE NOMINATIONS

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP)—Liberalization of the long standing senate rules to permit open sessions for consideration of executive nominations upon a majority vote and to authorize publication of all roll calls in executive sessions was recommended today by the senate rules committee.

The situation regarding executive consideration of nominations and secrecy regarding the votes has been receiving committee attention since the recent publication by The United Press of a roll call which purported to show the vote on confirmation of Irving L. Lenroot as a federal judge. In the resultant discussion, Vice President Curtis ruled in the senate that representatives of all press associations should be barred from the senate floor, since the rules made no provision for extending that privilege. The rules committee voted seven to five today against restoration of the privilege which has been utilized by press association representatives for many years.

Chairman Moses of the committee later asked the senate to agree to consideration of the rules revision a week from Thursday but this was blocked by Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, an advocate of open session, who is demanding first consideration for his bill to license commission merchants dealing in perishable products.

SECOND ATTEMPT FOR SOLO ENDURANCE RECORD

LOS ANGELES, May 28.—(AP)—Herbert J. Fahy, a test pilot, winged his way through southern California skies today in his second attempt to hang up a new solo endurance flight record.

Carrying 495 gallons of gasoline, said to be enough to keep his plane aloft for about 40 hours, Fahy left the ground at 4:48:05 o'clock this morning hoping to remain in the air long enough to surpass the mark of 36 hours, 37 minutes and 9 seconds made by Martin Jensen and Ivan Unruh last February. Provisions included sandwiches, two quarts of black coffee, quart of orange juice and sniffing salts, the latter to ward off drowsiness.

After being in the air more than nine hours he dropped a note which said, "going fine, but growing monotonous. Will widen circle to take in beaches."

The freedom of the skies was Fahy's in his flight today for he was bound by no limitation such as ended his first attempt at the record last Sunday when he was forced down by fog because he could not leave the environs of Metropolitan airport during the hours of darkness. That regulation, made by the company which insured his plane in the first attempt had been modified so that he could cruise over other sections in event of fog. In his first attempt, Fahy was up a little more than 21 hours.

POLICE RESERVES CALLED TO COPE WITH YALE FRESHMEN

NEW HAVEN, May 28.—(AP)—Police reserves were called out late tonight to quell an outbreak of Yale freshmen observing "riot day." The students swarmed the downtown section and after breaking lights and pulling trolley wires off, they were forced back to Berkeley oval only after the officers used their night sticks.

The revelry began in Berkeley oval where the freshmen celebrating the close of classes set off fireworks and fired pistol shots. The lights on the campus were the first object of the students and after breaking all the globes they rushed the fence, tore it down, and set fire to it.

Campus police locked the gates to hold them back whereupon upper classmen who were watching the proceedings yelled to the "frosh" to "do something". The freshmen still in the dormitories then doused the upper classmen with buckets of water.

The freshmen gathered en masse breaking down the rear excite gate and dashing out into the street. Two trolley cars passing by were stopped and the trolleys taken off the lines. The students swept down College street to the center of the city, halting traffic and continuing to pull lines off trolleys.

A police sergeant meanwhile sent in a call for reserves. Using their clubs on the students the police had a steady battle to turn them back to the campus.

After their failure to enter the Yale dining hall the students were again surrounded by the campus and city police to the oval where the disturbance ended. No arrests were made.

CHARGED WITH LARCENY OF APPROXIMATELY $12,000

LAWRENCE, Mass., May 28.—(AP)—Former Mayor John T. Cahill will face trial in superior criminal court at an early date, charged with larceny of approximately $12,000 in cash and bonds it became known today. It was learned the former mayor pleaded not guilty to a secret indictment in Newburyport a week ago.

Miss Mary A. McSweeney, high school teacher, who brought the charges, claims she gave the money and securities to Cahill to invest for her, but that she has been unable either to secure an accounting or make recovery. Cahill claims to have returned about $2,000.

Planes May Start On Ocean Flights Today

Announcement Was Made That the Green Flash Would Take Off For Rome at 8 a. m.

OLD ORCHARD, Me., May 28.—(AP)—With reports today indicating that flying conditions over the Atlantic had cleared, announcement was made that the monoplane Green Flash would take off for Rome at 8 a. m. tomorrow.

Indications were that the French plane Yellow Bird would hop for Paris at the same time, but definite decision on this remained with Armand Lotti, sponsor of the flight, who went to New York yesterday to get detailed reports from Dr. James H. Kimball, of the weather bureau there. It was reported that Lotti and Rene Lefevre, who accompanied him, were returning here tonight.

Lewis A. Yancey, navigator and Roger Q. Williams, pilot of the Green Flash, said that the weather was more favorable than it had been for ten days and that their departure was certain unless a report late tonight indicated an abrupt change in conditions.

Yancey said he thought that the Green Flash would take off first and the Yellow Bird would follow immediately. Jean Assolant, third member of the French plane's crew, could not verify this pending the arrival of Lotti and Lefevre.

Fuelling of both planes, however, was started late today. Three or four hours were expected to be consumed in this process, after which Yancey and Williams said they would make a test flight in the Green Flash.

Guiseppe M. Bellanca, designer of the Green Flash, said the monoplane would carry between 518 and 558 gallons of gasoline. He was here to witness the takeoff and give any assistance to the fliers that he could. The Yellow Bird's tanks hold about 1,005 gallons.

WOMAN DROVE MONOPLANE TO ALTITUDE OF 24,000 FEET

LOS ANGELES, May 28.—(AP)—Driving her cabin monoplane to an unofficial altitude of 24,000 feet, Miss Marvel Crosson, San Diego woman flier landed here today after a two hour flight with the women's altitude record apparently broken.

Experts who examined the plane's instruments estimated Miss Crosson had reached the 24,000 foot mark or higher.

The sealed barograph was removed and prepared for shipment to Washington where the official figure of her attempt can be determined only after calibration of the gauge.

Miss Crosson left the airport at 11:17 a. m., and landed at 1:23 p. m.

"Gee, it was cold up there," she exclaimed as friends assisted her from the cabin.

The temperature was estimated to have been about 15 degrees below zero at the highest point of her flight.

Charged With Fraud And Mismanagement

Started Seven Years Ago With $7,500 Capital, Doing Annual Business of Over $20,000,000.

NEW HAVEN, May 28.—(AP)—With charges explanatory in twenty one long paragraphs of a complaint which summarized charged fraud and mismanagement, and misuse of funds held in trusteeship, and further that the concern defrauded the public and is likely to continue to defraud the public, Attorney General Benjamin W. Alling today asked the superior civil court of New Haven county to appoint a receiver for the Parker-Smith, Inc., of New Haven and Hartford, dealers in mortgages and mortgage notes. The concern started seven years ago with a capital of $7500 has been doing an annual business of over $20,000,000, largely in Connecticut.

The company is given by Judge Arthur L. Ellis until 2 p. m., tomorrow to answer the complaint of the attorney general. Paul M. Smith, secretary of the company, and one of the three founders of it, said this afternoon that the prospects were that the company would not contend against the action of the state which will mean a receivership and eventual dissolution of the company. The order to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed is returnable on September 3.

The company, first to be proceeded against by Bank Commissioner Lester E. Shippee under the fraud act passed by the 1929 general assembly, is charged with failure to foreclose mortgages long in default with payments of interest to mortgage note holders when no interest had been paid by the mortgagers, with loaning excessively on property due to overvaluations, and with operating without a license from the bank commissioner.

The civil action was filed after Attorney General Alling and Commissioner Shippee had conferred with State's Attorney Samuel E. Hoyt, though the attorney general said the three officers of the company face criminal charges. State's Attorney Hoyt this afternoon said he would take no action until the matter had been placed before him officially. The three officers are John E. Parker, president; Clarence V. Smith, treasurer, and his brother, Paul M. Smith, secretary.

The three men who were mentioned by the attorney general in his action have long been active in real estate and the realty security field here. They began in a small way and in a few years organized a large corporation, built their own business home and handled large transactions in mortgage placing. Some of the buildings on which they placed mortgages have been referred to as white elephants by the attorney general, because there were first and second mortgages on them due to alleged over-valuation of their market worth.

Among mortgages said to be held by the company are those on a number of apartment houses in Hartford and West Hartford, it had offices in Hartford, Meriden, New Britain and this city, its home office in Court street being in a building which the concern built a few years ago.

NORWICH MAN GETS JONES LAW SENTENCE

HARTFORD, May 28.—(AP)—The Jones law was applied for the first time in Connecticut, this afternoon, when Judge Warren B. Burrows, presiding at the opening session here of the June term of the United States federal district court, fined Boris Avdevich, of Norwich $500 and sentenced him to jail for thirty days on a charge of illegally manufacturing liquor. Indicted by a grand jury here, Avdevich pleaded guilty to the charge against him.

Avdevich was arrested about a month ago at his home at 11 Third street when federal prohibition officers visited the place with a warrant and found a 230 gallon copper still in operation over a gas plate. It was stated at the time that the still had only been running one day, having been put in to replace a smaller one that was also found in the place.

CONSTABLE AND GRAND JUROR DEFENDANTS IN $5,000 SUIT

NEW HAVEN, May 28.—(AP)—Leslie W. Hubbell, Cheshire constable, and Richard Williams, grand juror or prosecutor of Cheshire, were named defendants in a $5,000 suit for false arrest filed in superior court today by counsel for Charles E. Mann, of this city.

It is claimed by Mann that he was arrested April 27 at his home here upon request of the defendants, charged with failure to pay his personal taxes. The complaint alleges that Mann's reputation was damaged.

Detective Frank Keenan, of the New Haven bureau who picked up Mann at the request of the Cheshire authorities, was also a defendant in the suit.

WHEREABOUTS OF COLONEL CHARLES A. AND MRS. LINDBERGH REMAINS UNKNOWN

NEW YORK, May 28.—(AP)— Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, who eloped from the press to be secretly married in the bride's Englewood, N. J. home yesterday, were enjoying their hard won privacy today after eluding all efforts to trace their whereabouts.

Day long investigation by brigades of reporters and photographers failed even to establish whether the Lindbergh's were on the ground, on the water, or in the air.

The flying colonel and the daughter of Dwight W. Morrow, ambassador to Mexico, were married yesterday afternoon with no one but close relatives in attendance as reporters hung around the street in front of the Morrow home in ignorance of what was going on.

The colonel and his bride had left the house before a secretary made public a brief announcement of the marriage, where they went nobody who may know revealed and no one else has been able to find out.

Shortly after the wedding a yellow amphibian plane circled over the Morrow home, dipped in salute, and flew away. The bridal couple on the start of their honeymoon? Nobody knew.

Later a similar amphibian settled in the waters of Long Island Sound near the estate of Harry Guggenheim, close friend of Col. Lindbergh. The bridal couple seeking seclusion in the inviolate privacy of the Guggenheim mansion? Nobody knew that.

This morning a yacht belonging to S. R. Guggenheim was gone from its mooring in the sound. The bridal pair off on a marine honeymoon under cover of darkness? Nobody knew that either.

Today there was nothing to go on but the general knowledge of Col. Lindbergh's love of the air. And so in the belief that if you would look for Lindbergh you should look up, newspapers posted reporters at all outlying fields today and one went so far as to charter three airplanes to follow any clues that might develop.

WILL REPORT ANY LAW IT MAY FIND TO BE UNENFORCEABLE

Statement Made by George W. Wickersham, Chairman of the National Law Enforcement Commission—Informs Newspaper Men That Prohibition is Only One Angle of the Work—Asserted That the Commission Would Not Act as an Arbiter Between the Wets and Drys—Will Give Consideration to Reports and Data of Any Organization Which Has Studied Any of the Problems Facing the Commission.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP)—George W. Wickersham, chairman of the national law enforcement commission, declared today in a preliminary statement that if President Hoover's newly created organization found any federal law to be unenforceable it would so report.

"We will not avoid anything," the chairman said at the conclusion of the commission's initial meeting at the white house, where it listened to an expression of hope by the president that it "would secure an accurate determination of fact and cause, following them with constructive courageous conclusions."

Emphasizing that the commission would not act as arbiter between the wets and the drys, the chairman said it would receive for such consideration as was merited reports and data from any organizations which had studied any of the problems facing the commission.

"Prohibition is only one angle of our work," the chairman added, as he was pressed by newspaper correspondents concerning the program of the commission in dealing with this subject.

"The attitude of the American people toward law is not bounded by prohibition," the former attorney general said, adding that the president had charged the commission with finding out what causes the present attitude of the American people toward all laws.

"The discovery of this is the most difficult of all problems," he asserted.

Whether the commission will hold open hearings is yet to be determined.

"My experience with public hearings is that you do not get very far with them," Wickersham explained.

Calling attention that some members of the commission were strangers each to the other, Wickersham said the two sessions late today, the second of which was held at the department of justice, were largely for the purpose of getting acquainted and exchanging views as to what angle of the work ahead each individual considered of the most importance.

While a program remains to be mapped out, by the chairman indicated the commission would remain in session here until the end of this week and would meet her from time to time thereafter. It was suggested that the commission would be divided into groups with each charged with some particular phase of the work.

"The first thing is to see what reports and other data already available through the work of other investigators is reliable," Wickersham said.

He added that where specific investigations were to be made, an individual or a group would be employed out of the commission's $250,000 fund to conduct it and make a report.

Asked the length of time the work would take, Mr. Wickersham replied that he would estimate "a year and maybe two."

"My ideal is to have the organization of law such that it will make impossible for a person to violate the law without being speedily brought to book."

Asked the direct question if it were possible under the scope of the commission's work to find the prohibition law unenforceable, the former cabinet officer replied:

"It is intellectually possible, but I might add improbable."

This was before he explained that if the commission found any law to be unenforceable it would so report.

The ten lawyers and jurists and the one woman—an educator—who compose the commission had luncheon with the president at the white house and then adjourned to the cabinet room in the executive offices for the first meeting. The president spoke for three minutes. Chairman Wickersham for an equal length of time and Attorney General Mitchell took just a minute to offer the records and cooperation of his department to the commission.

Besides Mr. Wickersham, members of the commission are: Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war; Frank J. Loesch, vice president of the Chicago crime commission; Roscoe Pound, dean of Harvard law school; Judge William I. Grubb, of Alabama; Judge Monte M. Lemann of Louisiana; Judge William S. Kenyon of Ohio; Kenneth R. Mackintosh, former chief justice of Washington state supreme court; Judge Paul J. McCormick of California; Henry W. Anderson, of Virginia, United States member of Mexican claims commission 1924-26 and Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe college.

NINE BODIES TAKEN FROM FROM CONNELLSVILLE MINE

YOLANDE, Ala., May 28.—(AP)—Afterdamp, the lethal gas that follows mine explosions, today prevented federal and state inspectors entering Connellsville mine of the Yolande Coal & Coke company near here, to determine the cause of an explosion which killed nine men and injured two others last night.

Rescue squads returning to the surface last night after bringing bodies of the victims to the open, reported that the one fan which was kept blowing down the 1,000 foot shaft had served to practically clear it of poisonous gases. Attempts to enter the mine through one of its two main openings were postponed 36 hours today when the fumes were detected as they were forced up by pure air. Inspectors must approve re-opening the mine.

Funeral services for the victims, all but two of whom were married and were fathers will be held tomorrow, double services to be conducted in some instances.

Mark Hulsey, coal digger and O. E. Chastine, a fire boss, the two miners brought up alive, still were in serious conditions in Birmingham hospital today. Attending physicians said Hulsey had but a fighting chance for recovery.

SENATE LIMITS DEBATE ON REAPPORTIONMENT BILL

WASHINGTON, May 28.—(AP)—The senate disposed of one of the most controverted amendments to the census and reapportionment bill today by defeating the Sackett proposal to exclude aliens from the count upon which representation in the house would be based.

Later the senate accepted a proposal by Senator Watson, Indiana, republican leader, to prohibit debate on the bill after 2 p. m. tomorrow and limit discussion on any amendment to five minutes. A final vote is expected shortly after the debate curtailment goes into effect.

The amendment of Senator Sackett, republican, Kentucky, was rejected 48 to 29. Its purpose was to prohibit the director of census from taking into consideration aliens in making the computations upon which a state's representation in the house would be based. Friends of the census bill contended the exclusion of aliens was not constitutional and a number of those who voted against the amendment declared they did so on that ground.

REPARATIONS CONFERENCE WORKING FOR AGREEMENT

PARIS, May 28.—(AP)—Submerged by a flood of figures, the reparations conference again appeared today to be marking time but official spokesmen explained that real work was going on in a final effort to arrive at an agreement.

The experts, together with accountants and statisticians, have worked overtime since Sunday, in hopes of discovering a date for inaugurating Owen D. Young's reparations plan which would satisfy both the allies and the Germans.

The accountants have made computations for a date supposed to be Sept. 1st, with a few concessions by the creditor countries this might make a settlement possible.

Hjalmar Schacht insists that the Dawes plan must end, and the Young plan begin, on April 1, as was first calculated in computing the present values of the annuities under the Young plan. The objection to this is that the allies is that it would enroll another reparation of annuities among the creditors, who would like to avoid it because of the immense difficulties under which the reparation was reached prior to the creditors first proposal.

The American experts, who had cancelled their passage on homeward bound steamers once a week for the past three months, now hope to sail on the French liner France a week from tomorrow.

JONES LAW CONVICTIONS IN FEDERAL DISTRICT COURT

HARTFORD, May 28.—(AP)—At the opening here today of the June term of the U. S. federal district court, Judge Warren B. Burrows presiding, Alfred Williams and George Redding, both of Hartford, were convicted of violating the federal prohibition law under the Jones act. Represented by Attorney Howard Drew, both pleaded guilty to transporting liquor illegally. Williams, who owned the $3,000 car in which the liquor—three gallons of whiskey—was being transported and which was confiscated by the government, was fined $150 and sentenced to jail for 90 days. Both fine and sentence were remitted. Redding, who was chauffeur of the car when it was searched by federal agents May 4, was given a three months jail sentence, execution of which was suspended.

In imposing sentence on the two Hartford men, Judge Burrows commented on the severity of the punishment which resulted from the confiscation of the automobile, purchased by Williams for $2,300 and run only a few hundred miles. Because of the loss of the automobile, the court exhibited leniency in imposing further sentence.

STATE POLICE CALLED IN TO INVESTIGATE FIRE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 28—The state police have been called into the probe by Fire Chief Wade U. Webster to determine the origin of the fire which caused several thousands of dollars damage in the 12-room residence owned by Charles E. Barrett at 1511 West Main street Monday evening. Officer Henry Heinold who has been assigned to the case from the Stafford Springs barracks co-operated with the fire chief in an intensive investigation today. Barrett, who is a painter by occupation was reported as recovered today from the fit of hysterics which he suffered upon arrival at the scene of the fire Monday night. The investigators are attempting to ascertain the nature of valuables which Barrett claims were hidden in a wall of the house and which were evidently burned in the fire.

Barrett, who came into possession of the old residence some months ago from the mother of F. R. Robertson, had made extensive improvements to the building including the repainting of the exterior and erection of an attractive veranda. While water damage was caused throughout the building, the actual loss by fire was confined to the second floor and attic. The second floor was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. George S. Hutchinson, the latter's son, Rodney Clyne and Barrett. The lower floor was vacant.

The pretentious old residence was the scene of a mysterious fire last February when a blaze of suspicious origin broke out in the cellar, the house then being occupied by L. W. Ives and family. During the investigation in which the state police took part, Ives expressed his belief that the blaze was the work of an incendiarist and subsequently moved from the premises. As far as is known, however, nothing has been uncovered to lead to any definite connection between the two fires.

The property is assessed on the tax books at $6,200 and is insured for $8,000, most of this being in protection of heavy mortgages, however.

NEW PAPER MONEY.

It will not be long now before banks are displaying specimens of the new money that is to be put into circulation the first of July. Samples, so to speak, will be sent to the banks for display purposes that the public may become acquainted with the appearance of the smaller paper money before it is actually put into use.

The new bills are to be smaller in size than those now in use. They will be shorter and narrower, and as the result of this cutting down of the size there will be a considerable saving effected by the treasury department in the cost of the paper. Furthermore the money has been printed and allowed to stand for seasoning purposes so that there should be less wear upon it than would be the case if it were put into circulation right off the press. Though some bills may look as if they had been doing duty for a century, because of their dirty crumpled appearance, the average life of the smaller denominations is only about seven months. Thus the reduction in size and the reduction in the wear and tear are bound to mean substantial saving for the treasury department.

Except for the period during which old paper money will be withdrawn from use and new issued in its place just as rapidly as possible, there will probably be little inconvenience on the part of the average individual. Those who handle much money will be obliged to exercise much care to see that the smaller bills are not overlooked among those of larger size, but that should cover no great period while at the end there should result a uniformity in the various currency issues which should eliminate some of the undesirable features of the past.

All issues of the various denominations are to be alike as to color and design. They will have the same portraits and thus eliminate such confusion as may have arisen in the past from that source. There will be a simplification of designs and the result should be to make it much more difficult for counterfeiters to carry on their work. Needless to say the reduction in the size of the paper money will have no effect upon the purchasing power of the respective denominations.

VOTING MACHINE DEMONSTRATION.

It is well for the voters of Norwich, especially the new ones, to bear in mind that the registrars of voters have arranged for a demonstration of the use of voting machines in the court house between the hours of 1 and 9 for three days commencing this afternoon.

If for any reason there is any uncertainty in regard to the manner in which to use the machine for voting next Monday, advantage should be taken of the services which are offered by the registrars to provide the needed instructions. The demonstration has been arranged for the purpose of doing away with uncertainties.

The voting machine is very simple to operate. Yet there are times when questions arise, when the machine is not at hand, which seem a bit complicated. It is for the purpose of clearing these up that the registrars are to give their time for the next three afternoons so that there will be no confusion election day.

Bring your problems to the registrars and get their interpretation of them. They will show those who are unfamiliar with the machine how easy it is to vote by that method and they will permit you to go through the motions to vote as you wish at the city election next Monday.

Such demonstrations are provided in anticipation of election day in order to eliminate the delay and confusion of instructing voters when there are many waiting to use the voting machine election day. Thus the accommodation that is provided should be used and we have no doubt whatever that the registrars would prefer that the voters keep them busy with their questions during the next three afternoons than to spend that time in idleness waiting to give assistance to those who do not come.

ALWAYS READY TO SERVE.

In an article recently prepared by Commodore B. L. Reed, retired, on what the coast guard has done for Alaska, he relates accounts of the early experience of that branch of the government service which has been conducted under several names. What was first the revenue cutter service, with which was afterward linked the life-saving service, is now the coast guard. But the service was as real and effective in the early days as it is now.

Commodore Reed tells of the wreck, the classic case being, in a sweeping condition during the McKinley administration. There was lack of sanction both and the president was told that it would require a considerable time to fit a ship out for such relief purposes. Finally turning to the revenue cutter service he asked Captain Shoemaker, chief of that service, about making the dangerous winter trip and got the reply, "Mr. President, the revenue cutter service is always ready!" And so it proved. A cutter was at once sent and rescued the stranded whalers.

Perhaps we hear the most these days about the coast guard in relation to the enforcement of prohibition and the attacks upon rum row. Such is by no means their only duty. They are ready for service and they were constantly being called upon by vessels in distress. When calls for help are received at sea a coast guard vessel that is out at any hour to offer assistance and give relief. It may be a case of getting a disabled ship out of the channel, said by other vessels. It may be a case of locating one that is adrift on the high seas. It may be a case of rescuing those on a ship that is sinking, or aiding ships which have been in collision to port or of rendering assistance in many other similar instances. The coast guard is responsible for the saving of many lives and great property in the course of a year so those engaged in commerce trade will understand. It is a service upon which much dependence is placed and experience shows that the coast guard is always ready in these days, even as the revenue cutter service was back in the last century.

CANADIAN DEVELOPMENTS.

Having the room and the opportunity it is the logical thing that Canada should be anxious to develop. There are various ways in which it can grow, in which it can bring into use its enormous natural resources, but in doing so it must give its attention to the provision of the needed facilities.

For the accommodation of its people and for the purpose of attracting visitors it has for a number of years been engaged in building and maintaining better roads until it has a system that is accomplishing just what was intended. Its season isn't as long as in this country but they give much attention to their roads and they understand the value of advertising them.

Further than that there is the very important problem of transportation which must get attention. Canada has much excellent service of this character but there are great open spaces which are as yet without service. They have not been tapped but as soon as they are and an outlet is provided additional development will follow.

In this connection Canada ought not to overlook the importance that is attached to the plan of developing the St. Lawrence waterway. There are vast areas which would be brought much nearer to the markets by making it possible for ocean liners to come into the Great Lakes. There are provinces to the north as well as states to the south of the lakes that would reap the benefit, and the surprising thing is that Canada is not displaying a greater interest than it is in this development.

Just now it is showing interest in the construction of a railroad line to Hudson bay as a means of getting grain to a shipping port in the shortest distance. That means crossing a wild, undeveloped section of the country which is bound to undergo improvement in time, but for a much smaller part of the year than the St. Lawrence route. Canada may well be interested in the advantages attached to both routes but it must recognize that the handicaps of the Hudson bay route are much more serious than those of the St. Lawrence.

VALIDITY ESTABLISHED.

Not all of the decisions of the United States supreme court are unanimous. Many of them are not but with all the justices upholding the legality of the pocket veto it is apparent that not the slightest doubt exists regarding its validity.

Sometimes by the widest stretch of the imagination it is possible for some to regard an established practice as unconstitutional. When the Muscle Shoals bill was sent to President Coolidge he took no action upon it before congress adjourned. That adjournment occurred within ten days after the bill reached the president and it was thus regarded as a pocket veto, such as has been the disposition of hundreds of measures.

The question was then raised by those who did not like that disposition of the bill as to whether the ending of that session of congress was an adjournment or a recess and the matter was carried to the supreme court to decide.

It is well to have it decided for it prevents the raising of such a question again. The court holds that the ending of the session was an adjournment in the meaning of the constitutional provision concerning presidential action on bills, that the bill was killed by the failure of congress to allow time in which to return it signed or unsigned and the pocket veto cannot be upset in this or other similar instances on the ground of being unconstitutional.

The court has supported the course that was taken by the president and it has shown that the many previous cases of the same character were good and lawful precedents and not subject to attacks at this late date.

LEAVE IT TO HELEN

"I'm so glad you volunteered to sub for me, Helene!" exclaimed Marina Smith's secretary, as neatly lipstick Lest week's didn't care to go away and leave him to some careless secretary from an agency, but this year the doctor says I positively must have a rest, and it's such a relief to have you on the job."

"I'll be on the job all right," answered Helen Brown. "Is there anything," she asked, "that Mr. Smithson especially dislikes?"

"Gum he loathes," said Martha, and aimless chatter drives him crazy. But of course there's no fear of your offending that way. Then Arth—Mr. Smithson can't bear to be interrupted when he's dictating, and he insists on brevity on the telephone."

"Gum—chatter—interrupt," memorized Helen.

"And use your own judgment about letters," Martha went on. "Don't trouble Mr. Smithson with anything you can handle yourself."

"Got you," said Helen.

"And you won't let Arthur—Mr. Smithson go out without his overcoat, will you? He's so careless."

"Not a chance," answered Helen. "And I'll see that his shoes are shined at the back and that he has a clean hanky. You do need a vacation, Martha."

"Good-by, then. I feel sure you won't irritate Mr. Smithson."

"Only for his own good," Helen assured her. "We'll get along like corned beef and cabbage. Have a good time! It's a wonder, mumsy," she said as the door closed on their guest, "that even a man could be so blind to the treasure he's got in Martha. Regards he as so much office furniture, I suppose. "Well," she concluded grimly, "Mr. Smithson will see her in a different light when she gets back."

"Good morning, Mr. Smithson," Helen greeted her temporary employer, "Lovely morning, isn't it? What? Well, yes, it is raining now you mention it, but what I always say, why look on the gloomy side? 'Laugh and the world laughs with you.' Oh, your mail? Right here."

"No personal letters?" asked Mr. Smithson.

"One," said Helen. "I've already answered it."

"What!"

"Martha told me to use my own judgment and not bother you with details," explained Helen. "The letter was from a Mrs. Mulleyn, asking for a subscription to her Society of Providing Cannibals with Kimonos. I told her she ought to be ashamed of herself fussing over cannibals, with conditions in this country what they are."

"Mrs. Mulleyn," said Mr. Smithson with frozen calmness, "is my aunt."

"She'll think all the more of you" Helen assorted. "Oh, look out, don't put your elbow on my gum."

"Gum!" exclaimed Mr. Smithson with a violent start. "I—you can't—really—here, take this letter. Egbert Woodle—"

"Egbert!" interrupted Helen. "Kind of a cute name, don't you think? My boy friend's name is William. Kind of a cute boy. But you want to get out a letter. 'Egert Boodle'—I got that—Oh, there's the telephone. Maybe it's William. I told him—Hello, guess who this is—naughty—party seems peevish, Mr. Smithson—name's Boddington or Poddington."

"Mr. Coddington! The president of our company!" gulped Mr. Smithson, reaching a shaking hand for the telephone.

"Marth—Miss Work!" exclaimed Mr. Smithson in tones which no piece of office furniture ever elicited.

"Arth—Mr. Smithson!" exclaimed Martha. "Did you get along all right without me?"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Two Graves Fairly in County

Mr. Editor: The New London Co. fair has passed from the scene of its events much to the regret of many now living in this county who remember it as it de years ago—a week for every year—man and child, "and then some"—its stalls full of cows and steers; cows and heifers; sheep and swine. Other buildings filled with such a gathering together of the products of the farm as never was.

Whatever the cause of the closing of its activities, we mourn its loss.

There are still left in the county two previous avenues fairly that are making their presence felt for miles around. The North Stonington grange fair, holding a three day exhibit each September along strictly agricultural and household lines. The Pachaug grange fair, near Jewett City, also holding such an exhibit. At North Stonington this year, the 4-H clubs of the county will establish their headquarters. R. W. Whapled, county club leader, assures us of large representation from these clubs with exhibits of their many endeavors.

Encourage these boys and girls by your presence and constructively given criticism of their work.

For all others who have found enjoyment in helping on such a community event, we have ample grounds, with fine exhibit halls, and while they are unusually well filled yet we invite your co-operation and "will move over a little closer" that you may still have opportunity to show the product of your dairy, garden, kitchen and needle.

GRANGER.

North Stonington, May 28, 1929.

Time for Taxpayers to Awake.

Mr. Editor: In that explanation of the new charter I was astonished to learn that we are even now paying for a clerk for our city clerkship. How long has this been going on? Who started it? In a job where the work is confined chiefly to one night a month isn't this rubbing it in? Why not end that instead of asking us to create a fat, swivel-chair full time job? How many clerks would be required for the city clerkship under the proposed charter?

That street assessment provision looks to me like another imposition on the taxpayers who have been paying for street work year after year but now face the expense of any improvement when it happens to concern the street in front of their homes.

By all means, voters, kill that revised charter. We have had the wool pulled over our eyes long enough. We have seen our taxes mounting mounting, partly through increased and unearned salaries. Now with a swelled assessment and a lowered tax calling for just as much or more money, we are getting a new charter kick for more taxes immediately, more money for the probation office, more money for a city clerk who has a clerk, more wanted for the police, more to be asked soon for the firemen to take care of that double-jointed platoon system, more for commissioners, more for other employes and it will not be long before with other demands we are paying a 5 per cent tax again on the increased valuation.

Get your eyes open, taxpayers, and do a little thinking and acting for yourselves.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 28—The stickum on Uncle Sam's postage stamps is a frequent matter of complaint by users of the mails.

Hardly a day goes by but letters come into the postoffice department kicking because the stamps will not stay put. Every postmaster general has had to deal with the question usually more than once during his tenure of office. Postmaster General Brown is no exception.

There was a particularly extensive outbreak of complaints about the time General Brown took over his duties. One wag who wrote in suggested the government could do a good incidental business and at the same time make sure that the stamps stayed put if it sold thumb tacks along with the stamps to fasten them on.

Another asked if rubber had not been inadvertently included in the stickum formula. Stamps appeared to bounce off letters of themselves, he alleged.

Approves the Glue

In any event, the fuss was enough to pry General Brown out of his office for a personal inspection of the stamp making process, particularly the stickum part of it.

He spent considerable time down at the bureau of printing and engraving and finally officially approved the stickum formula, finding no justice in the complaints.

The Bystander recalls that some years ago when a fuss of the same sort was on, somebody in congress, perhaps former Senator John Sharp Williams of Mississippi, popped in a proposal that something be done to improve the taste of the stickum on stamps.

What was needed, it was said, was an assortment of flavors to correspond to the coloring of the stamps, strawberry for the red two-centers, lime for the green one-centers, chocolate for the brown stamps, and so on.

He's a Cook

Had General Brown been called upon to deal with that aspect of the stamp stickum matter, he would have qualified as an expert on his own hook.

For it seems that in addition to being a lawyer, a business efficiency expert and a sharp on political patronage matters, General Brown is a cook of note. His specialty, or one of them, is corn pudding. He has ideas of his own on how that delectable southern dish should be concocted. He even favors a special kind of corn for the purpose.

Back home in Ohio it was his habit to plant that particular variety of corn at the appropriate season with plans in mind for subsequent feasts of co'n puddin' a la Brown.

In Washington, General Brown lives in a huge barrack of an apartment hotel completely surrounded by professionally landscaped gardens. There is no place for a private corn patch.

That has not defeated his purpose to have the corn of his choice this year, however, for he has found a suitable bit of ground on the Virginia farm of a friend, brought in seed by air mail, and now puts in a little time o'Sundays watching his crop mature. There is co'n puddin' in the offing for his friends.

YOUR HEALTH

NO AGE EXEMPT FROM WHOOPING COUGH

By Benjamin Tappan, M. D., Babies' Milk Fund Association, Baltimore, Md.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Whooping-cough is a very widespread and a very serious disease. Any illness that kills over 10,000 children a year in this country alone can scarcely be dismissed as of no consequence. Most of these deaths occur in children under the age of 5. The chief reason for avoiding whooping-cough as long as possible is because the younger the child, the more liable he is to die. When you consider that out of every 100 children under 5 who die in this country, taking into account all possible causes of death, 3 out of each 100 die as a result of whooping-cough, you must admit that it is worthwhile taking some trouble to avoid it, and that it is worthwhile protecting others from it.

Whooping-cough is commonest during the spring and early summer months, but some cases are always present at any time of the year. There is no age at which the disease cannot occur, but the vast majority of cases are found in children between the ages of 1 and 7.

There are a certain number of children who have what we call a natural immunity to the disease, which means that they are able to withstand the ordinary exposure without catching whooping-cough. Unfortunately, we have no way of knowing ahead of time which children are immune.

In the typical case, the disease may be divided into three stages, the course of which is briefly as follows:

The first stage, called the stage of invasion or the catarrhal stage, is characterized by a dry cough, sneezing and redness of the eyes. There is no fever, usually, and the cough is much like any other cough, not having developed the characteristics that appear later. Unfortunately, in this stage the disease is very infectious and yet is extremely difficult to diagnose. If a physician examines the child at this period and can find no signs at all of bronchitis or of any other condition that would be liable to cause such a cough, whooping-cough should be suspected, particularly if the cough is getting steadily worse and if there are cases of the disease in the neighborhood or in the school that the child attends.

The first stage passes gradually into the second stage, which we call the paroxysmal or spasmodic stage. The cough now comes in definite spells, in which the child coughs so hard that frequently he runs to his mother or grasps the nearest object for support. He coughs and coughs in a series of short, sharp barks without drawing his breath until the end of the spell, when he draws in a long breath with such force that a loud whooping sound results. During this spell tears are in his eyes, his face becomes red or even purple, and the veins stand out on his head and neck. This performance may be repeated several times in quick succession until the child gags or vomits, spitting up a plug of mucus, after which he seems relieved and is perfectly normal for a longer or shorter time. It is very striking to see how suddenly a child can recover from a very severe spell of coughing in which he may even lose consciousness. Two or three minutes after the paroxysm is over he may be playing about as usual, apparently perfectly normal. The number of these paroxysms may vary from 15 to as high as 100, or in very severe cases to over 15 in 24 hours. In uncomplicated cases of whooping-cough, the paroxysmal stage lasts from 2 to 4 weeks and sometimes as long as 12 weeks.

The third stage, the stage of decline, is an indefinite period during which the cough gradually decreases in severity and the paroxysms become farther and further apart. This stage usually lasts from 1 to 3 weeks, but there may be some coughing for a long time afterwards. After recovering from whooping-cough, any cold in the head or mild attack of bronchitis may bring back the paroxysmal cough and the whoop and occasionally the vomiting for a short period. This does not mean that the child has become infectious again or that he is capable of giving whooping-cough to another child.

During the epidemic, the wisest course would be to have every child who coughs for more than a few days examined by a competent physician, and if the child has been exposed to whooping-cough, then he should be kept from associating with other children until the physician has had time to decide upon the diagnosis. In these doubtful cases the medical profession has other methods which help us in arriving at the diagnosis.

Little Talks on Thrift

A Safeguard Against Spread of Lawlessness

A reliable authority recently made the estimate that crime in the United States is causing a loss by individuals, firms and corporation approximating $3,000,000,000 a year. Other authorities have made estimates of similar import. One says our crime bill exceeds our educational bill. Another says it is three times our custom and internal revenue receipts and at least twelve times the yearly cost of the army and navy.

If would be serious enough if these data told the whole story of crime in the United States. But they do not. They merely tell us in figures that are beyond human comprehension what the cost amounts to financially. There is no yard stick by which we can measure American crime from a moral standpoint. It may be stated without fear of contradiction, however, that our plethora of lawlessness, both petty and major, is devastating the moral fiber of the nation.

It is not the purpose of this article to discuss causes or attempts to discuss cures, excepting to point out that there is no better antidote for the crime poison than thrift.

This is not to say that thrift and morality are synonyms. It is true, none the less, that thrift tends to moral stability. It is not possible for a person to save money, conserve health, economize time and develop the many fine habits that are necessary to self advancement and at the same time indulge in practices of dissolution and immorality that are incipiently criminal if not actually vicious.

Whatever causes may lie at the bottom of current lawless practices, it must be borne in mind that the majority of people are upright by nature and instinct. They drift into criminal practices often without realizing the change that is taking place within them. It is a gradual disintegration. The contention of this writer is that a condition of this kind is highly improbable with any individual in whom the habit of thrift has become firmly fixed. The inoculation of thrift in such instances brings immunity from moral deterioration.

Whatever other remedies may be brought forth to cure lawlessness in America, no one can gainsay the fact that no more practical and sensible help can be offered than the intensive development of thrift habits among the rank and file of our population.—By S. W. Straus, president American Society for Thrift.

IN DAY'S NEWS

Duisburg.

"Duisburg, which is celebrating its eight hundredth anniversary as a city, is Germany's largest river port," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"In reality Duisburg is nearly twice 800 years old. There was a village on its site in 430 A. D. and it was well known to the Romans when they occupied the Rhine country many centuries ago. When the city charter was handed to the Duisburgers in 1129 the port's commercial importance had been established.

"Viewed from a Rhine river boat there is nothing in Duisburg to suggest its age. The traveler looks out upon a maze of shipping. Duisburg and Ruhrort were merged in 1908 and the quays of the two cities it spread out in a single line along the Rhine would span twenty-five miles of river bank.

"A constant stream of boats is coming from the Rhine channel. Iron products, steel, coal, tobacco and textiles move from this port to many parts of the world, mainly across the Atlantic. Dutch, British, Swiss and Swedish ships have been frequent visitors to the docks of Duisburg. Coal is transported from the Ruhr fields to Duisburg, where it is converted into coke. Thousands of the Ruhr people at Duisburg find work in the docks and factories, at the docks, at the port, where their products are transferred to sea-going ships, or converted in Duisburg mills.

"Smoke from forty smoke stacks rises above blast and coke plants, rolling mills, hundreds of machine shops, chemical works and factories and coke ovens. Dwarfed in the brightest days the blast furnaces belch a volume of flame and smoke that startles the traveler. A Duisburger will show him how some of the factories make use of their smoke by extracting gases which help turn the wheels in the mills from which it comes.

"Quaint, gabled houses with dormer steps protruding upon the cobbles of narrow streets, and the venerable St. Savior's church, a fine Gothic edifice whose spire rises 312 feet above the city, take the traveler back a few centuries, but most of Duisburg is as new as any of America's colonial towns.

"In the middle of the nineteenth century Duisburg had only 13,000 inhabitants and Ruhrort, 7,000. Today both cities have a population of 270,000 drawn from nearly all parts of Germany, and many parts of Europe. As the rich Ruhr district is further developed, Duisburg, as the water gateway of the Ruhr district, bids fair to continue to grow.

"Forty per cent of the working population of Duisburg work in the great steel mills of the Duisburg area. Frequently they crowd the city stadium which accommodates 40,000 spectators.

"The opera and some of Germany's finest orchestras find enthusiastic audiences here. Many churches and government buildings as well as the museum are adorned with paintings, sculptures or industrial art works.

"The newer portion of Duisburg is laid out with modern thoroughfares, in the business districts of which are fine shops. Frequently the streets open into the broad squares where Duisburg has placed statues in honor of local and national patriots. Duisburg was the home of Gerhard Mercator and in the Burg-Platz is a fountain commemorating the map-maker."

Navajo Indians, lacking birth certificates, are being supplied with disks of identification similar to those worn by soldiers, which will enable the Indian at any time to establish his tribal status and protect his property rights.

Merton C. Brownell

The community of Hanover was saddened by the death of Merton C. Brownell at his home in the village early Monday morning. He had been confined to his home for two months and for a much longer period had not been in good health. Three times during the past 30 years, Mr. Brownell has been actively associated with Angus Park's interests in the woolen business. As overseer of the carding department of Airlie mills, Mr. Brownell was looked upon by all his associates as a most efficient workman. His knowledge of machinery and wool, together with his faithfulness in service, made him an expert in his line of work, one whose place is always hard to fill.

Mr. Brownell was born, Jan. 24, 1867, in Rochwells Mills, N. Y., and on Sept. 4, 1894, at Norwich, N. Y., he married Lulu DeLong. He is survived by his wife; also by two sisters, Mrs. Cora E. He was also a noble of Mystic Shrine, Bektash temple, Concord, N. H.

FORM ORGANIZATION TO KEEP NORWICH TAX RATE FROM RISING

A new, independent organization, without affiliation with any other, to be known as the Norwich Tax Payers association was organized Tuesday evening at a meeting held at the chamber of commerce rooms in the Thayer building, with the indicated intention of keeping the tax rate from being boosted by wasteful and unwise expenditures, salary grabs and other expenditures which the expanded grand list of Norwich might encourage.

The 50 or more in the room where the meeting was held filled it to its capacity, while a number more stood outside in the hall and it was decided that the next meeting in a week would be held at Odd Fellows hall.

Ex-mayor H. M. Lerou called the meeting to order, speaking briefly and stating that we have just had a revaluation and the tax rate is low as far as the number of mills is concerned, and the meeting is held to form a tax payers association to keep it where it belongs and be on the lookout against things which should not be.

On motion of Mr. Lerou, the meeting made D. T. Shea temporary chairman. He accepted the office with a few words of appreciation for the good number attending. James F. Fleming was elected temporary secretary.

Mr. Shea addressed the meeting, explaining that it was his thought that a tax payers organization was needed in Norwich now, that it had been a success in other places and would be a benefit to large and small tax payers alike. We have an inflated grand list that has gone from 22 million to 70 million and that is a tendency to encourage extravagance and we have got to meet that and curb waste. It is up to the property owners who are the real underdogs, Mr. Shea said, and he proposed that membership in the association should consist of real estate owners at an annual membership fee of $1. "We are approaching the city meeting," said Mr. Shea," with evident danger of a boost of four mills and we ought to be awake."

Mr. Shea said he hoped for an organization of 2,000 members.

The meeting then proceeded to temporary organization, adopting the following as an expression of its purpose:

The purpose for which said association is formed are the following, to wit: To promote friendship and unity amongst its members; to encourage civic pride; and to support any movement that is for the general good of Norwich.

Rodier, with a third to be named, preferably a woman. A. M. Van Wagenen was elected treasurer and a board of five directors was elected as follows: David D. Disco, Roy D. Judd, Harry M. Land, P. J. Morley, G. Warren Davis.

Later, on motion of Mr. Lerou, a nominating committee consisting of Henry G. Peck, Judge N. J. Ayling, J. B. Caron, Nathan Belt and Thomas F. Burns, was elected to bring in names to make up a board of directors of about 25 from the different districts and localities in the town.

It was agreed that every man present should endeavor to get members before the next meeting and the secretary was authorized to have membership tickets printed.

The names of 42 were taken for membership at the meeting and the announcement was made that those who desire to become affiliated with the new organization should send their names to the secretary when they will be given due recognition.

NON-SUIT IS DENIED IN SUIT AGAINST DOCTOR

When the plaintiff's case had been concluded in the superior court here Tuesday afternoon before Judge Allyn L. Brown in the trial of the $50,000 damages suit of Miss Mary A. Shea, a New London school teacher against Dr. Hugh F. Lena, a physician and proprietor of a hospital in that city, attorneys for the doctor moved for a non-suit, but Judge Brown denied the motion.

Miss Shea has brought the suit on the ground of Dr. Lena's alleged lack of skill and negligence in giving her X-ray treatment so that she suffered a serious burn on the left side of her throat, neck and chest which has disfigured her permanently. She first employed him on Aug. 6, 1926, she claimed, and the X-ray treatment was given on Nov. 22, 1926.

After Miss Shea's testimony in the case, in which she described the way Dr. Lena administered the X-ray treatment, Dr. Leon Lewald of New York, an expert in the use of X-ray was called to the stand and questioned as to proper methods in administering the X-ray and was called upon to pass his judgment upon the methods Dr. Lena had used.

Dr. Lena was the first witness called for the defense. He told of buying an X-ray machine in 1920 and of having treated Miss Shea between 1923 and 1926 at times for colds, a run-down condition and nervousness. In 1926 he said she had trouble from a gland in her neck, which was a serious condition and carried the threat of tuberculosis. He operated to remove the gland in November, 1926, and subsequently a swelling developed from jab to collar bone, with a discharging sinus, and grew worse to Dec. 23, when Miss Shea suggested the use of X-ray, which was discontinued on Dec. 31. He testified that Miss Shea paid him $110, which was all he thought she could afford to pay. He described the other treatments he gave Miss Shea.

Fred R. Campbell of Lynn, Mass., an electrical engineer who was a member of the company that manufactured Dr. Lena's X-ray machine, testified to its construction and was on the stand when court adjourned for the day.

MYSTIC YOUTH DOES JUMP IN PARACHUTE

A person who will go up in an airplane, get out of the cockpit and crawl out onto the top of the wing at a height of 2,000 feet and jump off in a parachute, has a lot of nerve. One who does it for the first time has a colossal nerve. This stunt was done by James Simons of Mystic the other day over the Poquonock aviation field and there is more to it.

The young Mystic lad, who is about 20 years old, went to the field to inspect it and watch the aviators take off and land and do their stunts in the air. After enjoying this for some time one of the operators of the "sticks" called for volunteers to try out a parachute.

Simons, who had never been up in an airplane and whose knowledge of a parachute was nil, responded and a a conference with the pilot donned the parachute, received instructions as to its operation and entered the cockpit. He was whisked away up into the upper realms to a height of 2,000 feet.

Crawling out onto the wing young Simons looked to his parachute to see that everything was O. K. and then took the leap. Not a heavily built lad, only weighing about 125 lbs., and evidently not pulling the ring on the parachute as soon as he was clear of the plane Simons made three complete somersaults in the air without the parachute opening.

It opened some 500 feet down, and he was gently lowered toward terra firma, a slight wind carrying him away from the aviation field toward an open lot. He landed a mile away, only after narrowly missing striking a large tree and after being dragged along for a distance of 25 feet. The total of injuries sustained comprised a few scratches on the legs.

Asked why he did this daring stunt, he replied "for a thrill." Young Simons was offered a $100 a week to do parachute jumping, but he flatly refused. He is employed at the Rossie Velvet mill at Mystic, as a twister. Evidently he thinks this is a safer vocation than the other, although it does not run into as high money.

CRIMINAL COMMON PLEAS DISPOSES OF CASES

Several cases were disposed of by Judge Charles B. Waller at the closing session of the criminal term of the court of common pleas in New London Tuesday morning. Court then adjourned until next Saturday morning.

A motor vehicle law violation charged against Joseph Adelman of Salem was nolled on the payment of $50.

A motor vehicle law violation charge against William F. Bailey of this city was nolled on the payment of $5.

The case against Edwin G. Hartwell, charging a violation of the motor vehicle law, was reopened and nolled on the payment of $15.65. On May 23 a bond was called.

WENT THROUGH FENCE ON ROAD AT TUNNEL HILL

As an aftermath of an accident on Tunnel hill on the Jewett City river highway about 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, Albert Murphy of Norwich Town was arrested and placed under a charge of driving a machine while under the influence of liquor. He will be presented in justice court in Lisbon today (Wednesday).

Murphy was driving his machine towards Jewett City and had just rounded the curve at Tunnel hill at the time of the accident. The machine struck a good sized tree at the bottom of the hill on the left hand side, veered across to the right and went through the state highway fence, ripping off about 50 feet of it. The machine was badly damaged.

The Danielson barracks was informed of the accident and State Police Officer Strand was assigned to the case. After an investigation, in which two bottles, filled with alleged liquor, were found in the machine, Murphy was arrested on the drunken driving charge. He was taken to the lockup in Jewett City.

MAYS STOPS CANZONERI IN SIXTH ROUND; McCARTHY KAYOES EDWARDS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 28—Bobby Mays, state lightweight champion, was awarded a technical knockout over Jimmy Canzoneri of New York at the end of the sixth round of the scheduled ten round main bout at the New London arena here tonight. Canzoneri's right eyelid was swollen and raw from a bad cut and blood was rushing from his mouth when Referee Billy Conway called a halt.

Although badly cut and bleeding Canzoneri was aggressive during the last two rounds of the bout and protested vigorously when the referee refused to let him continue.

Mays fought a heady battle all the way and was at his best in the fourth round when he staggered the New Yorker with three left hooks to the jaw. Canzoneri reeled backward but the ropes saved him from falling to the floor.

Canzoneri had considerable difficulty with the southpaw stance of the Connecticut champion and while he kept piling in with apparent intent to use his right hand at close quarters he continually walked into Mays' left hand.

Mays was in exceptionally good condition. He was punching solidly with his left hand and scoring heavily with hooks to the head and body. Mays weighed 133 and Canzoneri was three pounds heavier.

Johnny Thomas of New Bedford outpointed Jimmy Flores, Newport, R. I., Filipino in the eight round semi-final. Thomas outpointed Flores throughout the bout being very fast. Flores was a little slower. Thomas weighed 112 and Flores 113 1-2.

Joe Russo Westerly slugger knocked out Battling Brusso of Fall River in the third round of a scheduled six rounder. Brusso boxed skillfully in the first two rounds but the Westerly slugger broke through his defense in the third round and brought him down with right smashes to the chin. Early in the third round Brusso went down twice for the count of eight but got up again and was apparently regaining his composure when the Westerly boy charged again and pinned him to the ropes under a divining two-fisted attack. A straight right to the chin sent Brusso to the canvass and the referee gave the bout to Russo without stopping to count. The weights were Russo 133, Brusso 134.

McCarthy Kayoes Edwards.

Tom McCarthy of Norwich knocked out Johnny Edwards of Fall River in the second round of a four round preliminary. McCarthy went after his man early in the second round and sent him down the first time for a count of eight. He followed up his advantage swiftly and almost immediately sent his opponent to the floor again. Edwards tried to arise but buckled over and took the full count. McCarthy weighed 137 and Edwards 137 1-2.

Bennie Novak of the Sub Base won the decision in a bloody battle with Battling Eurk of Westerly in another four round bout. Novak was the master all the way. He smeared the Westerly boy almost at will with his left hand and Eurk's nose was bleeding profusely after the first round. Eurk was also badly cut behind the left ear. The weights were Novak 134 1-2 and Eurk 134.

Muggsy Mandell of Fall River took the last three rounds of the four-round curtain raiser to win the decision over Babe Janis of New London. Janis forced the fighting in the first round and had the Fall River boy on the verge of a knockout after two minutes of fighting. He eased up however and gave his opponent too much time to recover. Mandell fought cautiously for the rest of the fight and won easily on points. The weights were Janis 132 1-2 and Mandell 132.

The attendance was about 1500.

DUWELL ROAD RACE ENTRIES NUMBER 116

Seven states, 26 cities and 36 clubs are represented in the entry list for the Fourth Annual Duwell road race, to be run here Thursday afternoon. With the official closing of the entry Tuesday at midnight the list showed the names of 116 athletes. With what few stragglers may be heard from today it is expected that this number will be boosted to nearly 140. A glance through the entry list reveals the names of the country's outstanding distance men, national champs, state champions and former title holders. In the eyes of the local following the name of Clarence DeMar, Melrose Lezionnaire stands out above all others, despite the fact that there are a number listed who are much faster for 10 miles than the three time member of the American Olympic team. One of the entrants, who had not been previously mentioned, but stands a real good chance of copping the race is Phil Silverman of the Brooklyn Harriers. Silverman, whose entry was received late Tuesday afternoon is the national cross country champion and is considered one of the fastest men in the business for ten miles. It would not be the least bit surprising if Silverman, Whitey Michelson, Arthur Gavrin, Max Lamp, Jimmy Zinc, Cyril Hill, Fred Cavetti, Russell Jackel and Fred Ward staged a pretty battle for the race honors.

COURSE OF RACE

Start at entrance of Duwell field, down Main to Franklin Square; up Franklin Street and McKinley Avenue to Rockwell Street; through Rockwell and Crescent to Broadway; up Broadway and Washington Street to Backus Hospital corner; through Lafayette and Sachem Streets to Washington Street; down Washington Street and through Washington Square to Water Street; through Water and Shetucket Streets to Shannon corner; over Main to entrance of Duwell field; through Stanton and Hamilton Avenue into Main and over entire course again to finish at corner of Main Street and Hedge Avenue near Duwell Club.

Susie Says

It looks like winter was about over.

We had a hot time up at Willimantic yesterday. The weather was hot and the game was hotter and I'll be darned if the bleachers didn't get afire.

Say, can't them Academy kids play dumb, act dumb and be dumb at the most inopportune times? You can forgive errors but dumbness is an unpardonable sin.

It looked in the first couple of innings as though their heads were taking their feet off the ground, if you know what I mean. But they came to earth in the latter part of the game to play pretty good baseball.

What we want to know is why Andre St. Germaine isn't given a chance on that ball club. Andy's been with the team two years now and hasn't gone to bat once. Give him a chance, Earl, give him a chance!

I sat over on the bleachers with Bertie Gagner and Herman Gibbs (that's Chubby's father, you know) and we were in with a bunch of the student body. Say do you know I got quite a kick outa that.

What a blood-thirsty crew they were, too, the students, not Bertie and Herman. And changeable—why a woman's mind is a stable as the Rock of Gibraltar compared to them. First they wanted to tear the team limb from limb and then they switched and were just as loud with their praise.

I gotta great kick outa hearing their comments on the players and their words of praise and abuse. You can tell the world you gotta think fast to beat them kids to a comeback.

Four kids at a baseball game can spring enough wisecracks in three innings to fill one edition of Judge and Life. I'll admit some of them are not so hot but others are real humorous.

Only once during the whole game did I feel ashamed I came from Norwich. That was when a Norwich boy tried to get away with a Windham ball that went in back of the bleachers—and got caught at it.

I thought our Norwich boys were smarter than that. And when he was caught he was as meek as Moses about but not the least bit ashamed of his crude work.

And who do you suppose umpired besides Hank Morin. Why, Old Bill Nichols. I can remember when Bill was toddling 'round a ball diamond nearly twenty years ago. And now they tell me he's taken up golf. To be a good golfer you gotta keep them outa the crotches of trees, Bill.

Saw Charlie Curran up there too, but missed Jim Mustard and Jack Frazier. Guess they must have been out practicing golf, not that they need practice but more for the exercise.

Say, at that ball game there was more Norwich people than there was Willimantic fans. We all thoroughly enjoyed it even if we was late for dinner and had to eat cold beans.

The Eastern Connecticut Power company defeated the Uncasville-Shelton company team 18 to 8 last night on the Shelton field at Uncasville in their first meeting of the Industrial Twilight league. The game was a hectic affair with some poor fielding accounting for some dizzy base running made the game interesting even if not perfectly played.

N. F. A. WINS LEAGUE TITLE, TAKING 16TH STRAIGHT FROM WINDHAM, 13-4

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 28—Norwich Free Academy's unbeaten Wildcats clinched the first championship of the new Eastern Connecticut-Western Rhode Island interscholastic conference this afternoon at Recreation park when they hit hard behind good relief pitching by Red Fagan to win, 13 to 4. It was their sixteenth straight win of the year and their ninth in the league. They have but one more league game to play and as Chapman Tech, nearest rival, has lost two, there is no chance of stopping them now. The Red and White won the last four titles of the old loop.

The Academy overcame a Windham lead in the fourth inning and kept piling up scores for the rest of the way. Windham scored two in the second, without a hit. N. F. A. taking up with the loose play where they left off in the Westerly game. However, two innings later the Wildcats started hitting and there was no let-up thereafter. Windham managed to put over two in the eighth.

Extra Base Clouting.

Three triples and three doubles featured the Academy hitting attack, in which every player that went to bat had at least one hit and Jack Marks was the leader with three safeties. Fagan and Buck LaCroix had two each, the latter garnering a double and triple.

Louie Green started again on the mound for the Academy but was wild, and, after passing two in the first and the first man up in the second, he was relieved by Red Fagan, who although touched for all four runs ard the two scratch hits that Windham gathered, he was more the victim of bad support than anything else.

Tombari Features in Field.

Anso Tombari featured afield with two nice running catches of fouls in left field. Broka, with a catch off Tombari and a subsequent double play on Fagan who was on second and had started on what looked like a sure hit, featured for Windham. Score:

ONLY LIGHT PRACTICE FOR ACADEMY TODAY

The Academy will hold but a short practice this afternoon in preparation for its important game with Warren Harding high of Bridgeport. The season will last about one hour and will consist of the usual hitting and fielding.

Butsy Weisgraber, who was kept out of uniform yesterday at Windham in order to rest him up for Harding, is the Academy pitching choice. Butsy has pitched in and won eight of the last 11 games the Academy played. The team has made quite a few errors in the two games this week and their supporters are hoping they will have them all out of their system when Mr. Dizenzo and his Harding bunch take the field against them.

A record-breaking crowd is expected for this game will most probably decide the state title. The starting time is set for 3 o'clock and Buck LaCroix expects to be back at second tomorrow after receiving treatment for his lame arm.

SHYMA CLUB PLAYS DOUBLE HEADER ON THURSDAY

The Shyma club of Taftville will play a double-header on Memorial day at the Providence street grounds, with the Holy Name team of Jewett City. The games will be played in the morning and in the afternoon. The morning game is scheduled for 10 o'clock while the afternoon game starts at 3.

The Shyma club also accepts the challenge of the Hermes club for Sunday.

BRAME PITCHES PIRATES INTO TIE WITH CUBS

ST. LOUIS, May 28.—(AP)— Brame, 8. fast ball right hander held the St. Louis Cardinals to four hits and the Pittsburgh Pirates made a clean sweep of the four game series by winning today, 5 to 2.

High got a homer in the first inning and thus hit safely in his sixteenth consecutive game. Frisch doubled and Hafey singled to bring in the other Card run in this frame. Brame didn't give another hit until the ninth when Hafey scratched a single. Mitchell allowed the visitors 10 hits and 3 Cardinal errors aided the debacle.

The victory sent the Pirates into a tie for the lead with the Cubs who were rained out in Cincinnati, and dropped the Cardinals to a position one and one-half contests to the rear of the two pacemakers. All of the difference between the two leaders and the Cardinals is represented in the lost column, which shows a margin of three fewer defeats for the Buccaneers and the Bruins.

RED SOX BREAK WINNING STREAK OF ATHLETICS

BOSTON, May 28.—(AP)—The winning streak of the Philadelphia Athletics, which had reached 11 games in a row, was broken by the Red Sox here today, 5-4, in the first game of the series. Milton Gaston was in the box for the Red Sox.

A rally by the Sox after the Macks had taken a 4-0 lead, scoring one run in the fifth and two each in the seventh and eighth innings, won the game. Bob Barrett, Red Sox third baseman, knocked in three runs for Boston.

Haas scored the first Philadelphia run and drove in three others by a double in the fourth with the bases filled. After two doubles and two singles in his first four times at bat he went hitless the last time up.

Three spectacular catches by Simmons, in left field for the Athletics, helped keep down the Red Sox score.

BROWNS DOWN TIGERS IN FREE-HITTING GAME

DETROIT, May 28.—(AP) —Outhitting the Tigers in a game replete with safeties, the St. Louis Browns defeated Detroit here today, 4 to 2. Both Tiger tallies were the result of home runs by Hellmann and Alexander.

Sam Gray held the Bengals hitless for four innings while the Browns were accumulating a four run lead. The first hit off his delivery was Hellmann's circuit blow and the last Alexander's. The Tigers loaded the bases in the eighth but a double killing nipped the potential rally.

Johnny Hudlomms was touched for 12 hits in 8 innings, giving way to Yde after a pinch batsman was inserted in his place.

WESTERLY

ONLY SIX VETERANS OF CIVIL WAR REMAINING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, May 22.— There remain but six veterans of the Civil war in Westerly to participate in the Memorial day parade and exercises Thursday. The survivors of Budlong post, No. 15, G. A. R. Dept. of R. I., of Westerly, chartered April 14, 1874, and Hancock Post, No. 31, G. A. R., Dept. of Conn., chartered Dec 11, 1886, are Commander Samuel L. Tefft, 89, only remaining member of Budlong post, living in Westerly, and Charles H. Holdridge, Horace Swan, Tyler Collins and Stephen Collins, members of Hancock post. Westerly, has one other Civil war veteran, John Coy of Granite street, who was never identified with either of the two local G. A. R. posts.

Budlong post retains its charter, although its membership has dwindled to three. Besides Commander Tefft the other two surviving members are John Smith of Providence and Benjamin H. Tourtellott of 83 Union street, Franklin, Mass., frequent Westerly visitor. The Relief Corps of both posts are still in existence, although Hancock post some time ago surrendered its charter. Budlong post which still maintains headquarters in the Memorial Building, has placed its affairs in the hands of the Daughters of Veterans.

THEATRE DISTURBANCE GETS VITERITTO FINED

Angelo Viteritto, 19, of 53 Pierce street, was before Judge William A. Wilcox Tuesday morning in Stonington town court, charged with a disturbance and breach of the peace Sunday night, at the Central theatre, Pawcatuck. He was placed under arrest by Patrolman Adin R. Sheldon of Pawcatuck and lodged in the Liberty street lockup. His father, Antonio Viteritto, became his son's surety in the sum of $50 bail.

At the court session his father was named guardian ad litem and a plea of guilty was entered by the defendant. Patrolman Sheldon testified that he cautioned and spoke to several young men in the theatre lobby about their conduct. The defendant, he said, threw his hands back and with an oath, struck a companion. As he drew his hands back he nearly hit a woman. Vulgar remarks were made by him and he also resisted arrest to such an extent that the witness called on Constable Hill and James Sheldon to assist him in making the arrest. The accused said he had nothing to say.

Prosecutor Hammacher told the court that the young men caused a disturbance Sunday evening in Pawcatuck and that the officer who tried to do his duty in an efficient manner was interferred with. He stated that young fellows made a practice of coming over the state line into Pawcatuck from Westerly challenging the officer and his efforts to do his duty and see that peace was kept. With this condition brought to the court's attention he recommended a small fine.

Judge Wilcox imposed a fine of $10 and costs of $14.35 totalling $24.35, which was paid.

Case Continued

Charles Basso of Somerville, Mass., had been summoned to appear at this court session, but Prosecutor Hammacher informed the court that Basso was represented by Judge Victor S. Prince of New London, who was unable to be present, as he was engaged in Norwich. This case was continued one week, to June 4th.

To the June 4th session of Stonington town court were also continued the cases of C. H. Horm, who was followed by Officer Peter P. Bush of the Groton barracks on the cement road as far as the Manor inn, May 24th, and that of Reporter Joy, of the Providence News who had much argument with the officer.

Put on Probation

John Wilcox, colored, of Charlestown, R. I., who appeared in a special session of the third district court Monday before Judge Oliver H. Williams, was again before the court Tuesday noon. He was charged with intoxication when he was in company with William E. Bennett who was taken into custody charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. The arrests were made by Trooper Florance J. Harvey of the Hope Valley barracks. Having secured a bondsman in the person of William Gavitt of Charlestown, Wilcox on Tuesday changed his plea to guilty. Judge Williams fined him $5 and costs of $3, which was paid by Mr. Gavitt who stated to the court that the defendant was a good worker who understood farm work, but who had a faculty of disappearing when pay day came and usually got drunk. He was paroled in the custody of Mr. Gavitt who was told to report to the court on Wilcox's conduct and informed that the District Probation Officer Mrs. Bertha VanBusthirk would also visit his home.

May 27. Santo Fusaro and wife, Filomena sold to Raffale Sposato and wife Francesca Sposato land on the east side of Perkins avenue.

DANIELSON

H. S. FRANKLIN DIES AT HOME AFTER LONG ILLNESS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, May 28.—Hiram S. Franklin, 71, a life long resident of this town, died at noon today at his home on the Green Hollow road, just south of Broad street. He had been in failing health for a long time. An honored citizen, who had served this town as first selectman, a number of years ago, and, in his active years, a contracting builder, he was known in about every community in eastern Conn. in death removes another person that Killingly can ill afford to lose.

Mr. Franklin was born in this town August 29, 1857, a son of Squire M. and Ruth Short Franklin. His ancestry dates back to early Killingly days. Mr. Franklin was ever conscientious in whatever his undertaking, whether large or small. Monuments to his building genius are dotted about eastern Windham county towns, and earned him the sobriquet of "honest Liram," which was richly deserved. He built, among many other structures, the central fire station in Danielson, the Farnsworth mill at Central Village, structures used for manufacturing purposes in the Grosvenordales, and many others. No one ever has had cause to criticise any contract that he ever completed, as to honesty of construction and rigid adherence as to what the specifications called for; he fulfilled every requirement, and more. Mr. Franklin's record at the head of the board of selectmen of Killingly only serves to reveal his ambition to do everything he undertook to the very best of his ability, and that ability was ample. He was a man who refrained from talking any more than was necessary, but he was a keen analyzer of any business proposition, and whether he was dealing with his own affairs or those he entered into contracts with him or those of the public at large, his motto was to do the most and best he could within the limitations that any agreement set down for him. His proud epitaph may be assessed from this.

Mr. Franklin is survived by his wife, who was Miss Hattie Franklin of this town before their marriage, and by the following children: William M., Charles E., and Miss Mae Franklin, a teacher in Woodstock, Mrs. Arthur Lecombe, Howard F., and Miss Ruth F. Franklin, all of Danielson, and a brother, Frederick, of Boston. Mr. Franklin was a member of Moriah lodge, No. 13, A. F. and A. M., and of Colonel Edward Anderson camp, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil war of Danielson.

Ellis Mason Kennedy, 27, who died in Norwich today, was a former resident of Moosup. He had been ill for a long time. Mr. Kennedy leaves his father, Edgar M. Kennedy of 736 Boswell avenue, Norwich, an infant son, who is with his parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Conklin, in Moosup, and a brother resident in Norwich. His wife, the former Ellen Conklin of Moosup, died last October.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home in the Mashentuck district of the town funeral services were held for Mrs. Ella J. Burlingame, Rev. Harding W. Gaylord of the Westfield Congregational church officiating. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. During the service Earle F. Winslow sang Asleep in Jesus, and Lead Kindly Light. The bearers were Donald T. Pike and Floyd Walter of Woodcliff, N. J. Thomas A. Andrews of Pawtucket and Roger Stafford of Rumford, R. I.

William Henry Nicholas, Jr., son of W. H. Nicholas of Franklin street, died during last night at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam after undergoing an operation for appendicitis, an unusual requirement for a patient of such tender age. The body was brought here in charge of Undertaker L. E. Kennedy. The child's mother died two years ago last January a day after the little boy was born.

The program for the Memorial day exercises at the Orpheum theater at one o'clock Thursday afternoon was announced today as follows: March, St. James' band; singing of the Star Spangled Banner by the audience; reading of Memorial day general order, Adjutant Harry B. Paine, patriotic instructor. The organizations that will participate in the Memorial day exercises here are: McGregor post, No. 27, G. A. R., Benjamin E. Rapp, conductor; McGregor Woman's Relief Corps, No. 44, Mrs. Mab A. Sayles, president; Colonel Edward Anderson camp, No. 38, S. of V., Deforest Wells, Jr., commander; Mary A. Arthur Barnard will be marshal of the parade and will have as his aids Stanley Pockoski, representing the United Spanish War Veterans, and De Forrest Wells, Sr., representing the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil war. E. C. Babson is chairman of the general committee of arrangements.

Rev. J. Rees Jones, rector of St. Alban's church, is to be one of the speakers at the eighth annual convention and dinner of the Windham County Young Men's Christian association to be held at the Congregational church in Woodstock on Friday evening, June 7. His subject will be The Churches Need of the American Youth. Another address is to be delivered by Lieut. F. H. Hale, an officer of the U. S. Submarine corps stationed at New London. His subject will be Our Submarines. During the course of the convention, at which a dinner is to be served, reports covering the activities of the county organization during the past year will be presented. Motion pictures showing some of these activities will be displayed and awards for athletic honors won will be made. Those planning to attend are to notify Alexander Maitland, acting chairman, at Danielson.

Director H. H. Ellis, of the State Trade school at Putnam was in Danielson, other parts of the town of Killingly and in Brooklyn today visiting the high school and eighth grades to set forth to students the advantages of entering the Putnam institution to fit themselves for trades. Director Ellis stressed the fact that modern America, with its constantly increasing and tremendous growth is ever seeking higher types of mechanics and members of every skilled trade. The Putnam State Trade school is splendidly equiped, efficiently staffed and in every way prepared to give young persons who desire to learn any one of the various trades taught there advantages that it would be very difficult to find elsewhere, only in exceptionall instances. Over and above this there is no tuition charge, and the arrangement for transportation is such, a special rate being granted and the town paying a part of the traveling expense of each pupil, that the cost of getting an education of a very practical nature is very small indeed. Scores of pupils have entered the Putnam Trade school since it was established and many of the graduates are now occupying well paying positions.

All men of the community are invited to hear Dr. W. P. Barton at the Baptist church Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Delegations are expected from Putnam and Moosup. All seats free.—Adv.

Mrs. Mary Gaffney, Miss Marjorie I. Gaffney and Miss Alice Lemmlien were visitors in Worcester today.

Small farm of about three acres for sale with six-room cottage, garage and hen house; all kinds of fruit trees, a strawberry bed, etc.; should prove of interest on account of being located just 1 1-2 miles from Danielson, Conn., on state road leading to Brooklyn. J. C. Witter 42 Main St., Danielson.—Adv.

William S. Brown, injured by a bull that attacked him at his farm near Waureka on Sunday afternoon, was reported today as resting quite comfortably.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Kennedy will have as guests for Memorial day Mr. and Mrs. Michael Comiskey and Miss Nellie Sullivan, all of Hartford.

For those who will not observe Memorial day in the spirit in which it is dedicated the surrounding territory will offer many diversions, such as baseball games, dances and theatrical attractions.

Mr. and Mrs. William T. Mullally and Mr. and Mrs. Norman Bankhart of New York are to open their summer cottages on the south shore of Alexander's lake for Memorial day. During June these cottages will be opened for the remainder of the spring and summer season.

The forecast appears that not many more than half a dozen honored members of the G. A. R. will be able to take part in the Memorial day exercises in Danielson, where the membership has dwindled materially within the past five years.

At East Killingly Memorial day the formal exercises of observance will begin at 10 a. m. A feature of the program that has been arranged is the patriotic exercises that will be given by children of the community. The address will be delivered by Attorney Edward M. Sullivan of Providence.

It was intimated today that the lifting of the quarantine on dogs of the town of Killingly will be announced for June 1, or a date immediately thereafter. The quarantine has been effective in this town since Feb. 25.

F. X. Lemieux and Alma Forcier, members of the executive committee, were in Hartford today attending the convention of the Franco-American union of Connecticut, the gathering proving one of the stormiest in the history of the organization.

PUTNAM

CITIZENS VOTE FOR NORTH ROUTE FOR NEW ROAD

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 28.—The route of the proposed $48,000 state aid road to be constructed over Putnam Heights from the intersection of Grove street and Killingly avenue will be north from Warren's four corners in the Heights and will intersect with state road route 101 near the Windham County Temporary home. This was the verdict expressed in ballot by 48 of the 146 voters of the town who gathered at the adjourned special town meeting Monday evening.

The meeting was called to order by Newton A. Ballard, moderator and Charles A. Ryan acted as clerk of the meeting. The town hall was jammed to its utmost capacity nearly an hour before the meeting was called to order. The state road bill through the Putnam Heights section of the town proved to be bait which drew out the unusually large number of voters. The special meeting to determine the layout of the proposed highway was called two weeks ago, but due to a difference in opinion as to which course should be taken from Warren's four corners, it was voted to have the selectmen confer with the state highway commission and have a recommendation submitted by a state engineer as to the most practical and beneficial route to be taken.

Selectman Clarence R. Pierce presented two resolutions, one of which would be adopted by a majority vote. The first document read called for the course of the road being south from the intersecting roads over the Heights intersecting again with route 12 of state highways near the Alvin Sweet farm on Killingly avenue. The other bill which was adopted, would have the road run north from the corners and intersect with the Providence pike road on Route 101.

In each case the state by reason of a legislative appropriation would reimburse the town with two-thirds of the total cost of the thoroughfare.

Selectman William P. Warren read a letter from Richard Holts of the state highway commission who recommended the northern route be adopted. "This report," Mr. Holts said in his letter," is submitted on a practical point of view."

Warren S. Ames, alderman at large and president of the common council of city government, and who it was later said has an interest in the Aspinock Mineral Spring Water company, addressed the floor and stressed the fact that the south route would serve that section of the Heights colony which is more thickly populated. He touched upon the number of school children being transported to schools in the city from the south route. "In the winter," Mr. Ames said," this road is almost impassable and great difficulty is experienced by public service drivers in reaching schools with the children." Mr. Ames said that by adopting the resolution which would make the course of the state road to the southward, the town would benefit more from the road than it would if the northern course were taken. He concluded his remarks by moving that the southern course be adopted.

Judge M. H. Geissler, property owner in the Putnam Heights section, whose property is situated on the east route, (now eliminated by the state authorities) addressed the floor. Mr. Geissler opposed the adoption of the south route and readily explained to the voters that Mr. Ames' sentiment pointed toward the southern route because of his interest in the beverage company known as the Aspinock Mineral Springs Water company. Mr. Geissler was of the opinion that it would be of greatest advantage to the town of Putnam to have a state road through Putnam Heights into the Sawyer district. He moved that resolution number two favoring the northern course be adopted.

Miss Rosamond Danielson, a large taxpayer living in Putnam Heights whose vast estate is situated on the southern course was of the opinion the south route would not be the most practical. She intimated the Putnam Heights residents and farmers have a great need for the presence of a state aid road to Thompson through the Heights. "The northern course," she said, "would realize this," and emotionally urged that the voters adopt resolution number 2.

Ballot sheets then issued by the selectmen. Only 146 of those present exercised their opinion. Fifty-seven of which voted for the southern path to be taken and 88 for the north.

When the new road is completed one may drive from the intersection of Killingly avenue and Grove street up the steadily increasing grade and across a beautiful stretch of macadam road. The northern Putnam Heights route will afford a short cut to Providence from Putnam through a lane of beautiful highland scenery.

Special City Meeting

The voters of the town and city of Putnam spent a worthwhile hour last evening when they convened at the adjourned town meeting. Previous to the opening of town business, Mayor Charles A. Richard called to order a special meeting of the voters of the city of Putnam to vote special appropriations and civic improvements inserted in a special call passed by a vote of the common council and published last week. Mayor Richard was elected moderator and City Clerk Thomas P. Ryan acted as clerk.

The sum of $925 was appropriated to the improvement of Farrows street for a distance of 930 feet northerly of Florence street. This was the most important bill contained in the call and met the unanimous approval of the voters. The sum of $750 was appropriated for the operating expenses of the Putnam chapter of American Red Cross. Other appropriations for the installation of sewers and the laying of curbing on the various city streets were voted, making the total amount of special appropriations $4,239.54. A final vote was taken to authorize the common council to borrow such sum or sums of money needed to meet the appropriation as voted until such time as the taxes or assessments are collected.

A letter to Health Officer Peter A. Gardner from the office of James M. Whittlesey, commissioner of the domestic animal bureau of the state, officially rescinded the quarantine on dogs which has been in effect in the town of Putnam, and in Brooklyn, Danielson and Killingly since February 23. The revocation of the quarantine act is effective today. Officer Gardner stated.

The Putnam Parent-Teachers Association is to be host to the combined faculties of the public schools and high school of the city and town at a picnic to be held on June 11 at the State Park south of the city, formerly known as Priest Island. Superintendent of Schools Leon M. Farrin announced this afternoon.

The final meeting of the general committee in charge of the arrangements for the observance of Memorial day was held Monday evening in the chamber of commerce rooms in Union Block. Reports of the various committees indicated all plans complete and if carried out the city will witness the largest observances of the day seen in a number of years. Nearly every military, semi-military, civic, patriotic and boys' organization in the city has signified its intentions of turning out and taking part in the parade. As previously announced the exercises and solemn tribute to Putnam's soldier dead will be held in the Grove street cemetery.

In the event of inclement weather, the services will be held in the state armory on Harris street. Rev. Matthew Brady, a member of the faculty of St. Thomas seminary in Hartford will be the speaker of the day. Joseph Bove will read Lincoln's immortal composition, "The Gettysburg Address." The assembly will sing a number of patriotic selections. Invocation will be given by Rev. James F. English of the Congregational church and benediction will be pronounced by Rev. H. H. Hodge of the First Baptist church. The master of ceremonies will be Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor of St. Mary's church. The graves of the soldier dead in all the cemeteries of the town and city will be decorated by a corps of workers under the direction of Arthur C. Keith.

The new tower clock for St. Mary's spire has arrived and if possible will be installed in the steeple this week. The giant timepiece was seen by the members of the parish at the masses Sunday. The clock is a part of the new sculpment of the remodelled steeple where now rests the new 2500 pound bell. It is hoped by Father Bellerose, pastor of the church, that the work may be completed on Memorial day.

Rev. U. O. Bellerose, of St. Mary's was the speaker at a banquet of the Franco-American union of Connecticut, held yesterday at the Bond hotel in Hartford.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Playing Safe
By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Anything, you'll find,
Is greatest in a mother's mind.
—Old Mother Nature.

Safety means everlasting watchfulness. No one knows this better than do Dipper the Grebe and Mrs. Grebe. It is not often either one of them is surprised by an enemy. Those bright eyes of theirs are always watching out. No matter how quiet and peaceful it may be, they are always on guard.

So it was that as the Grebe family swam about the Smiling Pool—Dipper, Mrs. Grebe and the six little Grebes—the bright eyes of the parents were keeping constant watch in every direction. Despite the fact that everything was peaceful, Mrs. Grebe was anxious. Mothers are always anxious. The babies were not anxious, however. They had not yet learned the real meaning of danger. They had yet to learn the real meaning of the word fright. So they played about on the water and Mother Grebe kept a watchful eye on them to see that none strayed too far away.

The very second the last one got hold Mother Grebe dived

Peter Rabbit, watching them from under a big fern, wondered what would happen if an enemy appeared very suddenly. "If those babies were on their mother's back, I know what would happen," thought he. "She would dive and take them out of harm's way. But if she should have to wait for them to scramble up on her back, she might not be able to dive in time. Certainly that would be the case if a hawk should come swooping down. I don't see how she could possibly save all those babies. Of course, they could all dive, but they are so little that they couldn't stay under water long enough to be really safe."

He was still wondering about this when he heard a sharp note from Mrs. Grebe. And then something funny happened. Yes, sir, it was funny! It was interesting, too—quite as interesting as it was funny. At that sharp note from their mother, each one of those babies grabbed hold of her tail. Yes, sir, each one grabbed hold of her tail. There they were, six baby Grebes, hanging on to Mother's tail for dear life. The very second the last one got hold, Mother Grebe dived. Peter couldn't believe his eyes. Under water she went like a shot and under water went the six babies, all hanging on to her tail.

Peter looked about hastily to see what the cause of it was. He saw a shadow pass over the Smiling Pool, and, looking up, discovered Sharpshin the Hawk. Evidently Mother Grebe had seen him coming. He is swift of wing. There had been no time for those babies to climb on her back.

"I wonder how long they can hang on," thought Peter.

As if in answer, Mrs. Grebe suddenly appeared among the rushes right in front of Peter. As she popped out of water, six baby Grebes popped out of water also, and each baby was still clinging fast to Mother's tail. By this time Sharpshin had passed over and the danger was gone. Mrs. Grebe saw Peter at once.

"I told you, Peter," said Mrs. Grebe, "that I would show you another way of taking my babies under water. Now you have seen it, how do you like it?"

"It's wonderful," declared Peter. "If anyone had told me about it, I wouldn't have believed it. You certainly have your babies well trained, Mrs. Grebe."

"If they were not well trained, they wouldn't live long," replied Mrs. Grebe. "They are obedient children, if I do say so."

"They certainly are," replied Peter.

Invitations have been received by friends here to the wedding of Miss Nortt of Montclair, N. J., and Miss Muriel Sargent of Woodville, N. H., Saturday afternoon, June 8th. Mr. North is the nephew of Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. North and has been a frequent guest at the Palmer homestead. He is a graduate of Wesleyan university, as are all men members of the North family for the past four generations. Mr. North is also a graduate of Columbia university law school and was recently admitted to the bar in New York state. He is pleasantly remembered here by many friends.

FULL SIZE

PLYMOUTH

Looks Quality—Acts Quality—Is Quality

THERE are people to whom Plymouth's big attraction is its Chrysler-designed smartness.

Some people buy the full-size Plymouth largely because it is so unusually roomy and comfortable—by far the largest and roomiest car to be had at anywhere near its price.

To other people, the main reason for buying Plymouth is Plymouth's impressive power—its amazing pick-up, its unflagging stamina, its delightful smoothness and flexibility.

Still other people choose Plymouth primarily because it is so safe to drive, with its perfect balance and stability and the positive control of its Chrysler weather-proof internal-expanding four-wheel hydraulic brakes.

Withal, the Chrysler-built Plymouth is a phenomenally low-priced car—and one extremely economical to operate.

Whatever special reasons people may have in buying Plymouth, they are one and all conscious of Plymouth's unapproachable quality.

With its new refinements and inherent engineering improvements, the full-size Plymouth demonstrates a standard of performance and offers a measure of quality and value, entirely without precedent or parallel in the low-priced field.

what comes after the oratory

Frederick the Great once wrote to the Duchess of Gotha: "Heaven is on the side with the biggest battalions."

Paraphrasing the epigram, coined by this celebrated military genius, we might say that sometimes in selling automobiles, "Heaven is on the side with the biggest adjectives."

With the support of a heavy barrage of superlatives, even a weak car may take a customer by storm.

But the real test comes after the oratorical barrage has lifted and the car must try to live up to the oratory—when it must speak for itself.

Then is the time when you are sure to find the Chrysler-built De Soto Six pointing pridefully to a record that more than substantiates every claim made in its behalf, while its price-rivals are apologizing for extravagant promises unfulfilled.

Already we have abundant proof that a De Soto Six, after 40,000 miles, retains its good looks, its alert, smooth power, and its easy-riding qualities—that its low operating and maintenance costs contribute real economy of ownership.

And we are confident of an equally impressive history when De Sotos shall have reached the 100,000 mile mark—and indefinitely beyond.

The "Early Buyer" has all the best of it...

THE forehanded buyer of Old Company's Lehigh Anthracite gains everything and loses nothing.

He saves on cost—because Spring prices are lower than those obtaining in the Fall. The saving by buying in the Spring as against buying in September equals a good interest rate on his investment.

As this great staple fuel is always of the same uniformly high grade, coal delivered at the low Spring price is precisely the same as coal delivered at the higher Fall figure.

Last, but not least, there is the mental comfort and satisfaction of having the Winter's supply of heat all safely stored in your cellar—come what may.

Old Company's Lehigh Anthracite is sold to you with the endorsement of generations of American householders who have used it for more than a hundred years—through every sort of Winter that Nature can produce.

Score Tied 7—7

The All-Stars baseball team made up of both married and single men scored a virtual victory Monday evening when they held the fast Ashland nine to a tie game—7 to 7. Ed Jodoin on the mound for the All-Stars had the Ashland boys fanning the breeze regularly. In one inning he was forced to strike out four men as two of his victims reached first when the catcher was unable to hold on to Ed's shoots. During an effort to stem the tide, Ashland put in one of their star twirlers, but all in vain. LaChapelle pitched good ball for Ashland but poor support and a streak of real hitting, proved their undoing. The feature of the game was the hidden ball trick which the All-Stars used at times with marked success. Umpire "Sparks" Hiscox handled the game in a very efficient manner.

FINAL PLANS ANNOUNCED FOR THURSDAY'S EXERCISES

It is hoped that ex-service men of all wars and Sons and Daughters of Veterans and members of patriotic orders, with town and borough officials, and all who can do so, will participate in the parade.

The first stop will be at the World war monument at Slater library, when the monument and Memorial tree will be decorated. At the Jewett City cemetery, wreaths will be placed on the gates; prayer be offered by Rev. A. H. Clement. At Lisbon bridge, patriotic ceremonies will take place, and St. Mary's cemetery will be visited and the gats decorated with a memorial wreath. Prayers for the dead are to be read by Rev. J. J. McCabe. At the Baptist cemetery prayer will be offered by Rev. G. E. Seates. At all the cemeteries and the bridge a squad will fire three volleys and taps will be sounded.

The exercises will take place at Fanning park, where Rev. G. F. Goodenough will be the speaker and prayer will be offered by Rev. J. W. Carter. The children of St. Mary's school will sing; the band will play. The monument will be decorated. Ashland boys' band will furnish the music. Dinner will be provided in the Methodist vestry, under the direction of a committee of women from the four parishes.

All local anxiety about a summerless summer was laid at rest Tuesday. The silver bung in the lower 50's for over seven hours. Growing crops that escaped last week's frost are now sure off to a good start. The first bathers of the season were seen taking a tryout in the Aspinook reservoir during the afternoon.

E. F. Burleson and E. H. Hiscox hope to be able to identify most of the local wild flowers. There are 246 that commonly bloom in Griswold. The specimen sent in Tuesday is, healall or self-heal, found all through this section, even as late as September. Its generic name, is from the French prunelle, a remedy for quinsy, for which this plant was considered a certain cure. Rustic laborers prized it highly, as the other names imply, carpenter's herb, sicklewort and hookheal.

Dr. Caldwell's 3 Rules Keep You Healthy

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how most one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

W. B. Caldwell M.D.
AT AGE 68

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their systems. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person.

Get a bottle today, at any drug store and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

STOCK MARKET REGAINED ABOUT HALF LOSSES SUSTAINED THE PREVIOUS DAY

NEW YORK, May 28—(AP)—Operations for the advance were resumed in the rails and utilities in today's stock market, and the general list rebounded from the low levels reached in yesterday's drastic house cleaning, regaining about half of the ground lost.

Speculative sentiment remained highly confused, however, and traders generally were inclined to keep close to shore. The rally was not very convincing, in that it only duplicated the action of the market after the severe shakeout of a week ago. Total sales fell short of 4,000,000 shares.

The Associated Press index of 50 industrials regained but 3.1 points of yesterday's 7.7 point tumble to a new 1929 low. This was rather less encouraging than the rain of 5 points, the day following last Wednesday's break of 8.7 points. The index of 20 rails, however, practically regained yesterday's loss of nearly 2 1-2 points, and the index of 20 utilities regained about two-thirds of the drop of 6.2 points.

The rally was facilitated by an unexpected retention of a 6 per cent call loan rate through the day, which was interpreted as reflecting the liberation of funds by the violent shakeout. Banks called some loans, presumably for the semi-weekly federal reserve settlements, but these were easily replaced.

While there was a feeling that sufficient funds may have been released to prevent as severe a money pinch over the turn of the month as has been widely predicted, bankers generally continued to predict extremely tight money for the next few weeks.

It is confidently expected, however, that the heavy liquidation of both last week and this week will result in a sharp drop in the federal reserve's weekly brokerage loan total, which will be issued on Friday, because of the holiday on Thursday. There was renewed uneasiness over the New York Reserve bank's rediscount rate, as both the New York directors and the board in Washington will meet tomorrow, because of the Thursday holiday.

There was little in the day's news to influence the market, although another assortment of excellent railway reports of April operations helped the upturn in that group. The finance committee of U. S. Steel offered common stock to employes at 165 a share. This announcement was interpreted bullishly, but it did not appear until after the close of the market. The stock sold on the market as low as 163 3-8, but closed at 166 5-8, up more than 2 points, and it was felt that the finance committee would not offer the stock at 165 if it felt that further serious reaction was likely. Coppers were stimulated by renewed optimism as to the outcome of the reparations conference.

In addition to the excellent monthly reports, the rails were promoted by a feeling that the St. Louis and O'Fallon decision has not been fully discounted as a bullish factor. Atchison, April earnings of which were about 50 per cent greater than April, 1928, was sent up 14 1-2 points to a record price at 218 1-2. Delaware & Hudson, Chesapeake and Ohio, New York Central, New Haven, and Union Pacific mounted 4 to 8 points.

In the utilities, American Water Works rose more than 6 points to a record price for the present stock, to the accompaniment of unconfirmed stock splitup and merger rumors. Commonwealth Power mounted more than 7 points to a new top. Several leading industrials such as American Can, Anaconda, Johns Manville, Curtiss Aero, Borg Warner, and Westinghouse sold up about 4 to 6 points. General Electric regained 6 1-2 points of yesterday's 14 point drop, and United Aircraft regained two-thirds of its 15-point tumble. Radio sold up about 3 points in active buying.

Several issues were again under pressure, reflecting largely liquidation of weakened margin accounts. Auburn Auto fell 8 1-2 but regained most of its loss. Montgomery Ward dipped 2 1-2 points, then rallied. Adams Express dropped 24 points, on top of yesterday's 32-point flop, and closed off about 20. Although coppers generally rallied, Chile tumbled 8 points and closed at the bottom.

Attention centered upon continued weakness of grains in the commodity markets. Wheat dropped about 2 cents a bushel more, in response to better northwestern crop reports. May wheat touched 96 1-4 cents, the lowest in years. Corn dropped a cent and more. Cotton, on the other hand, mounted from 50 cents to $1 a bale on unfavorable weather.

Foreign exchanges were generally firmer. Although sterling cables were unchanged at $4.85, francs and marks were quoted slightly higher. The Spanish peseta, however, dropped to a new 1929 low at 14.14 cents.

A new issue offered publicly today was $8,000,000 of Associated Telephone Utilities Co. 15-year 5 1-2 per cent convertible gold debentures. The company, upon completion of this financing, will control groups of telephone properties serving communities in California, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, Texas, New Mexico and Kansas.

The city of Toronto $10,274,000 issue of 4 per cent serial bonds has been underwritten by the Chase Securities Corp., Continental Illinois Co., and the Royal Bank of Canada. The price paid to the city was 97.777.

NEW YORK, May 28—(AP)—Formation of the Chrysler Management Trust, similar to the General Motors Management Corps, by which about 60 or 80 high executives of the Chrysler organizations through acquisition of Chrysler stock, will share in the growth of the company, was announced today.

Contemplated recapitalization of Advance Rumley Co., farm implement manufacturer, has been definitely postponed, F. P. Mount, president, stated today, because the directors felt that the decline in wheat prices would have a serious influence on the company's business.

Steel ingot production is now at 95 per cent of rated capacity against 96 per cent last week and 97 1-2 per cent two weeks ago. U. S. Steel Corp. is reported as still operating practically at capacity, with independent mills at 93 1-2 per cent against 93 per cent last week and 96 per cent two weeks ago.

Whole trade in the second federal reserve district continued in substantial volume during last month and was considerably larger than in April, 1928, according to the monthly review of credit and business conditions by the New York Federal Reserve bank. Substantial increases were reported in sales of men's clothing, cotton goods, shoes, hardware, paper and general stationery, and diamonds.

Leading chain store systems throughout the second federal reserve district report a 6 per cent increase in sales last month over April, 1928, the smallest increase in a number of months. This was probably due, the federal reserve review of business conditions states, chiefly to the early Easter this year. Department store sales showed little change over April of last year for which the same reason was given.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, May 28—(AP)—United States wheat today threw down the gauntlet to all competitors, and went low enough in price to meet rivals in foreign markets. Before this result was accomplished, however, the July delivery of wheat here, representing the 1928 domestic harvest, was forced down today to below $1.00 a bushel, following the similar descent yesterday of May wheat, which stands for holdings of last year's crop on hand now in storage. Simultaneously today, corn, oats and rye, as well as wheat, all dropped to new low-price levels.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were nervous, 1 1-4 to 1 7-8c under yesterday's finish. Corn closed unchanged to 1 3-8c lower, oats 3-8 to 1 3-8c down, rye showing 2 1-8 to 3 1-4c loss, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 20c.

Great significance was attached today to the descent of July quotations to below $1.00 than was the case regarding May wheat yesterday. Latest official figures indicated that the amount of May wheat contracts in Chicago remaining to be settled before the end of the month is now only 640,000 bu. where as a few weeks back the total was many millions of bushels. The difference is due to recent big scale selling out on the part of holders who despaired of realizing a profit in the face of huge existing supplies and of prospective immense new crops.

Immediately affecting July wheat values today and bringing about decided enlargement of selling in all the grain pits here was news of fresh downpours in Canada, indicating likelihood of a bountiful harvest for that country and sharper competition for wheat from the United States. Moreover the Liverpool wheat market today was lower than had been looked for, and European call for wheat from No. America was again at a minimum. Besides, reports at hand from domestic wheat territory southwest, where the 1929 spring semeiotic crop is either already being harvested or is fast approaching readiness for cutting, said field conditions were about perfect, and that dealers were expecting an increasing influx of wheat.

As the day drew to an end, however, fair-sized rallies in wheat values took place, with some new investment purchasing apparent and with a number of previous speculative sellers turning to the buying side. The world's available supply decreased $,153,000 bushels for the week, and is now 118,624,000 bushel against 323,004,000 bushel a year ago.

Corn went under 80c a bushel today imitating wheat slides to below $1.00. Weakness of wheat had much to do with breaks in the corn market, which were also ascribed to favorable weather for corn planting and for germination of corn already in the ground. Oats and rye took their cue from the action of other cereals. There was an unusual amount of stop-loss selling in rye.

Provisions were easier, sympathizing with hog values and with grain.

Kelly Tires

"With the introduction of the Kelly Registered Balloon to the automobile tire market," says Mr. J. J. Salling manager of the Kelly-Springfield Tire company's branch at Hartford, "we have also inaugurated an entirely new sales idea. All the hit-or-miss factors have been removed and close connections have been established between the buyer, the dealer and the manufacturer.

"Before telling you about the Kelly Registered Balloon itself, let me first explain how this new relationship has been established and why.

"For some time, there has been a real need for a so-called super tire and for several years Kelly engineers have been perfecting a tire which would be super in every respect. When this tire had finally passed all the tests and was ready for the market, it was decided to keep an accurate record of each individual tire's performance. Since the Kelly Registered Balloon is a thoroughbred in the strictest sense of the word, the Kelly company felt that its life should be watched as closely as that of thoroughbred horses, dogs or cattle. Hence the name Registered.

"Here is how it is accomplished. When the car owner purchases a Kelly Registered Balloon from his dealer, a card, which is attached to the tire, is filled out and mailed to the factory at Cumberland, Md. This card records the tire's individual number and size, the make of the car, model and type of body and the name and address of the purchaser. The record is then entered with the manager of the Service Department. The date on which the tire was bought is also kept on file. In this way, the performance of the Kelly Registered tire is checked to the buyer's satisfaction. He knows that the Kelly Service Department is able to follow the life of his Registered Balloon until he is ready to pension it for meritorious service.

"Now just a word about the tire itself. As I said before, there was a definite need for such a tire. This tire was evolved by Kelly-Springfield to meet that demand, that need, for larger, more rugged tires which can successfully stand up under the faster driving and harder braking of today's cars. The Kelly Registered Balloon represents absolutely the last word in modern tire-building.

"Furthermore, the tire is oversized throughout with 10 per cent more air capacity than any standard balloon of corresponding size, plus a tread nearly twice as thick and extending so far down the sidewalls that the likelihood of punctures is negligible.

"With the Kelly Registered Balloon you are carefree and safe from the ordinary tire troubles. You can go your way with perfect confidence knowing that your car is well shod for as long as you are content to drive behind the same steering wheel. This tire was built for harder service than you will probably ever be able to give it."

Mr. Salling closed the interview by saying that the place for such a tire in motoring had been and was being clearly proved by the tremendous demand for the Kelly Registered among the more experienced drivers.

"Motorists also appreciate," he added, "the fact that we are protecting them and their tire investment through the complete record we keep of every Registered tire."

SHOWER AT VESTRY FOR MISS DORIS GRANDY

Saturday evening about 50 friends and neighbors met at the vestry to shower Miss Doris Grandy in honor of her approaching marriage with Orrin Banning. As they were returning from Norwich Mr. Banning who is sexton drove up to the church. He and Miss Grandy immediately were escorted in amid a shower of confetti and with songs and music were led to seats of honor on the platform. Then those who were present marched to the front and presented their gifts. In a few minutes the tables were heaped high with packages and then the unwrapping began. There was much beautiful glassware linen for the dining room, bedroom and kitchen, bread sets, kitchen utensils and some gifts of money. Following the display of the gifts there was a short program of readings, a few words by the pastor, a monologue and an original poem. Cake and coffee were served later. The shower was planned and carried out by Mrs. John Chapman and Mrs. Alfred Abel. The decorations were blue and gold with a large gold bell under which the couple were seated. Baskets of wild azalea and flowering dogwood were effectively used about the room. Among those present were Mrs. William Drake, Mrs. Irving Drake and Mrs. William Huntington of Norwich.

The Woman's Missionary Society is to meet Friday afternoon with Mrs. Frank Lathrop. This is to be a work meeting.

At the last regular meeting of the grange the program was in observance of International Peace and Good-Will day. Among the features was a pageant, "The Dawn of Peace" given by several young ladies of the Jewish council under the direction of Miss Ruth Golub.

At the Congregational church Sunday morning a good sized congregation listened to an inspiring address by the pastor, Rev. G. H. Strouse, on the theme "An Old Testament Prophet Speaks to a 20th Century Audience." Among the visitors were several from Franklin, New London and Fitchville. The evening meeting was led by Mrs. Lloyd Abel. She used as the topic, "Character a Growth, Not a Gift" making the change from the regular topic which was missionary, as the meeting June 7th is to be a missionary meeting. At that time Rev. Arthur C. Adams of Norwich will be the speaker. This will be a union meeting with several neighboring societies.

FINED AT COLCHESTER FOR RECKLESS DRIVING

Joseph Kacenski, 32 Crystal avenue, was in a justice court at Colchester last night charged with reckless driving. Kacenski, who was fined $25 and costs, was arrested Sunday by State Police Officer Joseph King. A fine of $25 and costs was also meted out to George Allender, Colchiseville, who was arrested Sunday for speeding.

Electric refrigeration, practically unknown in 1920, now gives employment to about 20,000 people.

POETRY

The Kelleys That Bloom in the Spring

'Tis legal in the month of May
To wear a Kelley made of hay—
Yet people look at me and smile,
And chat aspersions all my life.

They say: "You've donned the thing too soon
Just wait until the twelfth of June.
For if you don't the snow will come
And put that straw lid on the bum."

To all such men, I make reply:
"The weather is at fault, not I.
The fashion-makers yearly say,
"Wear straws the fifteenth day of May."

What rules of dress are made for me
I'm not the man to disagree.
And even if the wind should blow
And temperature be five below,
I'll don my straw hat in the Spring
And wear it till the bell shall ring.

No reason why I should be late
Because the season's out of date.
Instead we men should get together
And make some changes in the weather.

Let's have the sunny days appear
Just at the proper time of year.
It's time that old felt lid to doff,
So when you see a straw, don't scoff.
—Melvin P. Jenkins in Boston Globe.

Walls

I love a wall that runs beside a road,
Curving to hold a garden in its arms,
With flattering fruit-trees and their fancy load
Ripening against the bricks the slow sun warms.

I love a wall that crumbles at the edge
Where moss and ivy mend the loosened stones,
And little vines creep up a toppling ledge,
Like sturdy elbows over aging bones.
But best of all I love the vagrant wall
That breaks into a hedge and runs away
Along the borders of a grassy field,
As if it heard the winds' splendid call,
When all the world is flowering with May.
How hard a wall must find it not to yield!

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Friendly Old Lady—Now, how did you ever get started on this vagabonding life?

Tattered Ted: Well, you see, lady, the doctor advised me to take a long walk every day, and so I got into the habit and have kept it up ever since. —Boston Globe.

Sunday School Teacher — What wrong did the sons of Jacob commit when they sold their brother Joseph?

Little Sally—They sold him too cheap.—Boston Transcript.

Mother—Shame on you, Doris, for spanking your little kitten.

Doris—Well, mother, you're not ashamed of yourself when you spank me—Punch.

Green—Do you ever help your wife with the housework?

Brown—Oh, yes. I have dinner downtown frequently.—Detroit News.

"Our minister is so strict he won't even perform a marriage ceremony."

"Good heavens! What's that got to do with his morals?"

"He says his conscience won't permit him to participate in any game of chance."—Montreal Star.

He—Do you think kissing is unhealthy?

She—I really don't know. I've never been.

He—What? Never been kissed?

She—No. I've never been ill after it. —Pathfinder.

"Some of the English automobiles are so small that one doesn't get into 'em so much as wear 'em," remarks London Calling. And on another page it pictures a stout lady saying to an auto salesman: "I'm so sorry, I'm afraid I shall have to get you to change the car—it's so tight over the hips."—Everybody's Magazine.

Persistent Customer—I don't think you've properly fixed this muffler yet. It keeps going "Phut, phut, phut, phut."

Garage Man—I'll have another look at it and see what I can do, is there anything particular you'd like it to say instead?—London Opinion.

Amazing New Mobiloil

an old engineering fact

The reason for the striking performance of the New Mobiloil begins with the established engineering fact that no one crude oil produces the best motor oil for all engines. Each grade of the New Mobiloil is made from choice crudes selected to keep the first-year feel in that particular engine for at least 30,000 miles. The dealer's copy of the Mobiloil Chart will tell you the correct grade for your car.

THE modern, high-compression, high-speed motor demands an oil that will stand up under the excessive heat generated and will function as near perfectly as is humanly possible under the conditions prevalent in today's motors. ¶ The problem has been to secure in one oil the best qualities of the finest paraffine and naphthene crude oils. ¶ In our laboratories we have perfected a blend of lubricating oil made from two crude oils. It has advantages only to be found in a two-base oil. ¶ If you regard your motor with the affection you have for a favorite dog (as some of us do) you should at least try

Broadway Theatre

Morton Downey, Broadway's most famous tenor, sings several of his popular songs in the Pathe all dialogue picture production, "Mother's Boy," which will be on view at the Broadway theatre for three days beginning on Memorial day. The theme song which he sings with splendid effect at the bedside of his supposedly dying mother is "I'll Always Be Mother's Boy," and there were few dry eyes among the watchers during the filming of the scene at the Pathe sound studio in New York.

Another popular song rendered by Mr. Downey in the fashionable cabaret scene in the picture is "The World is Yours and Mine." In his love scenes with Helen Chandler, who plays opposite him, he sings with fine expression "There'll Be You and I."

Other airs heard in the production are "I'm Funny That Way" and "Good Little Bad Little You." These are sung by Mildred Hunt, a noted radio singer, in the cabaret scene. The story of "Mother's Boy" deals with cabaret and tenement life in New York. It is packed with drama, action, thrills and laughs. Mr. Downey is a delicatessen store clerk who attains his ambition after enduring many setbacks of becoming the most famous of Broadway tenors. The cast comprises many well known stage players, chief among them besides those mentioned are Barbara Bennett, John T. Doyle, Osgood Perkins, Lorin Baker, Jennie Moskowitz and Jacob Frank.

NEW LONDON POLICE CHIEF AT STATE CONFERENCE WITH MOTOR COMM'R

NEW LONDON, May 29.—Captain of Police Charles A. Pinney was in Hartford today, guest at a luncheon tendered by Robbins B. Stoeckel, commissioner of motor vehicles, to the police chiefs of the state. The luncheon, served at the Hotel Bond, was followed by a meeting of the chiefs and Commissioner Stoeckel for the purpose of endeavoring to formulate definite plans for the enforcement of uniform traffic regulations. A bill was recently adopted by the legislature providing for practically the same traffic rules in every city and by the adoption of such rules and regulations there would be much less confusion in the enforcement of traffic laws than is the case at present. Different cities have different laws, besides different signals, especially of the automatic type. Capt. Pinney is a member of a committee appointed several weeks ago to frame tentative plans for the enforcement of the traffic laws as adopted and in conformity with the state statute.

Jeremiah Twomey, of Garfield avenue, Harry May, Broad street, and Leo Reagan, Montauk avenue, are spending a few days at Niagara, N. Y. They are making the trip by automobile.

Mrs. Harry W. Brooks, East Orange, N. J., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Darling, of Montauk avenue.

Again Ferry to Groton.

Beginning Memorial day, transportation will be provided foot passengers between New London and Groton. Capt. George Crandall will provide a small boat that will make round trips every 30 minutes daily, leaving New London at the municipal pier. Capt. Crandall was one of the masters of the ferryboat Mohican until that boat was withdrawn from the line about two months ago. Since that time all pedestrian traffic has been across the Thames river highway bridge.

Perry's Owner Fined.

Felice Vassalaridis, 491 Bank street, was in the police court today charged with conducting an amusement without obtaining a license to do so. He was fined $5 and costs and was informed that a repetition of the offense would result in a heavier penalty being imposed. Vassalaridis was on Bank street last night and had his pony with him. Vassalaridis solicited children, also adults, to ride on the back of the animal, for which ride five cents was charged. While Vassalaridis was providing the entertainment for men and children, he was arrested for a crowd had collected and children, who were in the highway were in danger of being struck by passing automobiles. Vassalaridis was at East New London last Saturday night where rides were being provided children. At that time he was ordered to discontinue the practice, but he did not heed the advice and because he did so, he was arrested.

Expensive Window Breaking.

Sidney Gunter, colored, employed on the New London line steamer New Hampshire, was charged with breach of the peace and was fined $25 and costs. Gunter was arrested last Sunday when he hired a cab operated by Salvatore Delaporta, refusing to pay for the hire when his drive was concluded. Not only did Gunter refuse to pay Delaporta, but he smashed one of the cab windows.

The continued case of Peter Mros, charged with breach of the peace, was nolled. Mros was arrested several months ago upon complaint of his wife.

W. W. Wright, Waterford and Ross R. Harrison, New Brunswick, N. J., were charged with violation of the city's parking laws, but as neither of the drivers appeared in court their bonds of $2 were declared forfeited.

There was but one case of intoxication. A freight handler, who was arrested last night, was fined $5 and costs.

Located Missing Brother.

Mrs. Victoria Nelson, Worcester, Mass., today communicated with the New London police, requesting that she be given information relative to the whereabouts of her brother, Charles Carlson, from whom she had not heard in many weeks. Carlson was informed of his sister's request that he communicate with the woman.

Gypsy Alarm Unfounded.

The police last night received information from a resident of Montauk avenue that a band of Gypsies was quartered in the wooded section of the Mitchell estate, between Montauk and Ocean avenue and stated that the presence of the Gypsies intimidated female residents of that section of the city. Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran went to the woods and instead of finding Gypsies there, the officer came upon several high school girls, who had selected the secluded part of the estate for an outing.

Again Gingo.

Teddy Gingo, North Bank street resident and restaurant worker when he is employed, was in the police court yesterday on a charge of breach of the peace and he will be there again tomorrow on a charge of vagrancy, for he disregarded the court's order for him to leave the city. Gingo yesterday faced the court for his attentions to a waitress at a Main street restaurant when she took his order Saturday. He was ordered to get out of the city without delay or go to jail. Gingo was detained at police headquarters throughout the day and last night he was escorted to the New London line steamer New Hampshire by Patrolman Clarence Wells. Before the steamer left Gingo went ashore. When found roaming about North Bank street today by Patrolman Dennis Murphy, who also arrested him Saturday, Gingo was taken into custody again.

The police again today continued their drive to put an end to drunks loitering about the streets in the vicinity of police headquarters, where numerous hooch resorts exist. As a result seven men were arrested, six of whom were taken into custody by Patrolman Dennis Murphy. The other was arrested by Patrolman Frank Linehan.

Extend Theatre Lease.

The New England Operating company, Boston, lessees of the Capitol theatre, today obtained an extension of lease of that playhouse for the owners, Charles J. Duey and Walter T. Murphy granted the lessees another five years of occupancy of the theatre. The original lease was for 25 years from July 23, 1928.

Shabby Buildings To Go

Building Inspector William Gunn and several members of the council this afternoon inspected several buildings in various parts of the city which it is planned to condemn. The buildings having become delapidated and out of repair, Building Inspector Gunn and Fire Chief Thomas Shipman recently recommended to the council that the structures be condemned, as they were a fire hazard and a nuisance. Action on the recommendation will probably be taken at the meeting of the council June 3.

Boy Explodes Torpedo

The youth was arrested and was turned over to Assistant Probation Officer George MacDougall.

A special meeting of the city council will be held tomorrow evening for the purpose of permitting the second reading of the ordinance providing for an issue of bonds, made necessary in order to acquire the Allyn and Payne properties, Mohegan avenue, and which will be the site for the new United States Coast Guard academy. RUSH TO THE BEACH AS THE MERCURY RISES

With the mercury hovering about the 80 mark this afternoon, another large crowd of men, women and children sought the cooling breezes and bathing at Ocean Beach. By mid-afternoon the crowd resembled just such a multitude as will be on the boardwalk and sand during the hot days of August. The trolley cars were crowded and open cars replaced the closed ones. Among the bathers were many students at Connecticut colleges.

Victor Gunaki, 42 Eastern avenue, was arrested tonight charged with breach of the peace and intoxication and will be in court tomorrow. Gunaki went to his home and engaged in a quarrel with his daughter. Patrolmen Clarence Wells and Edward Riordan took him in.

Doctors say, kill the germs that penetrate to and infect innermost recesses of nose, throat and lungs; then promote the healing of the deeply hidden spots of raw, tender, inflamed mucous membrane. Gargling, snuffing liquids or spraying cannot reach these diseased spots. Physicians recommend inhaling "DEO" vapors of heated eucalyptus and other antiseptic, soothing, healing oils. ANNOUNCES COL. ALLYN TO RETIRE FROM BUREAU

The intention of Col. W. Ellery Allen of Waterford to retire from the internal revenue bureau where he has been chief field deputy of the second district, was announced Monday by Col. Robert O. Eaton, collector.

Col. Allyn has been named as leading in the list of possible successors to Brig. Gen. George M. Cole as adjutant general of the state.

General Cole will retire after the annual national guard encampment this summer. Colonel Allyn has been with the internal revenue bureau since 1921, when he succeeded William H. Farrell as chief field deputy. Pressure of his private interests was the reason given for Colonel Allyn's retirement.

Commenting on the action of Colonel Allyn, Collector Eaton expressed regret and asserted that it will be with reluctance that he will accept the resignation. He said he had given no thought to Colonel Allyn's successor.

Although withdrawing from his federal post, Colonel Allyn Monday said that he planned to remain active in politics. He will continue, he said to remain active in behalf of the republican party and the republican state organization. Colonel Allyn has served one term in the legislature, where he was a member of the finance committee.

Colonel Allyn studied mechanical engineering at the University of Pennsylvania, after which he entered the Manhaden Oil and Guano Co., in Virginia. He traveled abroad in 1912 and 1914, visiting all countries in Europe. Upon his return to this country he had been engaged in the real estate business but a short time when the United States entered the war and he entered the army in the summer of 1917. He was promoted through the ranks until he became field inspection supervisor of all railway and seacoast artillery. For his war services he holds papers of special commendation from the war department. He has also served as assistant adjutant general, under Governor Templeton, and at present is a member of the staff of the First company, Governor's Foot Guard.

Possessor of extensive real estate holdings in New London and Waterford, where he lives, Colonel Allyn is associated with his brother, Major Gurdon S. Allyn in the realty development of Mason's Island off Mystic.

Among the other organizations of which Mr. Allyn is a member are the Thames club of New London, the New London Country club Society of Mayflower Descendants, Pyramid temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, Knights Templar, the Sojourner's club, the John Coleman Prince post, American Legion and the Disabled Veterans of the World War.

In addition to being the experimental mill of the Reclamation company, the mill at Quaker Hill will be operated as a reclamation plant in its own right, and will sell de-inked newsprint to newspaper plants and other businesses which use newsprint.

Superintendent Woodworth stated that de-inked newsprint has been used in some newspaper plants and has been proclaimed excellent.

NEW HAVEN REPORTER DIES ON THE JOB

Newspaperman to the end, William Sheffield, native of Stonington and reporter for more than half a century died Saturday at his Pearl street, New Haven home in his 80th year after preparing his own obituary for publication in the Times-Union.

Although not compelled to work, Sheff covered his beat for the Times-Union like many a younger man—and enjoyed it. He was one of the few "old timers" to use a typewriter.

Tuesday Sheff was sent out on a story. He returned to the newspaper office, pounded out his assignment, handed his copy to the editor and fell to the floor unconscious. Sheff's fellow reporters recalled that he had wished to "die in the harness."

Sheffield served on several small papers and at one time was correspondent at Westerly for the Providence Journal. He went to New Haven in 1880 and purchased the Shore Line Times. Later he sold the paper and worked on the Palladium, Register, Morning News, Evening Leader, Union, Times-Leader, Journal-Courier and Times-Union. He left a wife.

COUNSEL CLAIMS PARKER-SMITH CO. NOT INSOLVENT

Declares the Company Has Assets of $1,088,000 and Liabilities of $500,000—Asserts That Its Assets Are "Frozen," That Its Mortgages Are on Property That is Valuable, But That Cannot Be Sold Because of Market Conditions—The Union and New Haven Trust Company Has Been Appointed Temporary Receiver—Company Must Answer Charges That It "Defrauded the Public."

NEW HAVEN, May 29—(AP)—The Union and New Haven Trust company was appointed temporary receiver today for the Parker-Smith Company, Inc., summoned before Superior Court Judge Arthur P. Ells to answer charges that it "defrauded the public" in its handling of $23,000,000 worth of mortgage notes and mortgages.

By action of the board of directors of the company and by confirmation before Judge Ells, the Second National bank of New Haven succeeded Parker-Smith as trustee of notes and mortgages negotiated through the financial house. Judge Ells set June 11 as the date for confirmation of the appointment of the receiver.

Judge Nathan A. Schatz of Hartford, attorney for Parker-Smith, issued a statement saying that the concern had decided to take advantage of a section of its trusteeship contract with the Second National bank so that all monies paid on account of interest or principal on mortgages will be received by the bank as trustee and "by them transmitted to the original noteholders without any charge or expense to the noteholders." In court, he said, this meant the Parker-Smith company was vacating its trusteeship, and Leonard Daggett, attorney for the Second National bank, agreed that under the contract this was proper.

Daggett and Frederick O Russell, also representing the Second National bank, had sought to have this institution appointed receiver, but Attorney General Benjamin W Alling, who brought the action at the behest of Bank Commissioner Lester E Shippee, opposed this on the ground that there would be conflict between the bank's position as succeeding trustee and receiver. The attorney general said the succeeding trustee would want to protect itself and the public, while the receiver would act for the public and the stockholders.

The Union and New Haven Trust company will be receiver if its appointment is confirmed June 11, until the case appears for trial on September 3. At that time, its receivership may be made permanent, or another receiver appointed, unless Judge Ells, after listening to arguments, rules that a permanent receiver is not needed and the firm need not be dissolved, as demanded by the attorney general and the bank commissioner.

Judge Schatz said that in not opposing the petition for a receiver and in advising the Parker-Smith board of directors to vacate its trusteeships of notes and mortgages, he was motivated chiefly by the desire to assure all investors who have dealt with Parker-Smith of the safety of their investments and by the desire to "soften" the "criminal charges" made in the attorney general's complaint. Judge Schatz said that while the firm had done $23,000,000 worth of business in the seven years of its existence, "not a single penny has been lost by a single noteholder."

He added that the company is not insolvent, but that its assets are "frozen" explaining this term to mean that its mortgages are on property that is valuable but that can not be sold because of market conditions. The Capitol building in Asylum street, Hartford, is an example, he said. This is worth $5,000,000 and there is a mortgage on it for $1,300,000, but it cannot be sold. A "liquid" asset, however, is the DeSopo building in Hartford, which has two mortgages, the first for $125,000 and the other for $65,000, both issued by the Savings Bank of New London, and which will be void July 15 to Mary DeSopo for about $250,000. On this proposition, Judge Schatz said, the Parker-Smith company, "actually made money." He went on to say that 90 per cent. of all notes and mortgages negotiated by the Parker-Smith concern were held in trust by the Second National bank and now, under the new arrangement, this "sound institution" is behind everything.

"The public will have double protection now," he declared. "It has a strong financial house handling the Parker-Smith business without expense to the noteholders and the notes are secured by strong mortgages."

Judge Schatz said the Parker-Smith company has assets of $1,088,000 and liabilities of $500,000. "Everything John Parker and Paul and Clarence Smith owned was sunk into the firm," the attorney declared. "That shows they have confidence in their own business. They even took out mortgages on their own homes to get additional capital for the firm."

The Union and New Haven Trust company was agreed upon for temporary receiver after Judge Ells had told the litigants that he was opposed to an individual and believed a good strong institution should be appointed. When the appointment was announced, Judge Ells said, "of course, this bank need not furnish bond."

Attorney General Alling was instructed by the court to draw up rules for the receiver showing the limitations of the receivership power in the case.

State's Attorney Samuel E. Hoyt, who, Attorney General Alling said, would handle the criminal phase of the case, declared that an investigation would have to be made by his department before such charges would be considered, but refused to say whether he contemplated making an investigation.

"The case has not yet been brought officially to my notice," he said.

However, he was present at the two conferences held by the attorneys and others in the case with Judge Ells before the matter was called up in court both before the beginning of the session this afternoon and after the recess.

Neither Attorney General Alling nor Judge Schatz would discuss the charges that the firm misused its assets, that it operated without a license from the bank commissioner, lent money to persons holding mortgages or failed to foreclose on mortgages long in default. Judge Schatz said, "it ought to be made clear to the public that the firm owns none of the property involved; it merely acted as an agency for bringing notes and mortgages before the public—a clearing house or sieve for financing."

STATEMENT BY OFFICERS OF THE PARKER-SMITH CO.

"The Parker-Smith company was organized in 1922, by us to do a general mortgage and brokerage business in the state of Connecticut.

"Immediately upon organization we entered into an agreement with the Second National bank of New Haven, which agreement was intended solely for the benefit of any and all holders of mortgage notes sold by the Parker-Smith company. Under the terms of this agreement, in the event that Parker-Smith company ceased to perform its duties as trustee, the Second National bank of New Haven thereupon assumed, and thereafter performed the duties as trustee under said mortgage notes without charge or expense to any of the holders of said notes, and all other acts in connection therewith, said Second National bank of New Haven are not to charge the note holders.

"It is for this reason that we have this day called upon the Second National bank of New Haven to assume its position as trustee, so that every mortgage note holder of the Parker-Smith company may be properly protected.

"The $20,000,000 referred to as the amount of business done since the date of its existence, does not reflect the financial condition of the Parker-Smith company at all. No investor, note holder, or depositor in connection with our company has lost a single dollar. If given an opportunity, we expect to so re-organize this company that every person will be paid his money and the business which has been so successful will be continued. This business since its beginning has and still continues to be solvent. The substitution of the Second National bank of New Haven as trustee has been made, because this company wishes to assure all of its note holders of their safety. The substitution of this bank includes every mortgage in which this company was named as a trustee.

"The company could have permitted its note holders to bear the brunt of any normal business difficulties, but it has steadfastly refused and is proud of the fact that it has refused any such action. The officers of this company have paid into it voluntarily, every asset which they have in the world, and have even mortgaged their own homes to back up the faith placed in them by people of the state of Connecticut.

"We feel that this faith has not been shaken and we pledge ourselves to every one of them to rehabilitate this company for the benefit of its stockholders and creditors and its note holders."

Signed:
JOHN E. PARKER, President.
CLARENCE V. SMITH, Treasurer.
PAUL M. SMITH, secretary.

WAR DEBTS TOPIC IN THE FRENCH CHAMBER

PARIS, May 29—(AP)—The corridors of the chamber of deputies buzzed with talk on the war debts today although it was not likely that the topic of ratifications of the accords with the United States and Great Britain will get the floor of the chamber until after the reparations experts have made their report.

Premier Poincare is determined not to state the government's attitude upon the debt agreement before the reparations report is made public and there was every indication when the subject was brought up in the foreign affairs committee this afternoon that he will have his way.

From the speeches made in the committee meeting and from the action of the Union Republicans Democratique, a group with 101 votes, it was increasingly evident that the great majority of moderate members in parliament are opposed to ratifying the Mellon-Berenger and Churchill-Caillaux accords unless transfer safety clauses are inserted.

FARM RELIEF CONFERENCE COMMITTEE TO MEET FRIDAY

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP)—House members of the farm relief conference committee agreed today to resume negotiations Friday, hopeful that the senate representatives on the committee ultimately would agree to eliminate the export debenture plan.

After several days of discussions in which a way out of the deadlock between the house and senate over this provision had been sought, Senator McNary of Oregon, chairman of the conference, announced the forthcoming resumption on meetings. House members terminated the meetings last week after informing the senate conferees they would be glad to resume discussions after being assured that debentures would be eliminated.

Senator McNary said he expected the conference to agree to take up general differences in the two farm bills passed separately by the house and senate, leaving the debenture controversy to the last.

Mrs. Ann Hayden, injured in the first blasts, died this afternoon.

ROME, May 29—(AP)—Announcement of the enforced postponement of the departure of the airplane Green Flash from Old Orchard, Maine, until tomorrow reached Rome at 8:30 p. m., the dinner hour. The news was received with mixed feelings, some regretting the delay while others hoped the new starting time might bring the trans-Atlantic visitor here on Saturday afternoon. Then the entire population could go out to the Littorio or Centocelli airfields to welcome the fliers.

FIGHT BETWEEN STUDENTS AND POLICE IN PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 29.—(AP)—More than a score of Providence men were injured here tonight when battered down by policemen's night sticks, and two bystanders were in hospitals with bullets in their bodies as the aftermath of skirmishes between police and students following the annual necktie burning ceremonies of the class of '32.

The condition of one of the victims at the hospital is serious. The other suffered two shots in the arm.

Fronts of several stores and a theater were damaged in the business section of the city by the rioting students. Carrying red lights and clad in pajamas the celebrators stormed through the principal streets of the city. Police, armed with nightsticks, and students clashed frequently. Spectators looked on while night clubs flailed and fists flew at the height of the celebration.

William Berrarducci of this city, a state house page, was shot in the eye by a stray bullet. He was watching the fighting from in front of a cigar store. Physicians are probing for the bullet. His name has been placed on the danger list. Whether the bullet was fired by police or a student could not be determined. The name of the other victim is not known.

Among the students struck down by hostilities is Sam Flora, football star. Flora's scalp was split open by a night stick. He was taken to police headquarters in an serious condition. Flora was slated to appear in the Brown lineup in the baseball game between Brown and Harvard tomorrow. Many other students and police were given first aid for cuts and bruises following fights. John E. Kreps, Jr., of Cleveland, a student, was admitted to the Homopathic hospital with a bullet in his right arm received during a skirmish. Besides this injury he has a scalp wound three inches long inflicted by a policeman's night stick, and another wound on his left elbow. Five thousand people gathered in or around the campus to watch the bonfire.

VOTE GOVT. OPERATION OF MUSCLE SHOALS PROPERTY

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP)—By an unanimous vote of the thirteen members present, the senate agriculture committee today recommended to the senate the reenactment of the Norris resolution for government operation of the Muscle Shoals property in Alabama.

The report on this resolution was carried immediately to the senate by its author, Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, who said he did not believe the legislation could be enacted before the summer recess but that he would take advantage of any opportunity to have this done.

One of the committee members, Senator Walcott, republican, Connecticut, gave his approval to the resolution after receiving consent to file a personal report giving a different conclusion on some provisions of the proposal.

The resolution is identical to that passed by congress last year and given a pocket veto by former President Coolidge, except for a section providing compensation to the states of Alabama and Tennessee in lieu of taxes they would receive were the property operated by private individuals.

YALE FRESHMEN TO BE DISCIPLINED FOR RIOTING

NEW HAVEN, May 29—(AP)—Disciplinary measures would be taken by Yale officials toward the freshman class it was said today for their riotous acts last night which spread to city property. Owing to the general harmless character of the outbreak it was not expected that any drastic action would be made.

The chief damage was to college property, although street cars were made the object of attack. The rioters swept through the downtown streets and were only turned back by a corps of reserve police who used their nightsticks.

Dean Percy T. Walden of the freshman year said that the freshmen would be compelled to pay for the damages to the lights in Berkeley oval and the fence which was torn down and used as a bonfire. The dean said that the regrettable part of the riot was that the students went outside Yale property to commit their acts.

TAX REFUND OF $103,279 TO MORTON F. PLANT ESTATE

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP)—Refund of $103,279 to the estate of Morton F. Plant, for overassessment of estate tax was announced today by the internal revenue bureau. The overassessment was due to allowances for reductions on account of inheritance and estate taxes paid to the states of Connecticut, New York and Utah, the announcement said.

Woman Hired Roomer To Kill Jas. W. Parks

Promised Slayer $1,000 of $7,000 Insurance of Which She Was Beneficiary.

MACON, Ga., May 29—(AP)—Police today announced they had a confession from Mrs. J. C. Powell, 65 year old rooming housekeeper, that she hired Earl Manchester, a roomer, to kill James W. Parks, Atlanta, printer. Manchester confessed to the actual slaying, the police said.

Parks' body was found beside a bridge near the Okmulgee river yesterday and police theorized that he was taken for a ride in Metropolitan gangland style.

The police asserted that Mrs. Powers told them she promised Manchester $1,000 of a $7,000 double indemnity insurance policy on Parks' life, of which she was beneficiary.

They quoted Manchester as admitting that he fired two shots into Parks' head as the promise of Mrs. Powers, and as saying he had not received any money.

Wisconsin Fifth State To Repeal "Dry Law"

In Signing the Bill Gov. Kohler said He Merely Followed the Mandate of the People.

MADISON, Wis., May 29—(AP)—Wisconsin today became the fifth state to dispose of its prohibition enforcement laws. Governor Walter J. Kohler affixed his signature to the Grobschmidt dry repeal bill, leaving the state with no other dry law than the federal prohibition act.

The lead of New York, Maryland, Montana, and Nevada was followed by Wisconsin by repealing the Severson act, the state's dry enforcement law.

In signing the bill, Governor Kohler said he had merely followed the mandate of the people, "an overwhelmingly expressed in the recent referendum."

The referendum was held April 2 at which time the voters, by a majority of nearly 150,000 signified their desires for the abolition of the state dry law. Throughout the resultant fight in the state legislature for passage of the Grobschmidt bill, Governor Kohler refused to express an opinion on the wet and dry issues. During his campaign last fall he was a strong supporter of President Hoover and received the support of both wet and dry factions. The bill was sponsored by John W. Grobschmidt, Milwaukee, a progressive republican.

The governor explained his stand in a memorandum to the legislature which said in part:

"The 18th amendment provides that 'the congress and the several states shall have concurrent power to enforce this act by appropriate legislation.'

"The action of any state in this regard must be determined in the final analysis by the expressed will of the citizens of the state."

The Grobschmidt bill repeals the state dry law, but leaves to municipalities the regulation of soft drink parlors and drinking on buses and trains. The bill passed the assembly 57 to 32 and the senate 21 to 9. Many of the legislators discarded their personal opinions on the wet and dry question and voted for repeal because of the marked desire on the part of their constitutents for abolition of the state dry law.

Memorial Day

Through city street and country lane
Hosts of the Loyal march again
With grateful hearts and tear-dimmed eyes;
They know the path where duty lies.
Softly the wind its requiem sings
As each his tender tribute brings.

Forgotten, Soldier? Nay. The years
Come back to us through mists of tears.
Bronze buttons, faded coats of blue,
Striplings in khaki, brave and true,
Father, and son—the boy next door—
Held in our memory, evermore.

Sleeping, Soldier? Then, comrade, rest,
Thy watch well done, thy labor blest
And be content. The flag still flies
In glory under Freedom's skies.
A thankful land, deep in thy debt,
Keeping the faith, shall ne'er forget.

The outcome of the conference was reported as "very satisfactory to the committee," although Gov. Trumbull did not commit himself to signing the bill, it was explained.

OCEAN FLIGHTS MAY START AT 8 A. M. TODAY

WASHINGTON, May 29—(AP)—President Hoover is opposed to an extended recess of congress until the farm relief bill has been enacted and an agreement made to vote on the tariff measure in the senate during the fall.

AGREEMENT REACHED ON REPARATION ANNUITIES

German Experts and Their Creditors Have Accepted Revised Proposal Made by the American Chairman, Owen D. Young—The Agreement Was a Victory For Neither Side—Both the Germans and Creditors Gave Way to Make It Possible.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP)—The German experts and their creditors came to an agreement on revised reparation annuities as proposed by the American chairman, Owen D. Young.

It was further explained that this agreement was no one's victory, for both Germans and creditors gave way to make it possible.

The general opinion of the experts was that a most important step had been taken toward final elimination of reparations from the thorny aftermath of the World war. There was no disposition to cry victory because there remained a number of knotty points among German conditions and Allied revisions, any one of which if not satisfactorily disposed of might make final agreement impossible.

The experts will grapple with these problems tomorrow. The probability was that the Allies would meet in the morning and advise the Germans of the results in the afternoon. Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, who has been resting at Versailles, probably will be on hand for this closing phase of the conference.

The situation was explained tonight by Thomas W. Lamont, American alternate, as follows:

"Both creditor and German experts have heretofore declared themselves willing to accept the annuity figures of 2,050,000,000 marks as suggested by the chairman, although a difference existed on the question of interpretation.

"This difference has now been removed and a common basis for interpretation acceptable to both the creditors and to Germany has been found, subject, however, to agreement on the outstanding conditions which still remain for discussion and settlement.

"These annuities average 2,050,000,000 gold marks (about $492,000,000) for thirty-seven years; 1,700,000,000 marks ($409,000,000) for twenty-one years; and 660,000,000 marks ($216,000,000) for the final year.

Under the agreement as concluded these annuities will run from September next, instead of from April 1 last as originally calculated. The Dawes plan of payments will meanwhile continue in force.

NEGRO TAKEN FROM JAIL AND LYNCHED

ALAMO, Tenn., May 29.—(AP)—Joe Boxley, 19-year-old negro accused of attacking a white woman, was abducted from jail here early today by a mob. He was lynched four miles east of town.

The lynchers had stormed a jail at Trenton, Tenn., in an adjoining county, before they traced the negro to Alamo, and almost battered down the door of the home of Carl Emison, Crockett county sheriff. They discovered the keys to Alamo's jail under a divan where the sheriff had placed them, and got possession of the negro.

Despite an injunction written on a placard placed beside the body that the negro was to "hang here until 4 p. m., Thursday" the body was removed today by the county coroner and turned over to Boxley's relatives.

Mrs. John James, wife of a magistrate, who was attacked and choked into unconsciousness at her home near Trenton, was reported this afternoon still in a serious condition.

Boxley was arrested late yesterday at Trenton in an adjoining county, and rushed to the jail here late last night. A mob of about 2,000 men stormed the Trenton jail and demanded the negro. Not finding him when they forced entrance, members of the mob moved to Alamo, and forced Emmison to open the door of his home. They took possession of Boxley and led him away with a rope about his neck. His body was found later hanging to a tree.

THE LINDBERGHS STILL REMAIN IN SECLUSION

NEW YORK, May 29—(AP)—The Lone Eagle still was the lost eagle tonight.

Driving out of the driveway of the Dwight W. Morrow estate at Englewood, N. J., Monday afternoon Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh, the former Anne Spencer Morrow, disappeared as completely as he did when he soared into the mists above Roosevelt field for France that May morning two years ago.

The colonel's own speedy Falcon plane, equipped with enough gasoline for a thousand mile flight and two parachutes stands in the hangar at Schenectady, N. Y., where it was flown yesterday, but its master has so far failed to appear and claim it. A vigil on the Morrow summer home at North Haven, Me., also has failed to bring any sight of the Lindberghs.

Those who know Lindbergh believe that he is away somewhere on an aerial honeymoon, probably landing on private fields of impromptu ones, thus evading the wave of publicity which in two years has rolled unceasingly over him. But that's conjecture, too.

MRS. HELEN McMAHON WAS GRANTED DIVORCE

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., May 29.—(AP)—Helen McMahon, of Stamford, daughter of the late Judge Martin Carey, solicitor general and vice-president and director of the Standard Oil company of New York, was granted a decree of divorce by Judge Newell Jennings here today from John V. McMahon, 47, Tulsa, Okla., oil operator.

The decree was granted upon an allegation of cruelty set forth in a disposition from the plaintiff who was not present in the courtroom. The deposition together with others was handed to Judge Jennings by Attorney Thomas J. Spellacy, counsel for the woman.

Mrs. McMahon in the document taken in New York city several months ago declared that her husband's attitude towards her changed shortly after their marriage in April 30, 1924, when she refused to allow him to manage the $38,000 annual income from an estate of close of $2,000,000 left in trust by her father for herself and her brother, Martin Fraser Carey, of Stamford.

GUILFOILE SUSPENDED FROM PRACTICE OF LAW

WATERBURY, Conn., May 29.—(AP)—Attorney Joseph C. Guilfoile, brother of Mayor Francis T. Guilfoile, was today suspended indefinitely from the practice of law in the state of Connecticut. Judge Edwin C. Dickenson of Hartford who conducted the court of inquiry here three weeks ago made the decision. The action against Attorney Guilfoile was brought by the grievance committee of the New Haven county bar association.

The action of the court was taken on the method of handling a mortgage for Nicholas Pilla on property in this city. Attorney Guilfoile after taking the mortgage for the client secured the title to the equity. The court found that Attorney Guilfoile after he took title to the property considered that the client was out of the picture. The court pointed out that no books were kept and that no accounting was made until after action was taken.

GENERAL ELECTION IN UNITED KINGDOM TODAY

LONDON, May 29.—(AP)—Election day tomorrow is a landmark in the political history of Britain. For the first time, the whole adult population of the United Kingdom, women as well as men, is entitled to go to the polls to make what Premier Baldwin described as "the greatest experiment in democracy," namely to select the kind of government which it desires to live under.

Man no longer is the sole arbiter of this great duty. It has become a woman's question, for women are in a great majority in the electorate.

The revolution, so stormy in its inception, which brought this great privilege to women since the early suffrage campaigns, has resulted in the most placid election campaign ever known in England.

It is a day of youth and of feminine youth.

At the end of this calm campaign from which the atmosphere of bitter conflict has been almost completely absent, nobody is able to say whether this calm was the result of indifference or simply of the fact that the electorate had already made up its mind and was not to be deflected by any amount of platform oratory.

The "riddle of the election," as it is popularly termed, depends on two factors, the first was the addition of some five million new women voters to the electorate, and the second the unprecedented number of three-cornered contests, which may send victory to some candidate with a minority of the votes. There are three or more candidates in no less than 488 constituencies. At the last general election in 1924 these triangular contests went mostly to the advantage of the conservatives and against the liberals. But it does not follow that the same thing will happen this year.

"What ever the verdict I shall accept it cheerfully," said Premier Baldwin at Preston today prior to leaving for Manchester, where he was to deliver the final address of the election campaign tonight.

DIFFERENCES OF OPINION IN SENATE ON TARIFF BILL

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP)—Coincident with receipt of the tariff bill passed yesterday by the house, senate republicans developed sharp differences of opinion today not only on the merits of the measure but over when it should be taken up in that branch.

After a meeting of the majority members of the finance committee Chairman Smoot announced that hearings on the bill would start June 11, that they would last about six weeks, and that a rewritten bill would be ready for the senate by September 1.

Senators Borah, republican, Idaho, and Jones, republican, Washington, took stands for quicker action on the bill after a conference at the white house with President Hoover.

Borah declared the special session was called with a view to granting relief to the farmer and that since the tariff measure in its present form was not "a farm relief tariff bill," congress ought to stay on the job and "finish the work which we have assigned ourselves."

The Idahoan declared the tariff bill was a sham so far as the farmer was concerned, and contended the measure should be confined to readjustment or farm duties alone.

Declaring that as long as a tariff bill is under consideration in congress business is held up throughout the country, Senator Jones said the house bill ought to be passed by the senate at least by the middle of August.

Referring to reports that it was agreeable to the president that the senate vote on the measure some time in November, the Washington senator declared he was certain this would be contrary to the president's wishes.

"It is my judgment," he said, "that he would probably be satisfied if the tariff bill should be disposed of sometime in September."

TOWN PUMPING STATION DESTROYED BY LIGHTNING

SUFFIELD, May 29—(AP)—This town was threatened with a water famine when lightning today struck a large frame building of the Northern Connecticut Power company and destroyed the pumping station which houses the water supply. Another bolt of lightning struck and killed Sophia Yurmisko, 15, 102 White street, Westfield, Mass., while she was working on the Hathaway and Stearns tobacco plantation. She died within several hours.

The resulting fire from the bolt completely damaged the pumping apparatus and the electrical supplies stored in the power company building. Officials placed the loss at $10,000. It was estimated that the town water supply on hand would last five days. Arrangements were being made to meet the situation. The electric storm also burned a barn and killed a horse unconscious.

SEVEN YEARS OLD BOY CRUSHED TO DEATH BY TRUCK

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 29—Louis Lachappelle, aged seven, an orphan, was crushed to death about 2:30 o'clock this afternoon when run over by the rear wheel of a two-ton truck operated by Frederick C. Burnham of Hampton as the machine was proceeding easterly on Main street, just west of the Bridge street junction, and about opposite the Jordan Auto company garage. The truck is the property of John L. Donohue, also of Hampton and carried a light load of empty milk cans. Mr. Burnham had just left the T. R. Sadd garage some 250 feet up the street and was traveling at a rate of about 15 miles an hour. He was watching out for a group of children playing near the curbing on his right when he suddenly noticed the Lachappelle boy directly in front of the left front fender of the truck. With complete disregard for the safety of himself or the truck, Burnham pulled the machine sharply to the right at the same time applying the brakes. The truck stopped well within its own length and the left front wheel missed the boy but he was caught under the left rear wheel and run over. Mr. Burnham picked the child up and rushed to St. Joseph's hospital but the boy had died without regaining consciousness. It is believed that he received a fractured skull and collar bone injury.

Medical Examiner Dr. Louis I. Mason was summoned to view the body which was turned over to the Hurteau-Bosse Corps, for funeral arrangements.

Pending an inquest by Coroner Arthur G. Bill of Danielson Burnham was placed under bonds of $2,000 on a technical charge of manslaughter. Bonds were furnished by his employer, J. L. Donohue. The accident was investigated by Officer Arthur Hurley of the police department.

Louis Lachappelle, who was born in this city, leaves four brothers: Leo, Philip, Mitchell and Charles Lachappelle, all of this city, and one sister, Mrs. Rose DeMontigney of 1027 Main street with whom he had made his home and near whose residence the accident occurred.

The carriers' window will be open from 7 to 10 a. m. and the general delivery and stamp windows during the same hours. The money order and registry departments will be closed for the day, however. There will be the usual collections of mail from the street boxes.

About 15 motor trucks and a number of private cars will make the journey. In the Windham cemeteries Rev. Harold H. Critchlow, pastor of the local Methodist church will be the speaker, while one of the priests of St. Joseph's parish will deliver a brief oration and prayer at the Catholic cemetery.

STATE ROAD THROUGH NEWENT MAY INSPIRE NEW BUS LINE

Rev. J. W. Reynolds, pastor of Newent Congregational church, who lives in the Manse by the side of the road, finds it interesting to note by comparison, the state road traffic that passes daily before his door. Mr. Reynolds says that when first he settled in the Lisbon certain Newent was practically an isolated locality. Often these times, on pleasant days, there are noted in excess of 200 passing automobiles.

The new state road at the town house corner is being laid out 80 feet wide. Already schedules are being studied for a regular line of Connecticut buses, to be operated via Newent, designed to accommodate passenger traffic from New London and Norwich to important north and east terminals.

The new Lisbon school and community hall, which is being maintained with success, stands as one of the projects that will make for Newent's advance.

Recent fine exhibitions of school industries there, confirmed the good judgment and foresight of the townspeople who sponsored the enterprise. And now when it is definitely established that a main state artery of trunk line traffic will pass through this historic hamlet, a favorable future is surely outlined for Newent.

OPENING DAY

BLACK HALL LAKE ESTATE

Make Decoration Day a Day of Pleasure and Profit

When one takes into consideration the fact that Black Hall Lake is one of the very few pieces of desirable, undeveloped lake properties left in the State of Connecticut, it can readily be seen why this kind of property will be quickly bought up. If the demand for lake property continues in the near future as it has in the past there will be precious little of it left in the short span of two or three years.

Values on lake property are constantly rising. Lots that originally sold at Rogers Lake for $550 three years ago have recently sold for $1600. That beats the stock market! Doesn't it?

What has happened at other places is bound to happen at Black Hall Lake. Values are bound to increase as time goes on. You can make tomorrow a day of pleasure and profit if you drive out to see this property and take advantage of the opportunity which is given to you to buy now at lowest possible prices.

SUMMER BUNGALOW SITES

Look where you will—search everywhere and you cannot find a place more ideally located for a permanent summer colony.

Rarely is the opportunity offered you to buy a bungalow site upon which you can build a summer place of your very own—in a summer colony possessing as many natural advantages for such a ridiculously low price as Black Hall Estates. This property possesses all the natural attributes necessary to make a summer colony a delightful, healthful and cool place in which to spend the hot, stuffy evenings and week-ends. DANIELSON

MISS MAY BAILEY BECOMES BRIDE OF JOHN TWOMBLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 29—This evening at 7.30, at the Westfield Congregational church, Miss May S Bailey, daughter of Mrs. Hattie Bailey of School street, and John Twombly of Providence were united in marriage by Rev. Harding W. Gaylord. Only members of the families were in attendance. The bridal couple were attended by Ray P. Bailey and Harriet N. Bailey. Mr. and Mrs. Twombly have gone to Washington, D. C., on their wedding trip. They are to make their home in Providence, where Mrs. Twombly has been engaged for several years in social service work. Mr. Twombly also has been a resident of Providence for years.

French speaking young man wanted with some experience, in retail clothing store. Permanent position at Minot & Williams, Putnam—adv.

By word passed from one to another the news spread this morning that the quarantine on dogs in the towns of Killingly and Brooklyn is over, and by noon dozens of animals that have been kept confined since February 25, were again at liberty, and apparently very grateful for their freedom. Notification that the quarantine is no longer in effect was received here from Commissioner Whittlesey of the bureau of domestic animals this morning by the selectmen and by Town Clerk F. T. Preston. Brooklyn officials also were notified by the commissioner. This formal notice to the town officials is the only one that will be given relative to raising the quarantine.

Secretary Prentice W. Chase of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association said this afternoon that all but five exhibition spaces have been taken for the textile exhibit and style show to be held here in mid-June. The Eastern Connecticut Power company, Danielson division, is another of the latest concerns to enter as exhibitors. In addition to the display this corporation will make it will furnish special illumination for the style show and colored slides that will be used most effectively on costumes worn by young women taking part in the style show, all of these costumes to be made of materials manufactured in the mills that the girls represent. Frederick Babcock of Boston has the details of the style show arrangement in charge.

Through the courtesy of the Jewett City Textile Novelty company, the State Trade school at Putnam also will have an exhibit, the Jewett City concern supplying the space. The exhibit by the State Trade school is certain to be one of the most interesting in the show. Other newly signed exhibitors are the E. H. Keach company of Danielson, showing electrically operated cooling devices, and the Durant Manufacturing company of Providence.

Secretary Chase said this afternoon that he is practically certain of closing arrangements for the use of two more of the exhibition spaces in the immediate future, and the forecast is that every foot of exhibition space will have been contracted for well in advance of the opening of the show, which will be the best ever, and that is saying a great deal.

This morning the funeral of William H. Nicholas, Jr., infant son of W. H. Nicholas of East Franklin street, was held from the home with a service at St. James' church at 9 o'clock, Rev. Antheleme Mollard, M S., officiating. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery. The bearers were Philip Gendreau, Norman Loiselle, John Wheeler and Stanley Cudworth. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

Nearly two score boys of the seventh and eighth grades of the Danielson school were radiant examples of happiness this morning as they reviewed their experiences as guests of the members of the Danielson Rotary club at Plainfield last evening. Club members took the boys in their cars for the trip to the neighboring town, made it possible for them to enjoy a period in the swimming pool at the Community house and then sat down to a bountiful dinner at the Lawton inn. If their comments were any indication of how they felt about it, what the Rotarians had to say about the trip, this morning would indicate they got about as great a thrill out of the trip as did their little guests. Throughout the winter season the Danielson Rotary club has made it possible for these boys to enjoy periodical trips to Plainfield and to have the opportunity of using the swimming pool at the Community house and learn to swim. The Rotarians drew a big dividend on this "investment" last evening when they saw boys that could not swim a stroke last fall doing fancy swimming and diving stunts last night and disporting themselves in the water as though born to the element. Last night's trip was the last of the season, a matter of regret to both the boys and the members of the club.

The St. Theresa Guard of Honor that will be seen in the Memorial day procession in Danielson is making a name for itself as an exhibition drilling organization. This has just been demonstrated to the large number that saw the guard drill at the whist given in the town hall. The guard membership is made up of young girls, and they are under the able direction of Miss Marie Champagne of Dyer street. The guard members are: Annette Despathie, Florence Plantier, Gertrude Plantier, Eliza Poudrette, Rachel Roy, Rose E. Duquette, Yvonne Couture, Irene Mailhot, Romela Hubert, Lillian Berthiaume, Bertha Ballard, Alphonsine Bernier, Lucia Poudrette, Adrienne Hubert, Amita Ballard, Julianne Martin, Anseline Mailhot, Bernadette Savoie.

At the whist given by the guard honors were won by Miss Blanche Tetreault, first; Miss Mary Pierce, second; Anaciete Hubert, first; Camil Mailhot, second. A feature of the evening's entertainment was the presentation of a little one-act comedy in which four members of the guard had parts.

Anticipating extremely heavy traffic over the state highways in this section during the Memorial day period, a steady patrol of the trunk lines will be maintained by state officers of the Danielson barracks. Infractions of the driving and road rules will be promptly suppressed. It is a matter of record that drivers as a whole have been more careful and considerate of the rights of others during the past two or three years, since traffic has grown so amazingly, than was the case in former days. Comparatively few do reckless stunts or usurp on the rights of others. It will be this class that the state officers will be on the watch for over the holiday.

As a matter of courtesy to the patriotic organizations taking part in the Memorial day procession here on Thursday, motorists have been requested by Chief John McFarland not to park cars in Center street from 12.30 p. m. until after the conclusion of the exercises in the Orpheum theatre.

The postoffice here, with the exception of the lobby, will be closed all day Memorial day, but mails will be dispatched as usual and the lobby will remain open during the usual hours.

Nola Sharon Pellett, four months' old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett C. Pellett of North street, died last night.

Figures compiled by Town Clerk F. T. Preston show that a total of 642 dogs have been registered in Killingly. Of this number 619 are males and spayed and 23 are females. One kennel license also was issued.

Thermometers exposed directly to the rays of the sun ran up to 98 degrees in Danielson early this afternoon, and as for the heat generally it took rank with the kind that July is noted for producing.

The tide of holiday travel over the line highways through Danielson began to flow heavily this afternoon. Extra motor coaches were required to handle the business offered.

A new boat that has been completed for the state police here has been given a tryout at Old Killingly pond and has proved satisfactory. The boat is to be used by the officers in dragging for bodies of drowned persons, when such unfortunate necessity arises, as has happened a number of times in the past. The boat is mounted on a trailer which can be readily attached to any of the department cars.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan D. Prince of Hartford are spending Memorial day at their home here.

The plan of flushing Main street is to be given a month's trial, it was said this morning, and if it works out as expected will be regularly continued.

Graves of the nation's dead who have served in wars have been decorated with flags and markers in cemeteries throughout the town of Killingly.

James A. Plantier of North Attleboro, Mass., is visiting with friends in Danielson over the holiday period.

Members of local patriotic organizations that are to take part in the Memorial day exercises at Brooklyn are to assemble at 8.30 Thursday morning. The exercises at Brooklyn begin at 9 a. m.

Frederick Franklin of Boston is here to attend the funeral of his brother, Hiram S. Franklin.

VICTOR ST. JOHN DIES FROM ACUTE INDIGESTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, May 29—While sitting on the veranda at his home on Dyer street about 7 o'clock tonight, Victor St. John, aged 42, a lifelong resident of Danielson, toppled out of his chair and died almost immediately. Dr. George M. Burroughs medical examiner, who viewed the body, gave acute indigestion as the cause of death. On arising this morning, Mr. St. John complained of being ill and remained away from his work for the day. His condition did not appear to be serious and he rejected the suggestion that a physician be called. Mr. St. John is survived by his wife, a small son, Maurice, and a brother and a sister. It was recalled tonight that Mr. St. John's father died suddenly under almost similar circumstances many years ago, while in a barber shop here.

PUTNAM

BULLET LODGES IN WALL OF VON FLATEN HOME

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 29—Putnam police were called last evening to probe the source of a mysterious shot fired from a rifle which struck and penetrated the outer wall of the home of Mrs. Mary Von Flaten on Arch street. The shot, according to Mrs. Von Flaten, was fired at about 8.30 o'clock. The police were called immediately and investigation was launched in an effort to track down the man or perhaps a woman responsible for the offense. After questioning several in the vicinity of the Von Flaten home with no apparent success the officer retired from Arch street to work on the case from a different angle.

At first foul play was suspected but since no developments followed in the case today police were inclined to believe that the slug was a stray bullet from a gun of a hunter who had been prowling about the State Park a few hundred yards distant from the house where the slug entered.

Captain of Police William J. Jarvis said tonight that he would continue investigation into the affair on Thursday and was hopeful that he would be able to throw some light on the case.

Mrs. Von Flaten and others were in the house at the time of the occurrence but were in another part of the home from whence the startling slug penetrated and lodged in the kitchen wall.

An Oxford Mass., man arrested Tuesday evening by Special Officer Dinsdale on a charge of intoxication was committed to the county jail in Brooklyn this morning to serve a sentence of 30 days after being found guilty of the offence. Judge Geissler presided at the session of court.

The theory and practice of x-ray photography was clearly and interestingly explained in an address by Dr. Philip H. Cook at the noonday meeting of the Putnam Rotary club held at the Putnam inn. Dr. Cook is a specialist on the subject of x-ray and radium treatments prescribed for the cure of chronic diseases and has a wide practice in southern Massachusetts. He illustrated his talk with specimens of x-ray photos of many intricate medical problems which arise in the course of his practice. The difference between x-ray and radium treatments were explained by the physician. The discovery of these two high powered rays Doctor Cook explained were two of the foremost advancements of medical science since the opening of the twentieth century.

Sidney W. Bard and Sidney Marland of Danielson and Albert Shaw of Webster were visitors at today's Rotary luncheon.

The recently elected officers were announced at today's luncheon. They will be installed into office at the first meeting of the club in July. Subbo Nickoloff is the new president.

Mrs. E. Leslie Beebe of 4 Whittemore street was a Providence visitor today.

President Byron D. Bugbee of the Cargill Trust company, who will act as construction advisor, while the new two story modernistic type banking house of the Cargill is in the period of construction stated this afternoon that the firm of Medbury and Trowbridge, local building wreckers, will commence the task of razing the O'Leary block on Main street Saturday. About a week will be needed to clear this site of its present building, Mr. Bugbee said. A firm of contractors in Centerbrook, Conn., who have been awarded the contract to erect the new structure will commence their work a few days after the wooden structure has been torn down.

Miss Esther Wells district nurse of the Putnam chapter of Red Cross has returned from a recent visit to Washington.

The weatherman's promise of an ideal setting for the observance of Memorial day, Thursday, was highly received by the general committee in charge of the observance programme tonight. A parade in which all civic military and patriotic organizations in the city will participate will start promptly at 9.30 o'clock. The formation will take place in Union square and the regular line of march over all the important streets in the city will be carried out. At Grove street cemetery the speaking exercises and the memorial tribute to the soldier dead will take place. Rev. Matthew Brady professor of English at St. Thomas Seminary in Hartford will deliver the address of the day. The parade will re-form in the cemetery and will counter march up Grove street to the Soldier monument where a public flag raising and the sounding of taps will take place. The procession will disband at the monument.

In the event the weatherman's forecast is not true to word and rain is evident the memorial programme will take place in the state armory on Harris street.

The graves of the soldiers in St. Mary's cemetery and in Grove street cemetery and in all other town burial grounds not now used, will be decorated early in the morning.

To prove his contention that only a limited water pressure is available at the east end of Walnut street on what is known as Shippee Hill, Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston ordered the No. 1 pumper company of the central fire station to hydrant in this vicinity to make tests of the force at this point of elevation. Little or no pressure was had with an open hydrant and an insufficient amount was had when the pumping apparatus of the hose truck was connected. Chief Thurston is also chairman of the board of water commissioners and it is thought that the test Tuesday evening was called in order to further plans which will be contained in the report of the commission on the reconstruction of the city water system soon to be presented to the common council for consideration.

Rev. Joseph D. Casey who has been in Waterbury for the past month convalescing from a recent operation will return to his duties as assistant pastor of St. Mary's church this week.

Putnam swelstred for the second day in a heat wave which has prevailed for the past twenty-four hours and sent thermometers in sunny spots to the mark of 90. Relief was hoped for this afternoon by those working in the factories and in the sun but until a late hour tonight there were no storm indications that would result in an abatement of the intense heat.

A general suspension of business in the stores and factories will take place today (Thursday) in order to allow employees to take part in the observance of Memorial day.

WESTERLY

FIRE AT SAVAGE PLACE—BARN AND CONTENTS BURNED

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., May 29.—Wednesday afternoon shortly after 3 o'clock the siren was blown by Westerly Automatic telephone central for 32, as out of the fire district call. The Seagraves pumper had barely reached the fire when a second alarm was sounded and the Ahrens-Fox pumper was called to save the home of Frederick R. Savage, at the foot of Berry hill on the old Westerly-Potter hill road. The barn fell a prey to the flames and of its contents of implements and machinery but one piece was saved, due to the efforts of Joseph Kelly and Herbert P. Clark, who succeeded in hauling a tractor to a point of safety from the blazing building. An adjoining shed which stored much cement and other material was burned but the shelter beside it was saved. No members of the Savage family were at home, Mrs. Savage being on a shopping trip and Mr. Savage hauling railroad ties into Westerly.

The contents of the booster tanks were played upon the rear of the house, from which the burning barn stood some eighty feet away. No one seemed to know the cause of the fire which was discovered by William E. Cook who was passing the place in his cart and observed smoke pouring from the building adjoining the two sheds used as garages, from one of which an automobile was saved. Mr. Cook hurried to the Harlan P. Hakes farm adjoining from where the call was telephoned to Westerly.

Just beyond the Savage place a brook which runs under the highway was dammed by Engineer Robert Bonner, and a sufficient depth of water was secured to drop the suction of the Ahrens-Fox pumper, from which water was pumped onto the side of the burning garage. Other firemen had the task of checking a brush and grass fire which started from the falling sparks.

Blaze Back of Convent

Shortly before 4 p. m. fire alarm No. 62 was blown from the box at Liberty street near Stillman avenue for a fire on the dump at the rear of St. Michael's convent on Liberty street. Two pieces of apparatus of the Pawcatuck fire department went through Stillman avenue and up Cherry street. Here the booster tank of the hook and ladder truck was used to keep down the blaze, which threatened to spread to adjoining buildings. Recall was sounded at about 5:30 p. m.

HOW MEMORIAL DAY IS TO BE OBSERVED

In Westerly this (Thursday) morning the Memorial parade will start at 9:30 from the junction of Broad and Elm streets. A pause will be made on the Pawcatuck river bridge to honor the dead at sea.

Services will be held at St. Michael's cemetery and River Bend cemetery. It is expected that all seventeen local veteran organizations will be well represented in the line of march and it is hoped to have present the surviving veterans of the Grand Army.

Capt. Shelby C. Nicholas will be marshal with the following aides: Bourdon A. Babcock, representing the Spanish War Veterans; John L. Sullivan, Veterans of Foreign Wars; Robert M. Freestone, American Legion; Harry Long, British and Colonial Great War Veterans; Charles Witter, Sons of the Union Veterans.

The line will form on Elm street right resting near Broad street, and at 9:30 will march through Broad street to the Pawcatuck river bridge, where the women of Budlong and Hancock Relief Corps and associated group of patriotic auxiliaries will conduct their ceremonies.

From the bridge the march will continue through West Broad and Liberty streets to St. Michael's cemetery. Brief exercises consisting of the rifle salute and sounding of taps will mark the program here. From St. Michael's cemetery the line of march will be through Morgan street to the Pawcatuck Memorial on West Broad street which will be decorated by the auxiliaries of Harley P. Chase post, V. F. W., and Harold W. Merrill post, American Legion. After this brief service the line will move through West Broad street, Broad, Elm and Beach streets to River Bend cemetery. A brief address will be made here by Rev. A. L. Schoning, pastor of Broad street Christian church and prayer will be offered by Rev. Clayton A. Burdick, pastor of Pawcatuck Seventh Day Baptist church.

Streets in the business section of Westerly, notably High, Broad and Granite streets which have been torn up for months for the purposes of widening and the installation of conduits, will be cleared up, temporarily, at least for the eMmorial day rush of auto traffic. Wednesday night Broad street was wet down and will be again this (Thursday) morning to make the surface suitable as far as possible for the parade in connection with the Memorial day exercises.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Mary F. Barber

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Frances Barber were held Tuesday afternoon at her home in the Woody hill section of Exeter. The services were conducted by Rev. Chester Parmley, of Peace Dale. The bearers were Arthur S., George L., Charles S. and Kenneth L. Barker, Aubrey C. Lewis and Lester B. Kenyon. Burial was in Wood River cemetery.

STEALING OF PLANTS TO BE CHECKED THIS YEAR

Tuesday and Wednesday nights officers of the Westerly police department were stationed in River Bend cemetery in an attempt to put a stop to the practice of stealing flowers and plants which had been placed on graves in anticipation of Memorial day.

More than 400 geranium plants are being set out by members of the Veterans of Foreign wars in River Bend cemetery, St. Michael's old and new cemeteries and the Stonington cemetery. Similar decorations will be placed at each veteran's grave in Union cemetery by members of Hancock Relief Corps. In former years after the graves have been decorated by the local organizations many of the plants have mysteriously disappeared from the cemetery or have been replanted at other graves before Memorial day arrived.

In addition to the 400 plants being set, this year a new American flag is placed in the standard at each soldier's grave. Two years ago an effort was made to centralize the efforts of the different veteran organizations particularly in regard to Memorial day observance, by the formation of the Veteran board of control. The officers of the board for this year are: Abraham P. Dutson, chairman; Harry T. Powers, secretary; Everett E. Whipple, treasurer; Shelby C. Nicholas, H. Russell Burdick, John Smith, John L. Sullivan, John Donohue and Frank Stolps. The board of control is constantly on the lookout to see that all veterans who may be buried in the local cemeteries are given proper recognition.

This year there have been no preliminary plans made to supply refreshments to the marchers at the close of the street parade. Last year this was done at the Dixon street armory.

Bitten By Dog

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Goodwin are home after visiting their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Goodwin and daughter Frances, in Philadelphia. Their grand daughter was badly bitten by a police dog, but is recovering as well as can be expected. This dog was never allowed loose, but in some manner he got away and went for the child. She had a heavy sweater on and had presence of mind to throw it over her face. Her arms were badly bitten from wrist to elbow.

Mrs. Henry Meyers and Mrs. Harry Meyers of New London visited relatives here Tuesday.

A number of the people who have been vaccinated are spending several days in bed. The schools show a very small attendance.

The end men, Misses Edna and Frances Lamb and the interlocutor, Miss Julia Rodman furnished much amusement with snappy jokes and rapid crossfire bits. Part one consisted of solo and chorus numbers and jokes. Part two was composed of novelty bits including a monolog, Noah's Ark, by Winifred Bushnell, bum song, Edna and Frances Lamb; duet, Carolina Moon, Vivian Bushnell and Nelson Robinson; a recitation, Kelley's Dream, Ruth Robinson and cachinnation by Frances Lamb. A meeting of the Tumble Workers of Franklin was held Saturday at the home of the secretary, Marion Robinson, with eleven members in attendance. The president, Mary Manning was in the choir. The roll call was answered by each member giving interesting facts about birds. Mary Manning, delegate to the state club round up gave a detailed report of the round up. Dresses were judged, Marion Robinson receiving first place, Edna White, second and Althen Davis, third. Three demonstration teams were organized and in the summer a contest will be held to determine the best team. The next meeting is planned for May 25th at the club house. After adjournment, sandwiches, cake and cocoa were served in honor of the president and secretary's birthdays.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Once again we reach the day that has long been used for keeping alive the memories of the valiant deeds performed by those who fought and bled and died for their country. There were the days when it concerned those who participated in the Civil war, but as time has gone on veterans of the other wars have been included both in celebration and in the object of the day.

Memorial day is a day for the veterans, but as they plan and participate in the exercises they deserve the heartiest support of the public in general. To them, those of the Civil war, those of the Spanish-American war, those of the World war, we owe more than we can express. We cannot forget the sacrifices they made for country and home. We cannot overlook the hardships they experienced. We are not unmindful of the young lives that were crushed out on the field of battle or those that were later claimed because of the ravages of bullets and disease, and yet it is well that there is a Memorial day each year to bring about a concentration of greater thought on the deeds of those that are gone as well as those that remain. Their sacrifices were not in vain. This glorious country owes them an endless debt of gratitude of which Memorial day observances are only a slight expression.

It is with great regret that we note the fast thinning ranks of the Boys in Blue. Age is tramping on and the number grows less each year. Their places are being taken by the veterans of the other wars, upon whose shoulders the responsibilities of Memorial day observances must fall in the years to come. But regardless of what veterans are in charge there cannot and most certainly should not be any lapsing of public interest in the celebration of Memorial day. Whether in city or village there should be a large display of public spirit and support.

MOST CARELESS NATION

According to President R. H. Ashton of the American Railway association, the United States is the most careless nation in the world. That is a strong indictment and yet there is unquestionably much that goes to prove it.

The price of carelessness is disclosed every day in the newspapers. It is to be found in increasing volume in the highway accidents, it prevails in the conduct of individuals in work as well as pleasure, it exists in industry and it not only means the wasting of billions of dollars every year but thousands of human lives.

Carelessness exists for various reasons. There are always those who like to do stunts for public applause, those who have no fear of danger and the possible consequences, those who take unwarranted chances, those who do not think until it is too late, those who have no regard for the rights or feelings of others, those who have so many ways of minimizing the effects that even severe penalties make no appeal and those who pay no attention to warnings.

There is no wonder that Mr. Ashton calls "Carelessness one of the worst scourges that faces this country, for the reason that it not only causes a tremendous monetary loss, which could easily be averted, but it also frequently brings suffering to the innocent."

Think what it means when it is estimated that the preventable waste in industry every year amounts to $10,000,000,000.

Think what it means when there were 7,659 persons killed in auto accidents in 78 cities in the year ending with April 20, many of which deaths were due to carelessness.

Think what it means when there is an annual fire loss approximately a half billion dollars yearly with 70 per cent. of the fires preventable.

Because this is a country of large resources we are inclined to give less thought to the prevention of waste than some other countries, but the seed of it becomes more and more apparent every year. Carelessness means waste and our waste bill continues enormous in spite of the efforts to check it. The price of carelessness every year, when it can be measured in dollars and cents is almost half of our last war bill.

THE TARIFF BILL.

In the passage of the tariff bill the house of representatives has completed the work for which the extra session of congress was specially called, and it has done it in a manner that will permit of action on such additional matters as is considered desirable at this time. But while the house has been doing its duty in regard to farm relief and a limited revision of the tariff, the senate has been doing about everything it could to prevent it.

It is unfortunate that there is no prospect that the senate will handle the tariff as expeditiously as the house has. It has used the debenture to throw a monkey wrench into the machinery of the farm relief bill and now it can be expected that it will proceed to tear the tariff revision to pieces.

This is going to mean delay. There is an opportunity for the insurgent group and the democrats to line up together for the prevention of speedy action. They have given evidence of a disposition to stand in the way of instead of giving constructive help. They are losing no opportunities to play the political game for the sake of embarrassing in spite of the declaration of the people at the election last November.

Thus no one knows what the senate will do with the tariff. It will pull it to pieces and while that is being done it will resort to a long recess, and that will mean just such a delay as the president has been desirous of avoiding in order to have the benefits of the special session legislation go into effect as quickly as possible.

The tariff bill, it is to be realized, is not an attempt at complete revision. It was desired to deal only with such schedules as needed revision at this time. The house has come much nearer to doing what was expected than it is believed the senate will, even after an all summer's delay.

SETTLEMENT AT ELIZABETHTON.

Because the country has been relatively free from strike difficulties in recent months much attention has been given to the trouble at Elizabethton, Tenn. Happily it is over, what had all the earmarks of being a long drawn out, costly and perhaps bloody endurance test has been ended through the good work of the federal conciliation service.

The result is therefore an admission that conciliation is the better way. Estimates place the loss that has been sustained by the strike at $300,000, with labor suffering the most through wages lost, the employers next with the shutting off of business and then there were in addition the expenses involved in maintaining peace.

Now that it is over, and the statement has been issued that all are satisfied at the outcome, it cannot fail to be considered how much better it would have been had conciliation methods been employed at the start, before there was any loss of wages, before there was any loss of production and before the militia and other officials had to be called out to maintain peace.

It is invariably the case that the merits of such a method can be appreciated after all the trouble is over but there is an unwillingness to resort to it seriously before the harmful effects of a strike are indulged in.

Evidently there has been an adjustment in keeping with the facts in the case. Those facts prevailed from the beginning in all probability and an adjustment might have been made on such a basis before there was any trouble and before the wheels stopped turning. Whether it is in the south or the north, the merits of peaceful adjustment ought not to be sidetracked without a fair trial in any labor dispute.

THE SCHWIMMER CASE.

Madame Schwimmer is not a subject of Hungary. She is a resident of the United States. She is desirous of becoming a citizen of this country and some time since made such an application. She is certain of her desire to sever her relation with Hungary and get away from any ties which that government may have upon her, but in doing so she is not willing to comply with the requirements established by the United States.

This case has gone through the courts step by step and the United States supreme court has upheld the contention of the lower court that inasmuch as she is not willing to assume national citizenship and in doing so stand ready to defend the nation, she has been denied naturalization.

When Mme. Schwimmer declared she would not take up arms in defense of this country and the Constitution she made clear that she is what she claims to be a pronounced pacifist but in taking such an attitude she made it clear that the country could expect no defense whatever from such a person. Rather would it be a case of giving encouragement and comfort to the enemy. Inasmuch as all must be treated alike and there can be no discrimination in regard to sex when it comes to supporting the country and the Constitution, her petition was denied, and the supreme court has sustained the denial, the court holding that such a person could not take the oath of allegiance without a mental reservation.

This country has set forth the requirements with which aliens must comply if they desire to become citizens. They cannot expect to obtain the benefits attached to naturalization without meeting those requirements and doing their part as citizens, and they cannot become citizens until they agree to.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The man on the corner says: Remember it's "hats off" when the flag goes by.

Memorial day, another chance to pay tribute to those who fought for and those who died for their country, your country.

If Sir Esme Howard desires to stop importing liquor for the use of the British embassy this government will not object, but it is not probable he will be asked to stop doing what he has a right to do.

THE IMPECCABLES

Everything about the Duffy family was impeccable. No one ever had seen either Mr. or Mrs. Duffy in those moments of —— which even the neatest of us cannot avoid.

Husbands grew tired of hearing how well the Duffy grounds always looked, and how fastidious Mr. Duffy was about his person. Some few husbands came back with remarks about Mrs. Duffy's house and appearance when the subject of Mr. Duffy was too strongly pressed.

James Dale, arriving home early one afternoon, had his head full of the project of cleaning the furnace. It was too warm to work outdoors. It would be cool in the basement, and Mr. Dale had something of a boy's anticipation for a thoroughly mussy job.

"Now, James," said Mrs. Dale as he went into the basement properly attired for his job, "the Duffy's are coming at 4.30. So, for heaven's sake, be sure you are finished and dressed when they come."

"I'll have plenty of time," answered James cheerily.

"All of your clothes will be ready for you in the bathroom," said Mrs. Dale. "But be sure you give yourself ample time. I don't want the Duffys to come here and find us not ready."

"Don't worry," said Mr. Dale. "Bring on your Duffs. I'll wear that new light suit of w e and put your fastidious Mr. Duffy in the shade."

Thereafter for about two hours Mrs. Dale made preparations for 5 o'clock tea, while Mr. Dale happily thrust his head into the furnace, cleaned out the flues and took down the smoke pipe. One section of it caught him unawares with rather sooty consequences. He was finally interrupted by a call from Mrs. Dale.

"For goodness' sake, hurry" she said. "Here they come!" Mr. Dale dashed up the basement steps.

"Your clothes are all in the bathroom," said Mrs. Dale hurriedly, striving to get out of a kitchen apron and smooth her hair. "Hurry all you can."

As James departed for the bathroom Mrs. Dale went to the door to greet the Duffys. She was angrily conscious that she was flushed from her work in the kitchen. The Duffys looked impeccable—cool, calm, utterly masters of themselves and of circumstances.

As she led her visitors into the living room Mrs. Dale suddenly espied a coat, a vest and a hat hanging on the far side of a chair. Her generalship arose to the occasion.

"You haven't seen James' study since we fixed it, have you?" she asked, and without awaiting answer she steered them into the study. An anxious glance assured her that all was well here. She seated her visitors, and as she tried to make conversation her mind was busy with the problem of getting out to the living room and removing the things James had left there. As soon as James came in she could excuse herself and get rid of his clothes. If it were only any one but the Duffys!

Ten minutes passed; fifteen. Still James did not appear. Mrs. Dale had to explain that he had worked right up to the last minute and would be with them presently.

She was just about to give up in despair and announce that she was going to hurry James up a bit when, in the clothes closet which opened off the study, there was a terrific commotion, followed by a crash and expletive.

With terrified premonition Mrs. Dale watched the door swing open to reveal James Dale just picking himself up off the floor. Far from being attired in the natty suit which she had to have placed Mr. Duffy in the shade, James had not even been near the bathtub.

It was hot in the clothes closet and his face covered with soot had little runnels in it, made by the perspiration. Of course he was grimy.

Night had almost spent itself before he repeated for the hundredth time, "Well, you forget to put out that shoes in the bathroom — and you stumble them into the study as quick I could's we sat. I sat on the trunk and fell asleep—and then fell off."

"If it had been any one but the Duffys," mused Mrs. Dale.

Meanwhile the impeccable Duffys, at home to their impeccable families, were discussing the Dales as husband and wife will after a visit.

"Nice," commented Mr. Duffy, "so natural."

"I wish," sighed Mrs. Duffy, "that you could be useful about the house like Mr. Dale. It positively would do me good to see you mussed up once in a while."—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Oppose Compensation to Com.

Mr. Editor: I understand that the new city charter provides for compensation of $5 to each commissioner who attends meetings of the board on sewer and electrical commissioners, and I for one protest against any changes of this kind. The dirty deal that the commissioners have given the small consumer of electricity should not be rewarded by compensation.

Apparently these men have gotten compensation in the form of many favors but I suppose they will parade up and down our streets tomorrow in the Memorial day parade, but how can anyone have any respect for them.

OLD TIME TAXPAYER.

Norwich, May 28, 1929.

Norwich's Charter Needs

Mr. Editor. Our greatest need as a city is a new and up to date charter under which the money wrung from the taxpayers by the tremendous boost in the grand list will be protected and appropriated under a proper budget system.

Under the present methods of making appropriations, the crowd that can shout the loudest in a city meeting is spending, and often times wasting, the money of the taxpayer.

The old charter is obsolete and should have gone into the discard many years ago.

You are getting the same thing now, simply fixed up so that it will be a little more convenient for reference on the part of lawyers with cases against the city.

Kill this hoary old document and make another attempt to get a charter that is up to date and will protect the money that is taken from the taxpayer. Such an instrument would usher in a better day for the city of Norwich.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.

Norwich, May 29, 1929.

The Gas and Electrical Department

Mr. Editor: I received through the mail a pamphlet giving several reasons why the gas and electrical department should continue the sale of gas and electric appliances.

There are several good reasons why they should not, as follows: The loss in the past 11 months of $5,401; also it is a fact they sell gas and electric stoves and allow you $20 for your old stove. What do they do with the old stove? Why they turned it over to you owners and taxpayers for old junk at 25 cents a hundred pounds.

Let us look at Martin Cohen's report for other reasons: Salaries and commissions, gas $4,437.91; salaries and commissions, electric, $5,274.22; management salaries, gas, $663.76; management salaries, electric, $657.72; total salaries and commissions, $11,123.61. Quite a nice family next year for 11 months for you taxpayers to shell out of your pockets. Another reason: Supplies and advertising, gas, $905.37; supplies and advertising, electric, $3,138.92; making a total for supplies and advertising, $4,044.29; also rent $1,422; light, $288.91 (what do you know about that charging us taxpayers for their office light?) transportation, $438.59; salesman's car $855.42; insurance, $275.83. This comes out of your pockets too and when you take into consideration that this condition has been going on for a good many years you can realize the amount you taxpayers have had to make up by paying taxes and excessive meter rates.

I have an electric meter that was put in more than 30 years ago. At first I paid 50 cents a month. Later it was increased to $1 a month and the last boost was to $1.50 a month or $18 a year so you people that are up in figures can figure out what I have paid out for rent for the meter that cost perhaps $10 or $12 and I don't own it yet. The municipal electric treatment they are handing out to the small home owners doesn't seem to revive the near dead condition that exists in the city of Norwich at the present time but it will be all right if there is enough money asked for in the 18 1-2 mills on the city's new grand list to make good the losses and salaries and commissions of the merchandising department of our municipal plant. The circular sent me and others at our expense doesn't mention any of the above facts: a little oversight on their part, I presume.

The more than $225,000 they claim the gas and electrical department made the past year was in the majority dug out of the little home owner's and taxpayer's pockets in favor of the big users.

ANOTHER FAIR PLAY.

Norwich, May 29, 1929.

You Never Can Tell

Mr. Editor: In this world there are many hidden tragedies, and many people are bearing in silence a burden of sorrow that only ends when life is over. This story concerns a boy and is but the same story of many other boys who gave their all. Today some gold star mother remembers her boy with mingling feelings of pride and a broken heart.

You who have read my many letters will recall I spoke about some of the welfare work that claimed my time and attention. This was during the great World war when the whole world was upside down. Oftimes brother was arrayed against brother. It was ever thus for we only need to go back to the case of Cain and Abel. In one of my many trips into the outlying districts to buy un produce. I at one time was in the northern part of New Jersey and alighting at a small county station I found no conveyance and as a result it was a case of walk to my objective point in the interior, some three miles distant. I was within sight of the old farm house where I was going when I saw a young man come hurriedly out of the door and disappear around the back of the house and just before he was out of sight he turned around and took a hurried glance at me, then hurried away across the fields. This as I saw it looked strange. In the yard of this old place I saw a man somewhat alone in years and with an elderly lady they were sitting on a rustic bench neath the shade of a tree. They looked at me rather quizzical, and I stated my errand. As I was dressed in a navy blue suit I looked like an officer of some kind. I spoke of the young man and of his sudden exit in some things which he saw me. The old man said, "He is a German who came to this country just before the war started and he didn't like the idea of being drafted into the army. He had many relatives here and he thought if he fought against us he might have some of his own. He landed here in New York where some one stole his money and even his clothes and he wandered out here and I gave him work for I needed a man."

I was inviting in to dinner and after a real good drink of water I went into the old farm house and what an air of comfort was there. What a blessed old couple they were and I noted that every time he spoke to her he called her mother, and she in turn called him father. After the meal was over I transacted my business and we sat down and talked. Our talk drifted to the young man, and here I will let the farmer tell the story.

"I have to work hard," he said, "since this war started and one day, as mother and I were sitting in the yard, a young man came along even as you have. He was carrying a suit case and he hailed me from the road and asked if he might have a drink of water. I told him the good Lord had sent the water for us all to use. As it was about the noon hour, I asked him if he would like to have dinner with us. He accepted, went out to the pump drew some water, washed his hands and face, took out a pocket comb and slicked up his hair. Mother was coming out the door for a pail of water and he took the pail from her and said allow me, and brought in the water and mother showed him where to put it. He seemed very polite. But you never could tell in those troublesome times, you had to be careful. And I can tell you a case of an old couple same as mother and I who lived over the ridge. They hired a stranger some time ago. One day we missed them and some of the neighbors went over to see what was the matter and they found them both lying dead on the floor. We never caught the hired man who no doubt had done the deed. So you never can tell. Now this young man after dinner asked if I would give him a job and I thought it would make it easier for mother for she had been working in the fields with me gathering hay and doing lots of hard work. She never complained, but I hired him. He said I am ready to start now, I took him out to the barn above him the double harness and the horses and I told him to harness up and take them out to the back lot and I would show him what to do. He said I don't know how to harness a horse or team. You show me once and I will know next time. I did. During the day I went over to see how he was getting along and I noted now and then he would look at his hands, for as he said, I am not used to this but I will try and learn. Well he came in at nightfall and put everything away. I showed him how to feed the horses. Then he came to the house, washed up, eat some weed and put it in the wood box.

After supper we sat down and he asked mother if he could smoke his pipe. She told him he could. I asked him his name and he told me to call him Bud for he said all the boys call me Bud. Now I didn't like that for with him a stranger you never can tell. Mother and I retired after a while and we had to pass the door of his room and he sat by a table. He had been writing, and he was then reading a little book. We retired but not to sleep for I was worried, for he didn't tell me his name. But he was up early in the morning and bid us good morning and asked if there was anything he could do. He went outside to the wood pile and chopped quite some wood. As the days rolled on mother got so she liked him and he called her "mother" and it pleased her, for our children are all dead and gone. One day after he had been with us for quite a while he said I will have to go to Bloomsburg for I have left a bag there with some extra clothes and I need them but I will be back tonight." He kissed mother good bye, and just before he went over the brow of the hill, he threw a kiss to mother and she blushed like a school girl. He didn't return that night. The next morning mother went up in his room and on the table was the little book we had seen him reading. It was a little Bible. And on the fly leaf was written, To my only boy "Bud". Search the Scriptures for in them ye will find many truths—and this was signed, "Mother," and to think we doubted him. I did, but not mother, for she seemed to see in him a something, a mother's love that had been denied in her own children.

"Several days passed and we were worried for we thought some harm had come to him. One day as we were in our accustomed seat under the tree when mother said, 'there comes a car down the road, one of those closed in cars.' A man was driving who wore a fine uniform. On the seat behind him we saw Bud with a fine looking young woman and on the rear seat was an elderly man and a fine looking lady. When the car stopped "Bud" jumped out and ran to mother and kissed her and then the story came out. He had been a student at Bucknell college and an only boy. His father was the president of the First National bank of S——. As Bud had never done any hard work he wanted to get outside and so harden himself for his duties over seas. As we stood there talking "Bud's" mother and mother stood together. "Bud" put his arms around their necks and said, 'Am I not a lucky boy for I have two splendid mothers?'

"The young lady was Bud's fiancee and they were to be married on his return for he was going over to the other side. Shortly after they all left us, Bud promised to write and one day we received a postal with "Bud's" picture on it in uniform. Once again we heard from him, then all stopped until one day we received a letter with a black border on it. Mother tried to open it but she trembled so she couldn't. I opened it and this was the message: 'Dear Friends: My only boy Bud was killed at the battle of the Argonne.'

"I didn't read any further for I noticed where there were tear stains on the letter which was signed "Mother."

As the farmer told me the story I noted mother was crying. And he said just think we doubted him when he said just call me "Bud". This is the story of many other boys and many other mothers who today look for the home coming of their boy—their only man who may be sleeping on Flanders Field, far from home and mother.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 29—Another state, Pennsylvania, shows leanings toward adoption of the California precedent for naming widows of representatives who die in harness to fill the vacant seat.

Democrats of Twelfth district, six times represented by the late John Joseph Casey, although not consecutively, have nominated his widow to succeed him. A special district election is scheduled for early June.

Should Mrs. Casey, nee Sarah Celestine Lally of Wilkesbarre, win out, it will mean more than the mere addition of another congressional widow to the group of women members. If Mrs. Casey takes her husband's place, back with her to Washington will come the tribe of Casey, 11 strong, and with it Pennsylvania will regain the big family honors of congress it so long held.

Successful Woman

When you stop to think of it, a woman who has brought 11 children into the world since 1900—and a fine, upstanding lot they are from Andrew Augustus, the oldest, to Sarah Celestine, Jr., the family baby—already has rather well demonstrated success in the former role of woman in the home.

It is remarkable that she even should consider launching out on a political career of her own in the circumstances. Yet Representative Caseys in-and-out record in his district evidences his great popularity, particularly as he had gathered in all the nominations going at the last primary in which he participated, republican, democratic, labor and socialist.

Even at this distance it seems clearly indicated that Mrs. Casey will have a considerable chance of election.

Incidentally, California shows no disposition to depart from the precedent established in the election of Mrs. Florence Kahn to succeed her dead husband, Julius Kahn. She now is serving her third term, having first come to take her seat in the sixty-ninth congress in 1925.

Mrs. Kahn is not very informative about herself in contributing biographical matter to the Congressional Directory. It takes only three lines to say what she has to say.

The Bystander could fill that in a bit. He recalls Mrs. Kahn as his class teacher in a San Francisco high school in 1898 and her great doubt as to his ability to stand the rigors of soldiering in the Philippines when he joined the Spanish war volunteers.

What she did not know was that all of his school absences were not due to ill health—far from it.

Long-Termers

Mrs. Rogers of Massachusetts, of the congressional widows group, also is a third-termer in the house. She was elected in June, 1925, while Mrs. Kahn was elected in February of that year.

Mrs. Oldfield of Arkansas is the junior of the group; but even she is a two-termer, having been elected Jan. 9, 1929, to both the seventieth and seventy-first congresses.

So if Mrs. Casey does come to join that group, precedents indicate she will stay more than one term.

from recuperative and re-entry to normal or at least productive handicapped social living, in fact the pure medical-treatment-rest method may, and very often does, perpetuate and fix faulty health and dependent attitudes.

Golf for convalescents, as developed here from small beginnings, clearly outranks any other game in applicability and total curative values. The simplest shortest courses starting from near the porch steps, have holes of from 18 to 75 yards in length, are laid out upon natural slopes and levels giving some short steep grades, and require no more than good meadow or lawn upkeep.

It has been most gratifying to see every race, age and social condition take on this game with scarcely any urging and with the feeling of having somehow advanced socially, as well as physically, and with a definite broadening of the scope of life. As an service in these substandard health states, it well-nigh fulfils the ideal—comprising outdoor walking and exercise of the entire body in the strokes, intense interest, a wholesome and courteous competitive honor-making spirit, with self-grading as to time and degree of the exertion. It is often definitely prescribed for the mildly neuropathic and the inert. Persons with crutches and those who cannot bend fully down play the game with the aid of companions. The courses are in use more or less from daylight to dark and with the ground frozen until snow-covered. No injuries from clubs or balls or over exercise have been recorded.

To appreciate its growing importance in the field of recreational therapy one must acknowledge that the game of golf is rapidly advancing toward the first sports place in western civilization.

Burgess Bedtime Story

Why Dipper Never Comes Ashore
By THORNTON W. BURGESS

Just do your best with right good will
And envy not another's skill.
—Old Mother Nature.

There was one thing that Peter Rabbit had noticed about the Grebes and this was that they never came ashore. Never since he had known them had he seen either Dipper or Mrs. Grebe out of water, excepting when Mrs. Grebe was on her nest, and that nest was entirely surrounded by water. He wondered about this a good deal. Mr. and Mrs. Quack, the Mallard Ducks, Mr. and Mrs. Black Duck, and Beauty the Wood Duck and his family often came out of water. He had seen them on the shore many times. So it seemed to him strange that he never saw the Grebes on land.

One morning Dipper swam over close to where Peter was sitting. "Dipper," said Peter, "I have never seen you or Mrs. Grebe on the land."

Dipper chuckled. "You never will if I can help it," said he.

"Why?" demanded Peter.

Dipper's eyes twinkled. He didn't reply directly. Instead he said "Peter, I have never seen you in swimming."

"Huh!" exclaimed Peter. "You never will if I can help it."

"Why?" demanded Dipper, and his eyes twinkled more than ever.

"Because," replied Peter, "I don't like the water."

"And I don't like the land," replied Dipper.

"I can swim if I have to," continued Peter.

"Come on in; the water's fine!" retorted Dipper.

A sudden thought struck Peter. "Can you walk?" he demanded.

Dipper chuckled. "I don't suppose you would call it walking," said he. "I can get along after a fashion for a little way, but not for far, and it is more running than walking. To tell you the truth, Peter, we Grebes are almost helpless on land, so we never come on land, unless it is to sit on the very edge of the water."

"I don't see why you should be so helpless. I don't see why you should be any more helpless than the Ducks," said Peter.

Dipper rolled half over on his back

"Dipper," said Peter, "I have never seen you or Mrs. Grebe on the land" and held up a queer looking foot. It wasn't webbed like the foot of a Duck, but there were queer flaps or scallops of skin between the toes. "Look at that foot!" said Dipper. "Look at that leg! Have you ever seen a shorter one?"

Peter acknowledged that he never had.

"How could you expect anyone to walk with legs as short as mine and way back at the very end of my body? Those legs are meant for swimming and not for walking. No, sir, you don't get this bird on land if he can help it!" said Dipper. "I am a swimmer and a diver and the water is quite good enough for me. If there is anyone more at home on land in the water, I don't know who it is."

"I suppose you can fly!" said Peter

"If I could't fly, how could I have come here?" demanded Dipper. "Of course I can fly. But I don't do any more walking than I can help. Land and water is meant for a resting place for me. Give me the water and I'll leave the land and the air to others."

YOUR HEALTH

Why Golf, "Recuperating" and Curative.

By Frederick Bush, M. D. White Plains, N. Y.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

At the Burke Foundation's country recuperative institution we have, from the beginning, 14 years ago, made the play-cure predominant.

From the following description of methods and means employed in recreational therapy for convalescents and the allied substandard and health-border line conditions, the impression might be obtained of a too active and forced regime. But the 24-hour day under this system of treatment is actually occupied mainly with sleep, rest, quiet peace of mind and the esthetic factors. These elements alone, however, rarely will serve to carry these measurably depressed and disheartened persons far enough on up-road to

"It takes a lot of water to make a river," declared Dipper. "Of course I can fly. But I don't do any more flying than I can help. Land and water is meant for a resting place for me. Give me the water and I'll leave the land and the air to others."

Stories That Recall Others

A Light Eater

Prof. H. Steenbock, who has discovered a wonderful method for putting vitamins in all foods except salt and sugar, was criticizing a new scientific theory.

"I'm afraid," he said, "there isn't much to it. It reminds me of the boy in the natural history class.

"'What animal,' his teacher asked him, 'is satisfied with the least amount of nourishment?'

"'The moth,' the boy answered. 'It eats nothing but holes.'"

Not Guilty

Robert, five years old, came into the house with the seat of his play overalls torn away. His mother had forbidden him to climb trees, fences or anything else.

"Now Robert!" she scolded. "You have been climbing again! You've torn your pants while climbing!"

"No, Mamma, I didn't," said Robert.

"Robert! You certainly tore those pants climbing somewhere."

"Indeed and indeed I didn't, Mamma," pleaded Robert.

"How did you tear them then?"

"I tore 'em coming down!" sobbed Robert.

NEW LIGHT ON OVERWEIGHT

Not Caused By One Food Alone—Many Factors Must Be Considered

It is always interesting and important when sound scientific opinion explodes a popular theory. Recently we asked one of the most prominent scientific authorities on diet to make public his opinion about the cause of overweight. "Too many people today blame sweets for everything," he said "but I can tell you positively that overweight is not due to sweets alone.

"The simple truth is that some people gorge one foodstuff, others another. Men and women who are overweight have become so by the heavy oversating of starches, or sugar, or fats and oils.

"I am certain that I am right in saying that the average increase in overweight cannot be laid to the increasing intake of sugar or any other single food."

Perhaps the most valuable conclusion to be drawn from this famous man's remarks is that a balanced diet is most conducive to good health. Many foods that rightfully belong in such a diet will be more readily eaten if sugar is used to make them more appetizing.

Sugar brings out all the best flavors of cereals, fruits, vegetables and many beverages. It freshens and invigorates the appetite. Most foods are more delicious and nourishing with sugar. The Sugar Institute.

The ex-mayors present were S. Ashbel Crandall, Herbert M. Leroy, Judge Allyn L. Brown and Timothy C. Murphy.

Shortly after 7:30 o'clock the various companies arrived at the central station with their apparatus which was parked on either side of the station, ready to respond to any fire calls that might come in. Fortunately, there were no calls to mar the evening's programme.

About 8:30 o'clock all were seated at the long tables arranged in the hall on the top floor of the station. Before the meal was served America was sung, Thumm's orchestra accompanying. The menu follows:

Fruit Cocktail
Roast Turkey With Dressing
Mashed Turnips and Potatoes
Cranberry Sauce
Lettuce Salad Celery
French Rolls
Assorted Cake Country Club Ice Cream
Coffee Fruit Punch
Cigars and Cigarettes

Throughout the menu Frank R. Murdy, song leader, enlivened the occasion by calling on various tables and groups for songs. The mayors, past and present, responded to a call for Sweet Adeline, which was greeted with rousing cheers and applause. Then the members of the court of common council responded to a request number, My Wild Irish Rose. The various ensemble numbers were sung with enthusiasm.

In front of Chief Stanton was a beautiful basket of flowers, a gift from Arthur E. Story. At the conclusion of the menu, Mayor Robbins, toastmaster for the occasion, called the assemblage to order. "We all know the purpose of this gathering," said Mayor Robbins, "to give expression to a feeling we all have of respect to our chief, Howard L. Stanton. Mayor Robbins said that while on the way to the reception he recalled the fire department of 40 years ago. He spoke of the old time fire parades, and told several humorous stories of the fire department in the old days.

"I don't have to extoll the virtues of Chief Stanton," he said. "He is known outside the city, outside the state and throughout the country," he continued: "I have no doubt he is known beyond the borders of the country."

After referring to the Hopkins and Allen fire, Mayor Robbins said that the people woke up to the fact that it was necessary to get to fires before the fires consumed the buildings. The old volunteer department had to go. About this time Chief Stanton took hold of the situation and began to build up the department.

"Now there is the flash of a wagon, a squirt of chemical and the fire is out, almost as soon as it starts," said the mayor. Mayor Robbins said the city of Norwich owes a tremendous debt of gratitude to Chief Stanton.

At this point Mr. Murdy entertained with a vocal selection, Caroline, all joining in the chorus.

Letter From Former Chaplain

Judge Allyn L. Brown, a former mayor of the city, told of meeting Chief Kenyon of the New York fire department, while on a return trip from Europe in 1924. He said that Chief Kenyon told him that Chief Stanton compared with any chief in the country. "I don't care how large the city is," Judge Brown said Chief Kenyon told him. Judge Brown then read the following letter from Rev. Neilson Poe Carey, a former Norwich clergyman, now rector of St. John's church, Beverly Farms, Mass.

May 27th, 1929.

Mr. Toastmaster: officers and members of the Norwich fire department; Ladies and Gentlemen:

First may I express to you my deep appreciation of the kind invitation sent by Acting Chief Taft, to be present at this banquet given in honor of our beloved Chief Stanton and tell you how much I regret not being able to be with you to add my testimony to yours as you bear witness to our affection for him. Norwich has had in the past and is still happy in possessing a long list of citizens of high character and ability who have served and are serving their community ably and well, among them none stands higher than Chief Stanton.

I know from personal experience, how widely in other cities his up-to-date mastery of all the details of his profession is recognised. I well remember how often, in the conventions of the fire departments of Connecticut, his counsel in debate settled the question at issue. I recall how once when John Kenyon was chief of the New York city fire department, Chief Stanton and I spent a day in that city in his company, and afterwards Chief Kenyon said to me: "Howard Stanton is competent to head any department in this country." Norwich has indeed been fortunate to have had so great a leader at the head of its fire fighting forces.

But Norwich has been even more fortunate in numbering among its leading influential citizens, a man of Howard Stanton's character. A man of inflexible integrity, unrelenting industry, absolutely just and square and holding the highest ideals of public service. Public office has ever been to him a public trust and there is a verse in scripture which sums up his whole career: "He that would be chief among you, let him be as he that serveth."

Of my own personal admiration and affection for my dear friend, I dare not begin to speak. I should not know when to stop. The thought of his constant friendship though many years have separted us, brings to me memories which are among my dearest possessions.

All honor, love and gratitude to Howard Stanton, able executive, great citizen and loyal friend! Long and happily may he live and prosper!

Former Mayor Crandall

S. Ashbel Crandall of Wallingford, former mayor of the city, was then introduced. He was enthusiastically greeted with applause as all stood in his honor.

"Norwich in the past has raised men," said Mr. Crandall, "and I am happy to say she still is raising men, Acting Chief Taft," he continued. "I wish, from the bottom of my heart to thank you for inviting me to be present tonight. I go back many years and recall the old fire department of Norwich. I recall Chief Carrier and Chief Greenberg and I recall every fireman. It was mighty good times we had at our social gatherings. To recall the past is one of the greatest pleasures of my life."

Mr. Crandall then paid tribute to the memory of the fathers of Mayor Robbins and Judge Brown. "Brothers of the fire department, I call you brothers because I served 25 years as a member of the old Wauregan Steamer company, let us not forget those that lived. But, men of Norwich, take care of the living. Pay respect to the living. Encourage them by good work, encourage them with smiles and the Rose of New England will ever bloom."

Then, addressing Chief Stanton, after speaking of the chief's long and valuable service to the community, Mr. Crandall said, "It becomes my pleasure, in behalf of the fire department of good old Norwich, to present to you this token of gold, as a mark of love, honor and respect. Chief, God bless you; may you live long and may you have good health."

CHIEF HOWARD L. STANTON

Response by Chief Stanton

"I never can express my gratitude for the splendid entertainment you have put on here tonight for me," said Chief Stanton, in response. The chief, who retires July 1st, said that he has been connected with the fire department for over 60 years and that he has carried a key to a fire station since he was 14 years of age. He referred to the organization of the paid department, with three men, and spoke of the department's growth in the past 25 years. With reference to the present members of the fire department, Chief Stanton said: "I can take this bunch of men and tackle any fire. I am proud of this fire department," he said, "and I see no reason why it can't continue on. If there is anything I can do in the future I certainly will do it. You men never will know how gratifying it is to me to be with you tonight. This token I shall always keep.

"There isn't a city in this country that puts out fires with less water damage than Norwich. I know whereof I speak. I appreciate, boys, all you have ever done for me." In closing, Chief Stanton said: "I ask you boys to be just as true and faithful to those who are coming after me, as you have been to me." Hearty applause greeted Chief Stanton at the conclusion of his remarks and in addition he was given three rousing cheers.

Mr. Murdy again entertained with a vocal selection, and following a vote of thanks to him for his services, the gathering came to an end. Mrs. Berkoff catered.

B'NAI BRITH ENTERTAINMENT WITH SPLENDID PROGRAMME

Rose of New England lodge, No. 898 and the Ladies auxiliary, No. 49, Independent Order of B'Nai Brith, held their eighth annual dance and entertainment at the Wauregan hotel on Wednesday evening. The entertainment aroused great enthusiasm and interest among the members and their friends, as the proceeds were applied to defray the cost of furnishing the new B'Nai Brith home in Norwich. Generous contributions were made by the members, which covered the entire expense of the furnishings.

The attendance was highly gratifying, consisting of more than 200 B'Nai Brith members and friends, among whom were a number of out-of-town guests. The hall was tastefully decorated with streamers and festoons and the outstanding decoration was the wall facing the entrance to the ballroom, which was adorned by a large Star of David studded with red, white and blue electric lights, one large American flag and the B'Nai Brith banner with the emblem of the seven arm Menorah (candelabrum) symbolizing the seven cardinal precepts of the order: Light, justice, peace, benevolence, brotherly love and harmony.

An elaborate printed programme, with a frontpiece setting forth the aims and objects of the organization was distributed to the members and guests as they entered the hall. The Ideal Radio orchestra furnished the music and the entertainment was furnished by the Sammy Well Amusement agency of New Haven and the entertainers were the LaSalle sisters and Frankie Finn, the 13-year-old comedian. Mrs. Lillian DeKit Stephens of Boston also was one of the entertainers. The LaSalle sisters rendered several exhibition dances and new novelty toe dances and were warmly applauded. Miss Stephens, in a rich contralto voice gave several vocal selections and received generous applause. Frankie Finn very cleverly amused the gathering with comical songs and reading sketches. Frankie received great applause.

The dancers were refreshed with delicious fruit punch provided by the ladies of the auxiliary and during the intermission French ice cream was served to the entire gathering.

The committees in charge of the successful affair comprised:

Arrangements: Jacob W. Rabinovitch, general chairman, Mrs. Bettie H. Pasnik, associate chairman; program: Irving Eisenstein, chairman, Miss Sarah Hyman, Maurice W. FIVE NURSES GRADUATE AT STATE HOSPITAL SCHOOL

Graduation exercises for a class of five nurses from the training school of the Norwich state hospital were held Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in the amusement hall at the hospital which had been attractively decorated in the class colors and red and white with big baskets of red roses on the platform. Class Sunday was observed in the chapel of the hospital. The rose was the class flower and the class motto was "Prize."

Dr. H. S. Barnwell, the superintendent, presided and welcomed the large gathering of relatives and friends of the graduates, with the staff and other nurses in the hospital. After a selection by Swahn's orchestra and prayer by Rev. George Clark of Preston City Congregational church, two soprano solos were rendered in fine voice by Mrs. William Crowe, Jr. Her numbers were Youth and Spring (Steinel) and Tit for Tat (Poniatt). Mrs. W. H. Stebbins was accompanist.

The address to the graduates was delivered by Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., of the Central Baptist church, who spoke impressively of the service which the nurse renders and drew some parallels between the ministry and the nursing service.

After two more selections by Mrs. Crowe, who sang Because (D'Hardelot) and Thanks Be to God (Dickson), the diplomas were presented to the class by Judge John H. Barnes, with brief remarks in which he reminded the class that knowledge is power and advised them to seize all opportunities to increase their knowledge in their chosen profession.

While the orchestra played there was a reception for the members of the class who are Dorothy Elizabeth Rodman, Webster, Mass.; Irene Beatrice Bellinger, Providence, R. I.; Isabell Frances Clark, Pawtucket, R. I.; Alice Annie Heisard, Halifax, Nova Scotia; Yvette Marie Louise Guillet, Jewett City, Conn.

Dancing from 9.30 to 11.30 closed the programme.

ROTARY HAS PROGRAMME ARRANGED FOR JUNE

With thirty-eight members present the weekly meeting of the Norwich Rotary club was held Wednesday noon at the Wauregan hotel. President Edward W. Jewett presided and Eben Learned was the song-leader. Only matters of a routine nature were considered at the meeting. John A. Ferguson, in charge of the program for the month of June, announced his program as follows:

June 5—Report of Rotary convention by Secretary E. H. Davis. Songleader, Walter H. Pilcher.

June 12—Open. Songleader, Dr. Hugh E. Campbell.

June 19—Open. Songleader, Walter E. Turner.

June 26—Ashland Boys' band.

A telegram from Secretary Davis who is attending the convention of Rotary International at Dallas, Texas was read.

President Jewett introduced State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown as the the speaker of the day. Mr. Brown took as his topic, "Aims, Ideals and Purposes of Rotary." He said in part:

Are we measuring up to the ideals to which we have subscribed when we became Rotarians, asked Mr. Brown in opening his talk. No organization can live unless founded on sound principles. No more can individuals or nations survive unless they live and operate according to sound basic principles. History has shown that only those survive that were founded on true ideals and principles. When the majority of a nation's people forget to live by these principles the nation fades and dies.

The Rotary principles support all the principles of the constitution. We have one ideal in Rotary—Service—the basis of all worthy enterprise. We should look upon our vocation as something in which to serve humanity, not merely as a means of acquiring wealth and fortune. Another object is high ethical standards in business and professional life. This is rapidly coming about.

If members of any organization cannot take the principles of that organization outside the meetings with them and adapt them to their community life it is no good. Subscription to any creed or principle does not make him a man unless he practices them in good faith. Also we must have understanding of our fellowman. We must have his view point. A judge in the police court cannot render complete justice toward the man arrested for intoxication unless he himself has been drunk and had the mental agonies and viewpoint of a man in that condition.

A true Rotarian in my opinion is a man who can look upon the majesty of nature and at the same time realize his own littleness and shortcomings. He is a man who can see beauty and good in even the most sordid things, a man who carries a sword of service in his hand and a song on his lips. He is a man who understands his fellows and lives according to the principles of his belief.

Mr. Brown was accorded a hearty vote of appreciation for his talk.

NORWICH INN PLANS ARE NEARLY COMPLETE

William G. Park and Joseph C. Worth, president and vice president of the Norwich Inn company, were in New York on Tuesday and called on the Consolidated Hotel corporation and found that the plans and specifications were nearly completed. At a meeting of the directors of the Norwich Inn company held Wednesday afternoon they reported that plans and specifications would be received some time next week. They also learned that arrangements have been made in Pittsfield, Mass. for the erection of a similar inn by the same organization. This hotel is to be called the Longfellow inn and will have 212 rooms and is to be run in the chain of Treadway inns. The Hotel corporation were as enthusiastic about this new project as they are in regard to the Norwich inn.

At the meeting held Wednesday afternoon the directors approved the layout of the new roadway to the clubhouse and inn as submitted by Chandler & Palmer. This roadway leaves West Thames street at the summit of the hill, so that in coming out of the driveway a view can be easily obtained both toward Norwich and toward New London for any approaching vehicles.

Work is to be started immediately upon this driveway leading to the present club house, so that club members will use this entrance to the club house instead of the one which is used at present, the use of which will be interfered with by the construction of the building.

COMFORT CIRCLE PLANS FOR THE ANNUAL OUTING

A meeting of Comfort Circle of the King's Daughters was held Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Charles F. Sturtevant, 484 Laurel Hill avenue, with an attendance of twelve. The leader, Mrs. William H. Geer, conducted the devotional period, also the brief business session. Plans were discussed for the annual outing of the circle. Following the meeting Mrs. Sturtevant served ice cream and cake.

C. J. DOWNES ASSURED SON TO SUCCEED HIM

Joseph B. Downes has succeeded his father, the late Cornelius J. Downes, as the democratic party's registrar of voters.

Mr. Downes made it certain that his son should succeed him, it has been learned, as on the first day on which he was taken seriously sick he exercised his authority to appoint a deputy registrar, naming his son for this office and filing the appointment with Town Clerk Harold E. Burt. Upon the death of his father, Joseph Downes as deputy registrar automatically became registrar and will hold that office until the next election date. He has qualified and is now regularly fulfilling the duties of the office.

HILL STREET CASES BEFORE CITY COURT

Found guilty of violation of the liquor laws, James Cirves, 57, and James St. Germaine, both of No. 7 Hill street, were fined and sentenced to jail, one sentence suspended, when they were presented in city court Tuesday morning. Cirves received a fine of $200 and costs and a jail sentence of 20 days, while St. Germaine was fined $200 and costs and was given a 30 days suspended jail sentence. Attorney Thomas M. Shields, counsel for the accused, entered a demurrer to the charges, but it was overruled. St. Germaine was found guilty of keeping liquor with intent to sell and Cirves on two actual counts. A quantity of liquor was found in their place following a raid by state and local police about a week ago.

Miss Cora M. Disco in California

The many friends of Miss Cora Disco, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Disco of Broadway, will be pleased to learn of Miss Disco's new position. Miss Disco left a few weeks ago with a party from Hartford for Chico, California. She has since accepted a position as head floor nurse in one of the Chico hospitals. Miss Disco expects to remain in California for some time.

WILL DISTRIBUTE FLOWERS IN THE CEMETERIES

The school children of the town brought quantities of flowers to the Buckingham Memorial Wednesday afternoon to be used in the decoration of the Civil War Veterans' graves in the cemeteries. These will be distributed at the different cemeteries by Mr. Le Turner, caretaker at the Memorial, who will start out at 5 o'clock this (Thursday) morning with a motor truck in order to complete the rounds.

Louis Morey, of Kansas City, is an expert folder of parachutes, but has never made a jump.

ACADEMY AND HARDING CONTEST FOR STATE TITLE AT CAMPUS HERE TODAY

Probable Lineups Today

N. F. A.	Warren Harding
Arico, 1b	1b, Schrieber
Gibbs, ss	lf, Graham
Cummings, 3b	cf, Choiko
LaCroix, 2b	s, Lukachik
Fagan, cf	p, Dizenzo
Tombart, lf	rf, Contondella
Fontaine, p	ss, Kane
Marks, rf	2b, Carroll
Weisgraber, p	2b, Chonda

Once again the state high school baseball championship comes to the Academy campus for a solution today when the undefeated Academy team, defending title-holders, tackles Warren Harding high of Bridgeport, without a doubt the "Wildcats" strongest rival against them this season. The Academy has won 16 straight games this year and is the only undefeated high school club in Connecticut while Harding has won 15 games and lost one. No two teams in the Nutmeg state are better fitted to fight it out for the title.

Weisgraber vs. Dizenzo

Butsy Weisgraber, Academy ace who has had a wonderful season in his first season as an Academy regular, is Coach Brigham's choice to defend the colors against the powerful Park City crew. Butsy has turned in some excellent bits of hurling this campaign, starting with some relief work in the first Chapman Tech game and hurling in most of the games since. Against Butsy will be pitted the brilliant Mexican, Dizenzo, who is rated as the leading high school twirler in the western part of the state and who has bested Walter Linder of Deep River this year.

Both teams are hard-hitting outfits. Harding has blasted its way to victory in the majority of its games by one-sided scores and, playing behind the twirling of Dizenzo, has been a tough nut to crack. The Academy will present eight .300 hitters for Mr. Dizenzo to shoot at, everyone in the starting line-up but the pitcher hitting in the charmed circle. Buck LaCroix and Hal Cummings are hitting over .400 while Anso Tombari is the team's home-run hitter, with three to his credit to date. He is leading the E. Conn. league in this respect.

The game will start at 3 o'clock and the umpires will be Hank Morin at the plate and Johnny Murphy on the bases. The field is expected to be in first-class shape and final touches will be applied this morning.

Banner Crowd Promised

A crowd of record-breaking proportions is expected for the clash. This is the first time that the Academy has come to this important game undefeated and all the royal rooters, including the "third base gang" is just aching for the cry "Play Ball" to watch the "Fighting Wildcats" go after their seventeenth straight win. Coach Jack Mean, who has seen his Harding teams with Dizenzo in the box go down to defeat before the Academy on the two previous meetings, in 1927, by 4 to 3, and in 1928, by 3 to 0, is highly enthusiastic over his team's chances this year, being positive that there will be no three straight.

CARDS TRAMPLE LOWLY REDS IN THE DUST

ST. LOUIS, May 29.—(AP)—Hal Haid and Sylvester Johnson, relief pitchers, hurled the St. Louis Cardinals to a double victory over the Cincinnati Reds today, 4 to 3, and 6 to 2, thus breaking a four-game losing streak.

Haid pitched seven innings in the first game without allowing a hit and then allowed a double and three singles in the eighth to account for the Reds' three runs. The Cards also were held to four hits by Pete Donohue, three of them safeties were by Chick Hafey, including a triple and a home run, the latter with one on. Andy High was stopped after hitting in 16 consecutive games.

The number of hits was evenly divided again in the second game with eight each, but Johnson kept those off him more scattered. Hafey again hit for the circuit with one on. Douthit and Purdy also got home runs. Scores:

LINDSTROM'S HOMER ONLY RUN SCORED AGAINST ROBINS

NEW YORK, May 29. —(AP)— The Robins evened their series with the Giants and at the same time snapped the clan McGraw's winning streak of six straight by defeating New York, 4 to 1, at the Polo grounds today in the second game of the series. The only Giant run was scored on Fred Lindstrom's homer in the fifth after Brooklyn had slugged Larry Benton for all of its markers.

Clise Dudley opposed Benton, winning his second decision over the New York star within a week. Dudley allowed the Giants only three safeties. Brooklyn gained its ultimate margin by bunching five hits against Benton in the fifth. Dutch Henry and Jack Scott followed the sorrel top into the box.

Harvey Hendrick, hard-hitting Brooklyn first baseman, hit safely in his 24th consecutive game. Score:

EARNSHAW PITCHES ATHLETICS TO EASY WIN OVER RED SOX

BOSTON, May 29.— (AP) — George Earnshaw's pitching set the Athletics back in the winning track today, and the Philadelphia team gained a 7 to 1 victory over the Red Sox. Earnshaw allowed only six hits. The visitors' hits off MacFayden were not numerous but were timely.

In the fifth inning, with two out, Simmons blasted a homer over the left field wall. Hale then singled and Foxx duplicated Simmons' feat. In the third, MacFayden filled the bases by hitting two men and walking one. This set the stage for Cochrane's single which scored two runs. Foxx got three hits for a total of seven bases.

Sue Says

Today is Memorial Day.

What does it mean to you? Is it just another holiday or has it a deeper significance for you?

Is it going to be a day merry-making or are you going to stop and consider that it is a day set apart for reverencing those who have gone on that we might enjoy our freedom?

I'm afraid that I had become one of those who had lost sight of the significance of the day until about a week ago when I went out with the young man who took pictures of the boys of '61.

Believe me, I did not meet many of those boys before I began to think that all the homage and tribute man can pay to them is still too small a way to show our appreciation of what they have done.

Those boys went through hell to show these United States that one state is not mightier than another. And through their sacrifices and their blood spilled on the field of battle these United States were born again.

There's just a small remnant of that glorious Army of the Republic left and each year the ranks are thinned as one by one they answer that last roll call. But are they afraid? Not they. They'll answer that call with head erect and eyes smiling the same as they answered that other call in '61.

Talk with them for a few minutes and then mention the war. See their bent shoulders straighten, their age-dimmed eyes sparkle as years roll away from their shoulders and they are young once more. Honest, folks, it's a wonderful thrill.

It's 68 years since those boys went out as mere youths to fight for the preservation of the Union. It's been a long time and the years have treated some very kindly while others have not been so fortunate.

Of those eleven left one is almost totally blind yet really he was one of the most cheerful men it has been my good fortune to talk with. Was he down-hearted over his plight? Not a bit. He speaks every year at the schools in the city and what he tells the youngsters is well worth hearing.

I asked every one of them if they were going to be in the parade today and their answers were identical. It was "You bet".

Of course there are the veterans of the later wars that we must not forget, but they are young and we will have them with us many more years. But not so with the boys of '61.

It's their day today. So, folks, when those 90 year old boys pass you in parade just raise your hat and applaud them just to show you appreciate what they have done.

Today we pay honor to those that are with us and tribute to the memory of those who have gone on before. Don't let the entire day be one of merry-making but take time to consider the sacrifices of those who have given their all in the defense of this country of ours.

COLLINS PITCHES BRILLIANTLY AFTER THE FIRST INNING

PHILADELPHIA, May 29.—(AP) — Phil Collins pitched the Phillies to their fourth successive victory over the Boston Braves this afternoon 12-2. This is the first time in more than two years that the Phillies have won as many as four games in a row. Collins was wobbly in the first inning when he walked Maranville and Lance. Richbourg hit a home run over the right field wall. Art Delaney, who started for Boston, was tagged for a pair of runs in the second and third inning and was driven from the box in the fourth inning when six Phillies scored.

TORONTO, Ont., May 29—(AP)—Entries of 37 swimmers from the United States—two women and thirty-five men have been received for the fourth Wrigley marathon swim to be held here in September, it was announced today. They include:—

Charles E. Guy, Methuen, Mass.; Wilfred White, Central Falls, R. I.; Frank Layhe, East Boston, Mass.; Frank Bardon, Chicopee Falls, Mass.; Arthur Ross, Boston, Mass.; Carlton W. Adler, Boston, Mass.

Women's section: Frances Vi: nt, East Boston, Mass.; Sadie Schwartz, Philadelphia, Pa.

Phil Pardee Out of Race.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 29—(AP)—Phil Pardee, of Los Angeles, who qualified the car originally prepared for Ralph De Palma in 23rd position for Thursday's 500-mile race, was definitely put out of the race tonight when he hit the wall on the northwest turn of the track while practicing.

Jardee, slightly injured, was taken to the City hospital.

MANY NOTED RUNNERS WILL COMPETE IN DUWELL RACE THIS AFTERNOON

A pack of over 123 athletes, including two members of the 1928 American Olympic team, Clarence DeMar, veteran Melrose printer and Whitey Michelsen of the Millrose A. C. of New York, a number of national, state and community champs and a flock of ex-champions are expected to answer the starter's gun for the fourth annual Duwell 10 mile road race this afternoon at 3 o'clock (D. S. T.). Never in the history of Connecticut distance running has a field as large or as classy as the one entered for this year's race gone to the post.

Although the largest portion of the local interest will be centered around De Mar, seven-time winner of the Boston marathon who without a doubt is the greatest runner the country has ever produced, the Melrose entrant is not expected to win the race. Unless some dark horse springs suddenly from obscurity, the probable winners will be

Whoever wins the race, one thing is almost certain, the old course record of 55 minutes and 8 seconds is sure to topple. It wouldn't be the least bit surprising if the winner gets in in less than 54 minutes. A fast pace will be set with the sun and it will be but a matter of a few seconds between the winner and runner up.

The race for the team prize will in all probability narrow down to the Millrose, Dorchester A. C., Brooklyn Harriers or St. Joseph's club though there are 34 clubs represented. Each of the mentioned clubs has at least five men entered, the Dorchester and St. Joseph teams comprising 14 and 12 members, respectively. Other teams who might upset the proverbial dope are Good Shepherd of N. Y., Storrs college team, Hope A. C. of Westerly, Board of Recreation of South Manchester, and who knows but probably our own Duwell team.

The colors of the local organization, sponsors of the classic, will be carried by Thomas Haggerty, No. 2; John Boldrighine, No. 50; Frederick Van Buren, No. 81; Edmund Congdon, No. 19; Edward Antoflan, No. 38; Oliver Gadue, No. 117; Arthur Rollband, No. 78 and John Kane, No. 107.

As has been previously mentioned the race will start on East Main street near the entrance of the Duwell field, continue twice over the old five mile course and finish in front of the judges stand near the Duwell clubhouse. On the stand will be seated the race officials and also the officials of the city and town governments.

Immediately after the race the runners and athletes will go to the Odd Fellows hall where they will be tendered a banquet together with a program of entertainment. At the banquet there will be some speaking and also the awarding of prizes. An effort is to be made to have the activities over by 7 o'clock so that all of the athletes may get started for their places of residence in good time.

The prizes in their respective order are as follows:

First, City of Norwich trophy; 2nd, Town of Norwich cup; 3rd, Duwell cup; 4th, Elks' trophy; 5th, Ferguson cup; 6th, Bulletin cup; 7th, Woodward and Beckwith cup; 8th, Ancient Order of Hibernian cup; 9th, K. of C. cup; 10th, Sons of Hermann cup; 11th, Bliss cup; 12th, Foresters' trophy; 13th, Veterans of Foreign Wars cup; 14th, Grotto trophy; 15th, Odd Fellows' cup.

To the next 13 men to place will be awarded bronze medals and to the team finishing the first five men a special team trophy.

The individual members of the winning team will also receive prizes and the first Duwell members to place will be awarded the following trophies: 1st, Knights of Pythias cup; 2nd, American Legion medal; 3rd, Polish-Citizens club trophy.

Officials and committees in charge of the race are as follows:

He has run in 35 races and placed first in 27, never finishing poorer than eleventh place.

SENATORS TURN BACK YANKS IN HARD CONTEST

WASHINGTON, May 29.—(AP)—The offense of the Washington Nationals came to life with a bang today and New York was beaten in the second game of the series, 8 to 3.

Pipgras was batted from the box in the third inning and Sherrid also was hit hard. Marberry went the route for the Nationals, although Gehrig got his eleventh home run of the year.

Gehrig's homer placed him two ahead of Ruth for the American league leadership, and sent him into a tie with Melvin Ott of the Giants for the major league title. The defeat dropped the Yankees to a position five and one-half games behind the Athletics, who defeated Boston, 7 to 1.

PRE-HOLIDAY LIQUIDATION CAUSED BREAK IN RALLY IN THE STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, May 29—(AP)—Although credit was appreciably easier today, trading on the stock market turned at the slowest pace since mid-April, and efforts to continue yesterday's rally were thwarted by pre-holiday liquidation and a bear drive in the agricultural equipment issues. Total sales fell below 3,000,000 shares.

The credit situation was regarded as somewhat less ominous as it is estimated that the market value of listed stocks has shrunk some $8,000,000,000 since the first of the month, which has probably released enough funds to help the money market through June. The month's requirements for interest, dividends, tax payments and new financing are estimated at around $2,500,000,000, however, and a tight pinch for funds is regarded as unavoidable, barring an extremely unlikely change of front by the federal reserve.

Call money was in ample supply to meet the requirements of today's quiet market and the official rate held at 6 per cent. for the fifth successive session, although it was shaded to 5 in the outside market. Time money rates, which have been mounting since early in the month, turned downward, with 60-90 maturities loaning at 6 3-4 to 6 per cent. as compared to 9 1-4 yesterday.

Although holiday requirements failed to lighten the money market today, contrary to rather general expectations, bankers whose predictions of higher money have thus far failed to materialize this week, confidently forecast higher rates by Friday, or early next week. Month end interest and dividend requirements are estimated at more than $400,000,000.

The directors of the New York federal reserve bank met today, because of the holiday tomorrow, and the reserve board met in Washington, but no change in the rebate rate was announced, and Wall Street was inclined to the belief that the reserve authorities would be satisfied for the time being with the release of funds during the recent liquidation. The broker's loan figures will be given out after the close Friday.

The day's news was favorable, particularly the weekly stee, trade reviews. Iron Age said there was still no evidence of a general seasonal decline, although automobile demand slackened somewhat. President Grace of Bethlehem Steel said second quarter earnings should equal the results of the first quarter which set a new peacetime record. A substantial reduction of crude oil production was ordered in California.

The drive on the farm equipment issues was particularly successful in view of the reduced purchasing power resulting from the share break in wheat. Advance Rumely issues dropped about 16 and 19 points, the common to 31, and the preferred to 40 1-4. As contrasted to record prices earlier in the year of 104 7-8 and 119, International Harvester suffered an extreme loss of about 7 points, and Oliver Farm Equipment sagged to a new low. Case Threshing sold up several points, then dropped to 103, off 7 1-2 points.

The rails were again well supported, the reasoning being further excellent April earnings reports, and the favorable showing of the weekly car loading report. Atchison mounted to a record price at 220 7-8, but ran into profit-taking and closed at 215 1-4, off about 3 points net. Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Union Pacific and Norfolk and Western made wide gains although they were not fully maintained. The last named reached a new high at 212.

Some of the utilities were well bought. American Water Works reached a record price at 103 1-2 on unconfirmed rumors that it may be made the center of a new alignment of utility companies. Commonwealth Power sold up 14 points to a record price at 183 1-2 on announcement of the officers of the new Commonwealth & Southern Corp. showing a definite alignment with Electric Bond and Share and American Superpower, and rumors of favorable exchange offer for stock of the new company.

Aviation stocks on the other hand were markedly weak, which was attributed to disapointment over postponement of projected trans-Atlantic flights, which were expected to revive interest in these stocks. Curtiss and Wright each dropped about 7 points, the latter to a new 1929 low.

Chrysler was again under pressure, reaching a new low at 68 7-8. Superior Steel dropped 12 points to near its low of the year, and American Encaustic Tiling, Michigan Steel, and Westvaco Chlorine tumbled 4 to 11 points to new lows. Radio and General Electric lost about 2 points each.

A favorable development in the commodity markets was a checking of the decline in wheat which held steady on a bullish weather report and improved export demand. Cotton futures turned rather heavy in pre-holiday selling.

Foreign exchanges were firm, both sterling and marks showing definite improvement. The Spanish peseta, however, slipped to another 1929 low.

POETRY

A monument here towers
The trees surrounded with clematis,
And early, bright and red,
Here were your bodies of great brave
Put to rest.
And nurtured crosses mark the graves,
Here where they dotted sleep.

Eight thousand fifth and sixth Marines
Fought here and saved the day;
Three fourths and more here for the fine
Of freedom gave up their lives;
But they died, and they who lived,
Unremitting, cleared the way.

Surrounded by machine-gun nests
With rifle-butts their graves
The shrinking foe saw the fray,
With wolf-like fangs of brave
All but the dead dismayed and fazed,
Took flight within the grove.

That day, the mighty tide of war
Was dammed by one small band;
The wave of death was turned back toward
The Rhine and Valerhalla
And Paris, France, Democracy
Revived at their brave stand.

Chateau Thierry, Marne, Argonne,
And San Mihiel, all gave
Their living holocausts to a cause
They lost their lives to save;
But the dead who fledged the German flight
Lie buried in the woodland grave.

The fame of the Fifth and Sixth Marines
Around the world will rage,
And their glorious fight for the U. S. A.
A glow of pride will bring
Of Callan's, Neville's, glorious Seabs
America will sing.
—From Marie Tello Phillips' "Book of Verses."

Old Ironsides

A hundred mightier battleships
Of steel from side to side
Have struck their flag to Captain Time
And vanished on the tide.
Their marvellous machines outworn,
Their batteries out of date,
The newness of their day was gone—
They went the way of fate.

But thou, our wooden Ark of Hope,
Bold frigate of the free,
Art still upon the flood afloat,
A veteran of the sea.
For loyal hands have braced thy knees
And healed thy battle-scars;
The ensign at thy peak is bright
With eight-and-forty stars.

What keeps thee up and bears thee on,
Thou ship of olden fame?
The memory of the victories won,
The meaning of thy name!
And while America keeps faith
With fathers and with sons,
No storm can sink thy heritage of state,
Nor twice ten thousand guns.
—Henry van Dyke in Scribner's.

Mother—Jimmie, I told you not to have anything more to do with those neighbor boys. They're bad boys for you to play with.

Son—Yes, mummy. But their mother said I was a good boy for them to play with.—Pathfinder.

"You're not always troubled with poor lights, are you?" said the company's inspector.

"Oh, no," said the patient customer.

"Ah ha, I thought so. It's only at certain times, eh?"

"Yes. Only after dark."—B. H. Meanjee.

"Pop, I'm saving up for a bicycle" said the boy hopefully.

"Fine; glad to hear it. How much you got so far?"

"Well, not much so far," was the mournful reply; "only the two dollars I got for your golf clubs."—Brooklyn Eagle.

CRANDALL & SHEEHAN WON'T RUN POWER FERRY, NEW LONDON-GROTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 29—Capt. George W. Crandall and David Sheehan will not run a power boat between New London and Groton tomorrow as they had arranged to do, to accommodate residents of the two towns. They are prevented from carrying out their intentions by a vote taken by the city council this evening on motion of Councilor Chappell because officers Crandall and Sheehan have not received permission to operate the boat from the city council of New London though Capt. Crandall has announced that City Manager Holt granted the desired right to operate the boat, a craft with a capacity for about seventy persons and with a speed that will enable the craft to go from landing to landing in about two minutes and a half.

It is understood that objection to granting the privilege came from the Groton and Stonington trolley company, which has a franchise to operate trolley cars the length of its line—New London to Stonington and through the town of Groton. The operation of the ferry line would take patronage from the trolley company and that, the Groton and Stonington company represents, is detrimental to the trolley company and failure to protect the franchise granted by the state. The franchise for the ferry is vested in the city of New London, but the council must dispose of it by lease before it can become valid in this case.

In engine room No. 1 Welland was engaged in his duties when there was a flareback from the second boiler. Welland received the full force of the flare. The Cassin is in command of Lieut. Commander William Darby and carries a crew of 84 men. The craft is an oil-burner.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

"Gangwar" the FBO special which will be shown Friday and Saturday at the Breed theatre, is one of the few underworld pictures that seem to actually catch the real spirit of the underworld. Olive Borden as the dance hall heroine and Jack Pickford as her saxaphone playing lover are in graceful contrast to the rough and ready acting of Eddie Gribbon as the bandit chief.

No expense has been spared to make the thrill scenes as realistic as possible, and they are said to be some of the finest shots ever screened.

Palace Theatre

Three big photoplay events rolled into one are scheduled for next week's most important film entertainment in this city, and anticipation is at fever heat. Never has the theatre-going public seemed so eager to see and to hear and to appraise the ultra-modern achievement promised by America's foremost motion picture star in her newest film.

Mary Pickford, so long a silent heroine on the screen, has her premiere in the all-dialogue "Coquette" at the Palace theatre beginning Sunday.

In this production "America's Sweetheart" offers a triply radical advance in her art. She speaks her lines. She plays a witching contemporary flapper role with alluring bobbed hair. She plays an up-to-date Broadway drama in which a great social ordeal vies with the traditional Pickford sweetness and night, and in which significant heart-wrenching realism tests the very soul of the Pickford genius.

With her adaptation of the Broadway stage success, "Coquette," as her current vehicle, Mary Pickford signalizes the first entry of an ace film celebrity into the new field of the all-spoken celluloid entertainment. Equipped for this pioneering by talent already demonstrated in a long career of "silent screen" triumphs, and by her early experience on the spoken stage, the star is said to bring with her the gift of the perfect voice for theatre amplification. This is announced as the verdict of all critics favored with a formal preview and pre-audition of the picture. It is a dual endowment of nature's riches with which this brilliant woman has been favored in her remarkable career. And from a broader viewpoint her venture is seen as a great turning point in the history of motion pictures, which are due to enter a tremendous upheaval if the unqualified success of Mary Pickford in "Coquette" is confirmed.

"Coquette" is the stage play produced by Jed Harris over a period longer than a year in New York.

Other features on this opening program are Garland Rice's famous "Sportlight," all in sound, Pathe News all the world events in scene and sound and Pathe Review a magazine of current events in sound. You cannot afford to miss this all sound program.

Broadway Theatre

Morton Downey, Broadway's most famous tenor, sings several of his popular songs in the Pathe all-dialogue picture production, "Mother's Boy," which will be on view at the Broadway theatre for three days beginning on Memorial Day. The theme song which he sings with splendid effect at the bedside of his supposedly dying mother is "I'll Always Be Mother's Boy," and there were few dry eyes among the watchers during the filming of the scene at the Pathe sound studio in New York.

Another popular song rendered by Mr. Downey in the fashionable cabaret scene in the picture is "The World is Yours and Mine." In his love scene with Helen Chandler, who plays opposite him, he sings with fine expression, "There'll be You and I."

Other airs heard in the production are "I'm Funny That Way" and "Good Little Bad Little You." These are sung by Mildred Hunt, a noted radio singer, in the cabaret scene. The story of "Mother's Boy" deals with cabaret and tenement life in New York. It is packed with drama, action, thrills and laughs. Mr. Downey is a delicatessen store clerk who attains his ambition after enduring many setbacks, of becoming the most famous of Broadway tenors. The cast comprises many well known stage players, chief among them besides those mentioned are, Barbara Bennett, John T. Doyle, Osgood Perkins, Lorin Raker, Jennie Moskowitz and Jacob Frank.

PRIZES FOR ART WORK ANNOUNCED AT ACADEMY ART EXHIBITION

The fortieth annual exhibition of the work of the students of the Norwich Art school and of the Norwich Free Academy opened Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Converse Art gallery. The exhibition will be open to the public on Memorial day, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday afternoons from 3 to 5 o'clock, d. s. t.

The exhibition opened with a reception for the students and their friends. The school was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Henry A. Tirrell, Mrs. Shepard B. Palmer, Miss Nancy Lucas, Mrs. Allyn Brown and Mrs. Wallace Allis. Students acted as guides through the buildings and to the collections in the museum.

There have been nine-nine students registered in the Art school during the year and 175 Academy students have received instruction. The courses of work have been planned to give the young people not only an appreciation of beauty but an understanding that will help them in creating a standard.

The main part of the exhibition is assembled in the Converse Art gallery. The work of Miss Leavens' history of art classes is hung in her class room on the third floor of the Slater building. The work shown is interesting and varied and ranging from that of the youngest member, Catherine Mitchell of the children's class, to the professional work of Miss Loring and Miss Trumbull.

Miss Loring has been teaching design to Academy classes this year, and has also been filling orders for jewelry. The pieces on exhibition are strong in treatment and fine in workmanship, beautiful in design and material. Miss Harriet R. Trumbull exhibits a large garden vase in grey blue matt. Loveliness of form and color characterize Miss Trumbull's work.

With the growth of the school, it is not practicable to show problems from all the departments equally. The work of the Academy students and of the Art school afternoon classes in metalry and pottery is given emphasis.

From the Academy classes in design there are grouped some 20 to 35 specimens of the same problem. The interest in this grouping lies in the variety and individuality that are found in class work. Each of the students has worked from the same assignment.

From the first year students are hung designs for textiles, color charts, repeating square patterns, and rectangular and circular rug patterns.

From the second year students are exercises in space filling and in pattern construction. Varied work is shown from the upper classes.

In the junior exhibit, the work of Eleanor Dart, Marie Woods, Mary Kerr, Barbara Taylor Marie Spicer, and Rose Schatz, discloses promise and is rich in color.

Of the second year students Constance Constandi, Benjamin Shanley, M. Chapman, A. Morin, W. Hussey are exhibiting, and of the older students, Minnie Schatz, Leonora Zundell, Germania Kocay and Margaret Ray, Helen Jeter, Evelyn Eccleston and Thelma Meister.

Jewelry and Pottery

The work of the pottery and jewelry departments discloses vitality and concentration. In jewelry, the influence of the old masters is felt in combination with the craftsman's present day interest. In pottery, brilliant and subdued colors are alike used effectively. Pieces are hand thrown, coil built, and cast. A breakfast set of over one hundred pieces, in periwinkle blue and turquoise, by Mrs. John P. Huntington, is a notable achievement. A library lamp by Mrs. Wallace Allis is original and attractive. Mrs. Allis discloses expert handling of clay and glaze in her work. Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Coyle, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Browning, Miss Elizabeth Huntington, Miss Lucas and Miss Talcott exhibit pieces full of color and charm. The work of William Robbins, a junior, deserves scrutiny. Whether wheel thrown from original drawings, or hand-built from classic shapes, his pieces are unusual in form and color, and in so young a student disclose a gift. His training in wheel throwing began when he was a member of the children's class.

The special class in jewelry of beginners has shown marked aptitude. Mrs. Allyn L. Brown has made a copy of a seventeenth century Russian cross, and a brooch of fine gold in the form of a basket of flowers. Mrs. Brown has used pearls, precious and semi-precious stones most effectively in this original design. Miss Hersey's bracelet, set with amazonite is also original, as is the very charming fine gold ring set with topax and pearls. Mrs. Payson, Miss Jeter and Miss Ray exhibit in this group. Pieces from the advanced student's work in metalry are shown by Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Sudlow, Miss Ufford, Mrs. Knupp, Miss Blackstone, Miss Eccleston and Miss Munz.

Outstanding pieces by Norman Smith are a hand carved ring, a brooch adapted from the Chinese, a topax and pearl ring, and a copy of a colonial porringer.

A necklace by Mrs. Sudlow, has its interest centered by a large cabachon sapphire. A pewter trivet by Miss Ufford shows excellence in design and rendering. The work of Miss Helen Munz shows much originality in design and a varied interest in decorative elements.

This year's exhibition demonstrates the value of continued effort in a chosen craft. The technique gained by students who have returned to the courses two or three years is striking, its technical qualities lend much to the finished problem.

Carved rings, copper and brass boxes, pewter trivets and bowls are exhibited by Ralph Smith, Lloyd Potter, John Marks, J. J. Kendall and Benjamin Shanley. Miss Edith Wheeler, Miss Helena Crandall, Miss Mary Shaver, and Miss Barbara Taylor, have been particularly interested in making effective ornaments.

Drawing

The drawing of the junior and lower middle classes is well represented in the exhibition. There is work by Eleanor Moore, Leona Giguire, Lois Gill, Ruth Gamber, Eleanor Dart, and Nellie Goldblatt.

Particularly good work has been done by Eleanor Moore, whose feeling for color is apparent. Minnie Schatz, Rosaline Cooke, Ruth Gamber, and Olive Rathbun show good drawing and free brush painting.

Portrait Class.

In the portrait class the work of Mrs. Howe's pupils is remarkable as work of Academy students. Annie Miller exhibits several excellent portrait sketches in pastel, and the studies by Gertrude Church have breadth and charm. Dan O'Neil's color is brilliant; he discloses a feeling for rythmic line. Annie Iller's quick sketches, done under the instruction of Miss Triplett, are emphatic in line and action.

Composition.

The work of the composition class under the direction of Mrs. Howe has an appeal. There is good work by Anit Miller, Gertrude Church and Dan O'Neil of the Art school and of Margaret Ray and of Edith Tyler. The slater settings by Helen Jeter and Vera Bushnell are a new feature.

A Unique Exhibitor.

Michele Gurreri, of northern Sicily, who came to the school from Middletown in the autumn of 1928, occupies a place by himself. As a child of Italy he cut intaglios in sandstone and modeled in clay the Saints and Holy Family for the Christmas Creche. He has always desired to be a sculptor. Since coming to Norwich he has worked for countrymen outside the hours that he has spent in the art school. He has done work not only from the model, and has has made portrait studies in clay of the students but has modeled and carved many original and arresting pieces. Michele is now 16 years old.

History of Art.

The work of Iss Leavens' classes in history and appreciation of art is always of great interest. The first year students show note book pages in color and pencil illustrating their course in Egyptian art. Greek sculpture, and Italian painting and sculpture. The collection of casts, photographs and colored prints in Slater museum are available for this work. In the students' notes special attention has been paid to the lettering and to the page arrangement. The work is exceptional.

The second year students continue the course in Italian painting, and follow this course by a study of architectural styles. A group of small models made in ivory soap illustrate the course. Of special interest are a bas-relief of Byzantine ornament, and a Gothic figure by Miss Aileen Niemenen. Miss Larned Ely shows a model of the Arch of Titus, Miss Annie Miller a portion of the Taj Mahal, Miss Gertrude Church the Facade of an Ionic temple, iss Olive Rathbun a Byzantine capital, and Miss Germania Kocay a Romanesque capital.

On the screens the pencil work of Miss Annie Miller and the color sketches of Miss Olive Rathbun deserve special mention, also the sheets beautifully lettered by Margaret Ray.

Children Classes.

The children's classes have been taught by Mrs. Howe drawing, (first semester). Miss Triplett, drawing (second semester), Miss Blanche Wilber, design, Miss Trumbull, pottery and Norman Smith metalry. Miss Ray and Miss Jeter have assisted.

In design, decorative ship panels have been worked out in charcoal and water color. Panels selected for display are by Alice Barnes, Mary Ellen Mero, Priscilla Hough, Barbara Fellows, and Marjorie McNally. Designs by Weston Pullen, Priscilla Hough, Alice Barnes, Mary Counihan, show originality and charm. Compositions are by Barbara Main, Jeanne France Boisson, Edward Manning and Elliott Lane. Barbara Binns, Geraldine Waldo and Ruth Prentice, of the "C" division show successful use of cut paper in flower design.

The masks rendered in brilliant tempera, were suggested by models in the Indian exhibition. Those by Nancie Greenman, Alice Barnes and Weston Pullen are grotesque and good. Original borders, include work by the youngest pupils in the classes. Elliott Payson, Catherine Mitchell, and Barbara Binns. In craft problems, mention is made of the work of Arabelle Lyman, Elliott Lane, and Edward Manning.

Clay Work.

This year the work in clay has been confined largely to studying modeling, and to project work. The children of the "C" division, the youngest in the school, made very creditable tiles for Christmas. The greater part of their time was used in constructing a large Noah's ark to house the numerous small animals modeled during the year. Geraldine Waldo, Ruth Prentice and Elliott Payson built the larger portion of the ark. Small models of dwelling houses, interesting in their setting of grass and trees, were modeled by Ruth Prentice, Elliott Payson, June Sullivan and Mary Counihan. Edward Manning modeled a fort and he and Elliot Lane are exhibiting two handsome roosters. The children are also showing studies of flowers in bas relief, some unusually attractive figurines, and studies of heads.

There is exhibited work by Mary Ellen Mero, Murley Mero, Barbara Fellows, Priscilla Hough, Nancie Greenman, William Faulkner, Weston Pullen and Virginia Brown.

Metalry.

During the first semester a class in metalry was conducted for the children by Norman Smith. Paper knives made by Mary Mero, Murley Mero, Weston Pullen and William Prothero are to be found in the exhibit. Mary Counihan, Nancie Greenman, and other students have made napkin rings. These are displayed with other pieces of metalry. The work of older children in the classes shows a development and steady improvement.

The twelve men were accepted in the following order: Louis H Smith, Franklin; Floyd L. Fletcher, Salem; Edward T. Bunyan, Colchester; William G. Thomas, Lebanon; Walter W. Lang, Norwich; Alvin D. THERE'S ROSEMARY, THAT'S FOR REMEMBRANCE, AND CLUSTERS OF HEARTSEASE

As the thinning ranks of those who fought our country's battles gather to revere the memory of the eternally mustered out, it is fitting that the nation should turn from toil and play to pay homage to all those who made and preserved our homeland.

And surely the brave dead for whom this day was designated would count it ill against us if we did not also remember all the loved and lost whose lives touched ours.

So let the flowers fall softly today on grave and tomb, and in the garlands which mark their resting places, let there be rosemary, "that's for remembrance" and close beside it clusters of heartsease.

PEACE BETWEEN NATIONS THEME OF HOOVER ADDRESS

Speaking at Arlington Cemetery, the President Pledged Renewed Efforts "That These Sacrifices Shall Not Be Claimed Again"—Praising the Kellogg-Briand Treaty to Outlaw War, Mr. Hoover Said We and Other Nations Must Foster It With Common Sense and Realism to Accomplishment—We Must Avoid Those Fruits of Men's Failures That Have Blotted With Blood so Many Chapters of the World's History.

ARLINGTON NATIONAL CEMETERY, Va., May 30.—(AP) — President Hoover, speaking today for the first time as chief executive in this resting place of the nation's gallant dead, pledged renewed effort "that these sacrifices shall not be claimed again."

As "a great hope" that there may be avoided "those fruits of men's failures that have blotted with blood so many chapters of the world's history," Mr. Hoover pointed to the Kellogg-Briand treaty to outlaw war as one bringing from the aspirations and the hearts of men and women throughout the world.

"But, if this agreement is to fulfill its high purpose, we and other nations must accept its consequences," he warned. "We and other nations must accept with action. That action must march with the inexorable trend of common sense and realism to accomplishment."

Paramount in this action he said is disarmament; not a limitation of arms, but an actual reduction. And in that connection he expressed deep regret that in spite of the Kellogg-Briand pact to renounce war as an instrument of national policy and the lessons of the great war the nations are engaged in strengthening their naval arms.

If the Kellogg-Briand government be genuine proof that the world has renounced war as an instrument of national policy, Mr. Hoover said this means at once abandonment of the aggressive use of arms by every nation signatory to the pact and "becomes a sincere declaration that all armament hereafter shall be used only for defense.

"Consequently if we are honest," he added, "we must reconsider our own naval armament and the armaments of the world in the light of their defensive and not their aggressive use."

After twice emphasizing that adequate preparedness "for the protection of our own people" is the only assurance against aggression, the president called attention that the United States has undertaken to approach the problem of naval disarmament with a new program calling for actual reductions in fighting tonnage instead of the place of a building up to specific limitations.

Calling attention that his administration has presented a new yardstick to measure relative naval strengths, the president declared that to say that such a measure could not be found "is the counsel of despair, it is a challenge to the naval authorities of the world, it is a condemnation of the world to the sisyphean toil of competitive armaments."

Another reminder of the obligations of the signatory powers under the Kellogg-Briand treaty was given by Mr. Hoover with the declaration that "it implies that we will conduct our daily intercourse with nations in keeping with the spirit of that agreement." "It implies that we shall endeavor to develop these instrumentalities of peaceful adjustment that will enable us to remove disputes from the field of emotion to the field of calm and judicial consideration."

The president's address was delivered during impressive ceremonies in the white marble amphitheatre at which thousands paid tribute to the sacrifices of the men who have died that the republic might live. They were conducted by veterans of the Civil war.

Accompanied by Mrs. Hoover, his secretary, George Akerson, and naval and military aides, the chief executive arrived at the cemetery shortly after 1 p. m. As his automobile moved slowly along the roadway winding in and out among the fields of white marble slabs marking the bivouac of the World war dead, a battery at Fort Myers fired the presidential salute.

Arriving at the amphitheatre, the president walked with slow, measured steps to the tomb of the unknown upon which he laid a wreath. As he stepped from the tomb, Mrs. Hoover advanced to lay beside his wreath a single fragrant magnolia blossom.

Proceeding then into the amphitheatre, Mr. Hoover found his cabinet members awaiting him and was applauded by a crowd that overflowed the beautiful structure. Despite the beating rays of a mid-summer sun, the president sat much of the time during the hour of ceremonies with head bared.

Near the end of music, patriotic songs and oratory, Mrs. Hoover raised a green parcel, which the president held to protect her from the sun's heat. After the benediction the president returned to the white house to remain with the first lady until she departed late in the day for Boston, where she is to attend the fiftieth anniversary exercises of Radcliffe college tomorrow.

DESERT RUNNERS REPORT 2,000 ARABS SLAIN IN BATTLE

LONDON, May 30—(AP)—A Jerusalem dispatch to the Express today says desert runners brought to Beyrout here that 2,000 Arabs were slain at El Ujar, Neid, in a battle between the Ajman and Jelawah tribes.

The fight was attributed to a breach of desert hospitality. The sheik of Ajman visited and was entertained by the sheik to Jelawah, but no sooner had he left the tent of his host than he was attacked. The Ajmans triumphed, promptly retaliated and in the ensuing conflict both chiefs and 1,000 tribesmen on each side were reported to have been killed.

COOLIDGE PRAISES THE KELLOGG PEACE TREATY

PHILADELPHIA, May 30—(AP)—Calvin Coolidge, writing in the June issue of Ladies' Home Journal on promoting peace through renunciation of war, declares that the Kellogg multilateral peace treaty "is the greatest moral force dedicated to peace which has ever been created."

The treaty, the former president said, cannot be used as a substitute for national defense, but only as a supplement.

"As the nations come to place a proper reliance on this covenant," writes the former president, "many suspicions will be dissipated. It has been customary for them to watch each other very closely, in some cases even to spy upon each other, learn what military measures were being taken. This was always with the thought that such measures might indicate a hostile intent. If a nation was supporting an army and navy barely necessary for domestic and international police purposes, it was under the suspicion of preparing for aggression against its neighbor."

MUSKOGEE, Okla., May 30—(AP)—Meat sandwiches served at a box supper here last night for delegates to a state firemen's association convention were blamed for the illness of 200 persons who were recovering tonight from effects of ptomaine poisoning.

PROVIDENCE POLICE CHIEF BLAMED RABBLE FOR ROW

PROVIDENCE, May 30.—(AP)—Supt. of Police William F. O'Neil today laid the blame for last night's pitched battle between Brown university students and the authorities to "the lawless rabble outside of the collegians who urged in a minority of rowdy students and then, knowing the students would be blamed, lambasted the police."

Officials of the university were noncommittal concerning the outbreak in which 21 persons were injured by rocks or police riot sticks and two were shot; one, a spectator, and the other, a student. Dean of Freshmen Kenneth C. M. Sills, whose persuasive oratory broke up the student demonstration, said tonight that the university's investigation has not been completed.

With the exception of the two wounded victims and a few more than a half dozen students with minor injuries, all of those hurt in the affray had been released from the Rhode Island and Homeopathic hospitals and the college infirmary by noon today.

Four Brown men arrested during the trouble were fined from $10 to $20 on charges of assault on police officers, breaking traffic lights or discharging firearms on the public highway.

Six other students arrested during the tumult were released this morning after having been detained at police headquarters all night without charges. John B. Baker, 54 year old Oakland contractor, who never went to college but developed "college spirit" during the confusion of last night, was fined $2 and costs on a charge of rioting.

Supt. O'Neil praised the many "gentlemen among the students," who during the height of the trouble urged their colleagues "to decent conduct" in his statement today. Dean Otis E. Randall asserted "I have not been asked to make any investigation. Until that is required of me I have nothing to say."

President W. H. P. Faunce declared "the facts of this matter cannot be determined for at least 24 hours, to my belief, and until I know them I prefer not to make comment."

EXPERTS OF REPARATIONS CONFERENCE REJOICING

PARIS, May 30—(AP)—Experts of the reparations conference, after rejoining overnight in the fact that they had agreed on the annuities of German reparations payments, went back today to less agreeable realities and began to grapple with conditions under which the Germans were willing to pay those annuities.

The experts first took up the annuities for the final twenty-one years of the 58 scheduled, which the Germans insist must come out of the profits of the international bank, which the experts have devised, or from the states successor to the Austro-Hungarian monarchy. The Germans argue that these states owe enough on their proportionate share of Austria's debt to take care of these payments.

The French regard this condition as tantamount to a refusal by the Germans to pay annuities after 37 years have elapsed, since there is little likelihood that Rumania, Jugoslavia, Czechoslovakia or Italy will consent to pay reparations in behalf of the Reich.

The profits from the International bank are regarded not only by the French, but by most of the other experts as well, as too problematical to be relied upon.

After a long discussion this afternoon, the creditor experts decided to delegate a small group to discuss this question with Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, chief of the German delegation.

DALLAS, Tex., May 30—(AP)—Floods that for three days have held sections of south, north and east Texas waterbound, taking at least seven lives, causing several million dollars damage to crops, halting highway traffic and crippling train and telegraph service today were making their greatest inroads on regions of southeast Texas.

Several towns near Beaumont were surrounded by flood waters from streams taxed far from their channel capacity by unprecedented May rains. Beaumont itself, was cut off from highway travel except from the east.

Finn And Berger Released On Parole

Had Been Imprisoned For Embezzlement of $93,104 From The Bankers' Trust Co., This City.

HARTFORD, May 30.—(AP)—George A. Finn, former secretary and treasurer of the Bankers Trust company, of Norwich, and Gabriel C. Berker, former Norwich broker, who were sentenced to state prison on the charge of being involved in the embezzlement of $93,104 from the trust company in 1924, have been released from the state prison under parole, it was learned today.

Finn was induced to lend money to Berker from the bank's funds to aid the latter to carry on his stock brokerage business, which was of the "get-rich-quick" type. Prosecuting officials admitted at the time that Finn did not personally profit in the embezzlements. When his defalcations were discovered, he pleaded guilty and involved Berker. Berker fled and was gone for three years before he, too, surrendered after attempting to make negotiations with the state's attorney of New London county.

HEAT TOOK TOLL OF FIVE LIVES IN NEW ENGLAND

BOSTON, May 30—(AP)—New England's third consecutive day of midsummer heat took a toll of five lives, shattered high temperature records for the month and prostrated two score today. Four swimming fatalities were reported.

The dead (overcome by the heat):
Charles Hill, 72, Lynn.
George Nickerson, 88, Lynn.
John Myskiro, 69, Boston.
James Fleming, 58, Brockton, Mass.

An official temperature of 96 degrees at Boston was the hottest Memorial day in the weather bureau's history and equalled the high record of the summer of 1923. Providence, R. I., reported 94 degrees, the highest May temperature in 35 years. Burlington, Vt., reported 92.1 degrees, the hottest May day on record.

All May temperature records were broken at Rutland, Vt., with 92 degrees. Springfield, Mass., sweltered under 93 degrees. Manchester, N. H., had a temperature of 93 degrees, the warmest Memorial day on record there.

The number of prostrations mounted with the rising temperature, more than a score being listed in Boston. Several were overcome at Manchester, N. H., two each at Springfield and Providence. Four women and two children at Rochester, N. H., attending an open air memorial mass, were stricken by the heat.

Bathing beaches on the seashore were crowded by thousands attempting to escape the torrid temperature. The Hartford, Conn., reading above the 90 mark for the second time in 26 years.

BERLIN BOURSE SATISFIED AGREEMENT ON ANNUITIES

BERLIN, May 30—(AP)—The Berlin Bourse, a fairly reliable barometer on public feeling, today viewed the agreements on the sum of German reparation annuity payments, as far as it goes, with undisguised satisfaction.

Although financial circles consider it still leaves a tremendous burden on Germany's economic life for the next two generations, the relief from the incubus of uncertainty was very great.

The general conclusion was, better a lesser evil than no agreement at all.

The amount "saved" from the current year's reparations payments through the agreement to begin the Young plan September 1, instead of January 1, 1930, was regarded as so much cash in hand and had a decided psychological effect.

It is surmised here that the same favorable impression ruled elsewhere, because quite extensive buying orders came from abroad, not the least from America.

Germany's actuarial experts were busy all day long figuring out what the agreement amounted to in hard cash by annual averages.

NEW PLAN BY FRANCE TO RATIFY DEBT AGREEMENTS

PARIS, May 30—(AP)—Ratification of the Franco-American and Franco-British debt agreements by means of a government decree was said by Paul Reynaud, a deputy selected by the republican-democratic group to sound out the head of the government, to be the present plan of Premier Poincare. No confirmation of this was obtainable at M. Poincare's office, where the subject was taboo so far as public discussion was concerned.

Competent authorities, it was understood, have assured M. Poincare that such procedure would be perfectly legal. He first would ask the finance and foreign affairs committees of the chamber of deputies to endorse the method.

If these committees consent, the premier would accept an interpellation which would be closed by a motion of confidence in the chamber. This motion could, if necessary, include such reservations as its proponents might desire to insert. It would take the form of a resolution to approve the ratification decreed.

Explosion Rocked East Bridgeport

Two Powder Magazines in the Remington Plant Exploded—One Man Slightly Injured.

BRIDGEPORT, May 30.—(AP)— The east side of the city was rocked and the remainder of the city was aroused by the shock when two powder magazines at the Remington-U. M. C. plant, exploded just before 4 o'clock this afternoon. One man was slightly injured. The plant was undamaged save for the magazines, the wrecking of which showered debris over the plant yard, Grant street, Seaview and Barnum avenues. Windows in houses and stores on these streets were broken.

William Blaner, 1617 Seaview avenue, who was seated on an empty beer keg, alongside his home at the time of the explosion, picking on a mandolin, suffered minor abrasions of the left elbow when a window glass blew out and struck him. He was treated at the Emergency hospital ambulance, which was at the scene.

The magazines were located by the side of Pembroke lake, a small body of water on the Remington property, some distance from factory buildings and banked with high mounds of earth.

There were two explosions, so close together as to be hardly distinguishable. Fire apparatus was called, but the inflammable parts of the magazines had been blown away.

Fire Chief Thomas F. Burns expressed the belief that the intense heat caused the blast. Officials of the company are making an investigation to establish the cause of the explosion.

The Bridgeport hospital, in which more than 250 patients were confined within three blocks of the scene of the explosion, was shaken by the effect of the blast.

SEEKING TO LINK WOMAN WITH "INSURANCE PLOTS"

MACON, Ga., May 30—(AP)—Authorities today sought to link Mrs. J. C. Powers, aged landlady with several "insurance plots" and simultaneously planned a speedy trial for her and Earl Manchester, 21, a roomer, on charges of killing James Parks, 35, for his insurance.

Chief of Police Ben T. Watkins said the 65-year-old woman had used newspaper advertisements "offering willing young men a home and family companionship" as a lure. At least two young men besides Parks, who was found dead Tuesday, answered. One, Hollis L. Mullis, was sent to an insurance examiner by the landlady last February 4, and turned down on a $12,000 policy.

T. E. Martin, a photographer's assistant today said he answered Mrs. Powers' advertisement and that she urged him to let her pay the premium on a life insurance policy and become beneficiary. He never returned.

Suspicion was directed toward Mrs. Powers in the Parks slaying when detectives found her burning something in a stove while the temperature outside was 84 degrees. The woman confessed verbally before 10 witnesses, but was hysterical and later repudiated her confession.

Manchester told his story and signed it before a notary public. He said the aged woman offered him $1,000 if and when she collected $14,000 insurance on Parks' life. She argued with him two weeks, Manchester said, telling him she had Parks insured, and pointing out "how easy it would be."

Finally accepting the confession ran, Manchester tried for three days, and finally succeeded in luring Parks to a lonely spot on the East Mason river front, and shooting him twice in the head. Parks went along thinking they were going to hi-jack a liquor car, Manchester said.

Solicitor General Charles Garrett announced he had a perfect case. He called for a special grand jury next Tuesday, and urged an extra term of Bibb county superior court early in June.

Advised by newspapermen of the "perfect case" and the prosecutor's plans, Manchester smiled ruefully in his cell.

"We (Mrs. Powers and Manchester) thought we had planned a perfect crime," he said.

LABOR PARTY VICTORIOUS IN THE BRITISH ELECTIONS

At Midnight Four Members of the House of Commons Had Lost Their Seats to Laborites—Sir Austen Chamberlain, Secretary of State For Foreign Affairs, Retained His Seat by a Margin of 50 Votes—Returns From 145 Constituencies Give Labor 83 Victories to 49 For the Conservatives—At Midnight the Total Vote Stood: Labor, 1,408,975; Conservatives, 1,255,905; Liberals, 646,143.

LONDON, May 30—(AP)—A great triumph for the labor party and a consequent disaster to the conservative government of Stanley Baldwin was indicated by the early returns from today's general parliamentary elections. At midnight four members of the government had lost their seats in the house of commons to laborites and Sir Austen Chamberlain, secretary of state for foreign affairs, had retained his seat by the scant margin of 50 votes.

Sir Austen, who has been one of the outstanding international figures of the government, won in 1924 by more than 7,000 plurality. Sir Austen demanded a recount of today's poll in the hope of overcoming some of the ill effects of his narrow escape from defeat. The only result was to lop seven votes off the total, having the plurality at 43.

At midnight, with returns in from 145 constituencies, labor had to its credit 83 victories. The conservatives had won 49 seats, the liberals 19 and the independents 3, this represented a gain of 21 for labor and 7 for the liberals. The losses were conservatives, 34; labor 1; liberals, 4; communists, 1.

The communist loss was in the defeat of Shapurji Saklatvala, the Indian radical, who was barred from attending the 1929 interparliamentary union conference at Washington because Secretary Kellogg and President Coolidge held him to be a revolutionist; he also figured in British domestic affairs a year later when he was arrested on a charge of making a seditious speech in Hyde Park.

The liberal party, under the leadership of David Lloyd George, recorded a number of gains as compared with the 1924 election. But the early returns did not show enough of these to justify any hope that the party would reach anything like its old time prestige. Most of the liberals success today was in Lancashire, whose seats are generally considered as key positions.

Among the early government defeats was that of Sir Thomas Inskip, attorney general, another was R. G. Williams, parliamentary secretary for the board of trade, and Vivian Henderson, under-secretary of the home office.

Successful government candidates included, besides Sir Austen Chamberlain, the home secretary, Sir William Joynson-Hicks; he had a comfortable margin of nearly 6,000 votes over a laborite. Sir Lawing Worthington-Evans, minister for war, and Sir Samuel Hoare minister for air, also were among the victors as was Lord Eustace Percy, minister of education.

Another notable conservative victory was that of Lady Astor. The American peeresse became strong opposition to retain her seat as member from Plymouth.

The voting was fairly heavy and because of apathy in the campaign this was taken to mean that the new women voters of between the ages of 21 and 25 exercised their privilege in goodly numbers. Yet they were not too mindful of the claims of their own sex for there were many women candidates who failed to get enough votes.

The aggregate votes shown by the districts which had reported at midnight gave a total of 1,408,975 for labor, 1,255,905 for the conservatives and 646,143 for the liberals.

The figures in Birmingham West gave Sir Austen Chamberlain 14881 votes to 14,819 for his labor opponent, Mr. Willey. It was a straight fight between the conservatives and the laborites.

Norman Angell, well known political writer, won a victory for labor over the conservatives in Bradford North, James Pitsalan Hope, chairman of committees in the house, was beaten by a labor opponent in Walthamstow East, the laborite cove was elected in former Premier Ramsay MacDonald's old constituency, Aberavon, with a greatly increase majority.

Election of two more members of the Baldwin cabinet, Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, president of the board of trade, and L. C. Amery, secretary for the colonies, brought the total of ministers re-elected to seven.

Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland, minister of labor, was defeated by a laborite in Birmingham.

Sir Arthur's defeat was the fourth that the Baldwin cabinet had suffered. The laborite C. L. Simmons had polled 20,655 votes to his 20,833.

LATEST RETURNS FROM BRITISH GENERAL ELECTION

LONDON, May 31.—(Friday)—Compilation of the returns at 4:00 a. m. today showed an aggregate vote of 1,256,067 for labor; 3,656,691 for conservatives; 1,804,210 for liberals; 124,857 for communists; and 32,969 for independents.

Of the total aggregates 246,797 votes were polled for women candidates of whom only four had been returned to the commons.

LARGE MAJORITY FOR REVILLE CHAMBERLAIN

LONDON, May 30.—(AP)—Reville Chamberlain, minister of health in the Baldwin cabinet, and brother of Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister, was re-elected in Edgbaston, Birmingham by an overwhelming majority. RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY ROTARIANS AT DALLAS

DALLAS, Tex., May 30—(AP)—Rotarians gathered here at their annual international convention today elected officers who will be announced tomorrow, voted to retai ntheir slogan and decided to hold more conventions in foreign lands.

A resolution declaring that the 1931 meeting and at least every fourth convention thereafter should be held outside of North America, was passed.

The delegates refused to abandon the slogan "he profits most who serves best" in spite of arguments from foreign delegates who said that the slogan, translated into foreign tongues, had a much more commercial connotation than it has in English. The convention also refused the request of English delegates that dues be reduced from $4.50 per annum to $4.00.

Another resolution approved giving travelling Rotarians the privilege of attending Rotary meetings wherever they may be.

One resolution very important to Italian clubs, providing that a statement be prepared on the relation of a Rotarian to his country, was passed unanimously. Italian Rotarians, under the fascist regime, wanted it made clear that their duty to Rotary in no way interfered with their duty to their country.

KING GEORGE SUFFERS AN ATTACK OF FEVER

LONDON, May 30.—(AP)—Somewhat reassuring news as to the condition of King George, who was learned today to be again confined to bed and suffering from an attack of fever, was obtained tonight from Windsor Castle.

No further communications as to his majesty's illness, it was declared, are considered necessary until after noon tomorrow.

The shock caused by news that his majesty had suffered a relapse was two-fold. This came first from its unexpectedness, since most of his subjects thought their ruler normally convalescent, and second from the severity of the kind's malady. Empyema is considered a dangerous disease, particularly apt to strike a sudden mortal blow.

Very few persons knew that his majesty had suffered a relapse. The news was not published in London, the voting in the general elections today had distracted and absorbed the attention of everyone in England.

WINDHAM PAYS TRIBUTE TO ITS SOLDIER DEAD

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 30—The town of Windham turned out in full today to pay tribute to its soldier and sailor dead. The time-honored pilgrimage in the morning and procession in the afternoon were the largest since the World war and included, for the first time in many years several squads of legionnaires who marched under the banner of the recently reorganized post, James J. Post, No. 19, American Legion. A handful of Civil war veterans whose organization is entering upon its last decade, rode in automobiles. State Commander James Haggerty did not attend the local exercises this year having gone to deliver orations in Darien and at the Soldiers' home in Noroton. The familiar face of Comrade Adam Dunts was also missed in the procession. Mr. Dunts is quite seriously ill at St. Joseph's hospital.

Some ten organizations took part in the procession which left the town building at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and marched to the Willimantic cemetery for the main exercises of the day. The line of march was up High, down Valley, down Jackson up Union and up Main to the cemetery. The formation was in three divisions as follows:

Windham Morning Pilgrimage.

The pilgrimage to the three Windhams with stops at the Windham Center and North Windham cemeteries where orations were delivered by Rev. Harold H. Critchlow of the Methodist church, started from the town buildings at 7.30 o'clock with about a score of motor trucks and private cars in the line. Lieutenant McCarthy was marshal of the pilgrimage, a position which he has had for many years. The veteran organizations were accompanied by a platoon from Company C, 169th infantry and music was by the Elks' band. The final stop of the morning was at St. Joseph's R. C. cemetery where a huge crowd awaited the procession. Rev. Charles M. Kelly of St. Joseph's church delivered the oration at this cemetery. Upon returning to this city the Grand Army veterans and friends were served dinner in the G. A. R. rooms by the Woman's Relief corps. During the afternoon Spanish war veterans and members of the auxiliary carried out the simple but impressive service in memory of the sailor dead on Bridge street bridge over the Willimantic river.

Italian Organizations Parade.

The Italian organizations of the city held their Memorial day exercises today, forming in a parade at the lodge hall in the Capitol theatre building at 4.30 o'clock and marching to St. Joseph's church for a brief service at 5 o'clock. From there the parade wended its way to St. Joseph's cemetery where the graves of deceased countrymen were decorated and a stirring address in tribute to the war veterans of Italian origin was delivered by Angelo Bertolini of New Haven, Italian newspaper publisher and state officer in the Sons of Italy organization. The procession moved to music by the Italian Citizens' band, directed by Professor Puca of Norwich. Next in line was lodge Guiseppe Garibaldi No. 187, Sons of Italy, led by President Petro de Filippo; Italian Ladies' association, No. 1528, Daughters of Italy and school children. Three Civil war veterans appeared in the Mansfield procession. They were: Melvin Nichols, now of Groton, formerly of Mansfield; Calvary of North Coventry and Richard Johnson of Mansfield Hollow, who was persuaded to take part today by Rev. Mr. Jones after having never been absent from the annual exercises.

Old places who have taken on the outlines were unanimous in their opinion today that Wednesday and today were the hottest May days experienced here since 1873 or 56 years ago. While the younger element could not vouchsafe for this statement, it was agreed however, that the weather was unusually warm with the mercury climbing well over 80 degrees. The day brought the first real heavy flow of traffic through Main street, which is on the main arteries of trunk lines.

FUNERAL.

Mrs. Harriet M. Gott.

The funeral services for Mrs. Harriet Marianda Gott were held at the home in Hebron this afternoon at 3.30 o'clock with Rev. Theodore D. Martin officiating. Burial was in St. Peters' cemetery. Arrangements were in charge of Avery and Van Zandt.

One of the iron white way standards in front of the Mary Anna tea room on Union street was broken completely off some four inches above the base Wednesday late afternoon when backed into by a truck owned by Merrill Jones, coal dealer. The truck was being backed out of the Jones driveway at the time. The machine was but little damaged and Jones agreed to settle for the damaged standard.

With character building as its objective, the formation of an American Legion junior baseball league is to be made at a meeting of teams called by James J. Shea post, No. 19, American Legion to be held Friday night. The local movement is in conjunction with one that is nation-wide with each state offering a championship in 12 regional tournaments.

SON OF SLAVE IS MEMORIAL DAY SPEAKER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, May 30—The son of a Negro slave appeared on the program of the Memorial day exercises here today for the first time in the history of Windham. He was Rev. J. W. Platt, pastor of the A. M. E. Zion church of this city, whose mother was a slave on a plantation in the south before the emancipation. Rev. Mr. Platt followed Captain Frank P. Fenton on the speaking list at the Willimantic cemetery this afternoon. He stated that his mother had sent her regrets that she could not personally attend the exercises as she had planned. Rev. Mr. Platt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Platt of Medfield, Mass., are both 82 years of age. The elder Mr. Platt was a slave butler from the age of 15 until the Civil war and Mrs. Platt carried water for 100 slaves in a South Carolina cotton field. Her head is flat in shape owing to the constant weight of a heavy water container which she carried in this Negro style during her years of growth. Mr. and Mrs. Platt now own an 155-acre cotton farm in South Carolina, the property being leased at present. Rev. Mr. Platt has been pastor here for the past two years. His appearance on the speaking program and his strong plea for faith in the quality of man proved to be a great innovation to the annual services.

During his address Captain Fenton sounded a note of warning that this would probably be the last of the afternoon exercises to be held at the Willimantic cemetery after following the custom for 60 years. He said that changing living conditions now made it almost imperative that the full exercises be completed by noon so that pleasure-bent desires could be fulfilled by the people after lunch. Captain Fenton paid high tribute to the soldier dead of the town, taking occasion to welcome the late County Detective William E. Jackson, whose remains lay at rest in the new Willimantic cemetery. But two Civil war veterans responded to the 50th annual call to march in honor of their fallen comrades today. They were Comrades George Herrick, aged 94, the oldest survivor here and Comrade Charles Henry. State Commander James Haggerty and Comrade Slater were out of the city and Comrades Adam Dunts and Dennis Shea were unable to take part owing to feebleness.

While this city remained free of automobile accidents up to late afternoon, despite unusually heavy traffic, two mishaps, resulting in injuries to three people were reported from outlying towns.

Shortly after midnight this morning two brothers, Bailey Ferry, 21, of Danbury and James Ferry, 34, of 25 Dennison street, Hartford, were injured on the Marlborough-Hebron highway when their Ford roadster was forced off the road and up a ten foot embankment where the machine struck a tree stump and overturned. The youths were rushed to St. Joseph's hospital here by strangers. Dr. Fred M. Smith who gave treatment found that James Ferry was suffering from a fracture of three right ribs, fracture of the first lumbar vertebrae and abrasions. Paralysis did not set in, however, and there was no indication of internal injuries. Bailey Ferry sustained a severe cut over the left eye caused by a piece of broken glass. He was released after treatment but Terry will remain a patient for some time. Neither of the young men could tell anything about the accident other than that they were forced off the road by another machine. Their own car, they said was badly wrecked. They were on their way from New London to this city and they had lost their bearings at the time of the accident so that today they were at considerable difficulty to determine where the accident occurred in order to recover the wrecked machine and file an accident report.

Mrs. Charles O. Sundvall, 53, of 72 Church street, Naugatuck, was badly hurt about 8 o'clock this morning when a roadster operated by her husband failed to negotiate the sharp angle of Ford's corner on Hampton Hill and overturned after leaving the road. The woman was rushed to St. Joseph's hospital in the ambulance. X-ray photographs taken for Dr. Fred M. Smith, attending physician, showed that she had sustained a broken left arm and fracture of the right side pelvis, front and back. The machine was quite badly damaged and was towed to the Hampton Hill garage for repairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Fancher and daughter Eleanor of Syracuse, N. Y., were holiday guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Curran.

Joseph F. Ellis, veteran engineer of the town building was being congratulated today on the excellent appearance of the spacious lawns surrounding the building. Engineer Ellis has been at work for several days on the lawn planting the flower beds and trimming the grass.

Bright yellow stripes that designate the cross-walks along the Main street pavement are being painted by street department employes.

Mrs. Albert W. French has gone to Auburndale, Mass., to attend the graduation of her daughter, Miss Olive French from Lasell seminary on June 4.

Many thirsty tongues found relief today at the city drinking fountain at the corner of Main and Railroad street, the fountain having been put into operation Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Deare and two children spent the holiday with her mother, Mrs. John C. Conant of Boston, Mass.

Miss Elizabeth Smith, senior at the normal school, was holiday guest of a classmate, Miss Amelia Sheridan in New London.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. Shea and two daughters of Providence, R. I., were holiday guests of her mother, Mrs. Michael Moriarty.

Judge and Mrs. George E. Andrews are entertaining Arthur L. Perkins of Montclair, N. J., for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Pults are on a holiday and week-end automobile tri pin New York state.

Coroner Arthur G. Bill of Danielson will be at police headquarters here Friday morning at 9 o'clock to conduct an inquest into the death of Louis LaChappelle, aged 7, who was killed when struck by a truck operated by Frederick Burnham of Hampton on Main street, shortly after 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The body was examined by Dr. Louis I. Mason, who had been away during the day. Medical Examiner Mason announced that death was almost instantaneous and was due to a fracture of the skull.

COLCHESTER

NEW HAVEN DRIVER BEATS IT WHEN NASH COACH UPSETS

(Special to The Bulletin)

COLCHESTER, May 30—State Policeman Roy Pettingill of the Hartford barracks is on the lookout for the driver of a Nash coach, Conn. A-1617 which turned bottom-side up at the foot of the Charles Clark hill in Marlborough about 8.30 this evening. The car was owned by Ida Ewingtroff, of Elm street, New Haven. The car was apparently traveling at a high rate of speed toward Hartford and when approaching the foot of the long hill the driver applied his brakes suddenly. Tracks in the road showed that the car traveled about 500 feet with locked brakes. A 50-foot stretch of highway railing was smashed to the ground, and the car was badly damaged, one side being completely crushed in. The car was towed to the Shallor garage and Officer Pettingill, who was called to investigate, was informed by a bystander that the driver, although apparently somewhat injured had hurriedly left the location of the accident in order to avoid the police. When located, the driver will be brought to justice court in the town of Marlborough on a reckless driving charge.

SECRETARY KELLY RETURNS FOR PATRIOTIC ADDRESS

A large crowd attended the Memorial day exercises held under the auspices of Donald F. Bigelow post, American Legion, Thursday afternoon. Executive Secretary Edward L. Kelly was the principal speaker. The program opened at Grange hall with Legion Commander John N. Phelps, master of ceremonies. The opening number was the singing of the Star Spangled Banner by all. Rev. H. H. Tompkins made the invocation. Next came exercises by the school children. "The Making of Our Country's Flag," by Oscar Josephsburg; song, "Garlands for the Brave", pupils of 7th grade; recitation, "Memorial Day," by Edith Marvin; song, "A Tribute to a Soldier," pupils of 4th grade; recitation, "Memorial Day," Elizabeth Bochian; recitation, "The Soldier's Grave," George Briggs; recitation, "The Blue and the Gray," Elsie Sorrell; song, "America" by the assemblage.

At this point, the program closed at the hall and the different organizations, school children and townspeople led by an out-of-town drum corps fell into line in front of the hall and marched to the Civil war veterans' monument in the park where a brief service was held. Mrs. F. G. Bock, regent of Colonel Henry Champion chapter, D. A. R., placed a large wreath at the base of the monument. From here the parade continued to the World war veterans' monument, where the closing exercises were held, including an eloquent address by Executive Secretary Kelly.

Mr. Kelly declared he felt honored to be asked to speak at the Memorial day exercises of his old home town and was pleased to note that the Colchester people still take an interest in keeping alive the Memorial day spirit. He went on to emphasize the great sacrifices made by those men who gave their lives so that the liberty and freedom of the American people might remain untarnished.

The program closed with the placing of a wreath at the World war veterans' monument by Commander Phelps, following which taps were sounded by Miss Eunice M. Seymes.

"Another Big Hit Coming to Gem Theatre."

Good Morning Movie-Fans:

Have you heard yet of the big talking picture, "ALIBI" that is coming to that ever popular playhouse, The Gem Theatre, Willimantic. Well, it's a Roland West production and it will be played at the theatre Saturday, Sunday and Monday of the coming week-end. Saturday's show will be continuous from 1 to 11 p. m. Sunday there will be the usual two evening shows and Monday the matinee performances and two shows at night.

I hardly need to tell you of the unqualified sauccess that the Gem has always met with. In line with the demands of progress the Vitaphone was installed early last March and since then many great all-talking hits have been scored, one right after another proving tremendous lobby magnets—But "Alibi" is something different. Roland West who produced "The Bat" and "The Unknown Purple," tops his record with "Alibi." This production is based on the stage play, "Nightstick." That it is an all-round star picture is well indicated in a glace at the names of some of the leading characters. Among them we find Pat O'Malley, Eleanor Griffith, Chester Morris, Mae Busch, Harry Stubbs, Purnell B. Pratt, Regis Toomey, Irma Harrison and others. And who should fill the role of the ruthless killer but Chester Morris. In this great thriller Chester Morris plays an underworld gang leader. He throws an entire city into terror. The beautiful daughter of a police official loves the assassin, believing him to be innocent and the victim of her father's persecution. A young detective, also in love with the girl, leads the manhunt and at last after a series of stirring events, the strange triangle ends in a blaze of bullets. When you see this picture you will know why Chester Morris rode to fame and fortune through his playing in "Alibi."

Remember, "Alibi" is an All-Talking Picture. The song-hits so well sung in the picture will charm you. The singing gives "Alibi" the distinction of being a show within a show—A Glamorous Musical Show Within an All-Dialogue Screen Drama. That is "Alibi." It's a great show and as Manager John R. Pickett puts it, "It will surely go on record as one of the best all-talking pictures ever shown in this theatre."

The Community Chorus

—ob—

The Birth of a Voice

Oh say, can you sing—can you whistle—can you bleat?
Either tenor, falsetto or bass?
Can you make any sound with your throat or nose?
Can you force any air through your face?

If so, join the Chorus and help things along;
You don't have to be a Caruso;
It's Jack Archer's job to find you a voice.
He's elected Main Whence just to do so.

He'll furnish and place with unexcelled skill
A voice, 'twixt your chest and your hat;
And you'll sing—and behold, your whole life will change;
A miracle performed then and there.

And beautiful sounds will gush from the side
And mingle with like sounds from others.
Pure joy reigns supreme and new gladness comes
To Community sisters and brothers.

So hitch your near voice to the charioteer's star
With a non-slipping musical hitch;
Try a warble—a carol—a thrill, or a chant;
And don't fuss too much about pitch.

Tap—Tap—Now together:—the Community's off
For a regular musical spree;
Each trying his best to out-noise the rest
And some say—"They're never off key."

The Hound

Some are sick for spring and warm winds blowing
Over close-sheathed buds and a patch of old snow,
With the early aro-lights delicately bowing
Across thin sunshine that hesitates to go.

But it's not for any April promises I sicken,
Though, their stammering sweetness be a plucked string:
My mind is bent toward autumn, I am shaken
More by her denials than by all the hopes of spring.

The curt cold days, the blue and winter weather,
The smoke of burning brushwood keener than a frost,
An orchard full of odors night is wise to gather,
The fur-collared stubble where the flower is lost.

A clear green sunset and a pale moon showing,
A sense of dawning ends, like the light in the sky,
Autumn is a hound that shrills, my heart for her is gnawing,
The quarry goes to autumn, let spring die.

—Babette Deutsch.

Mr. Walsh, being commanded to remove his gloves, managed to slip the ring off with one of them, but a close inspection of the glove afterward failed to reveal the ring. Some few days later Mr. Walsh got the following letter from the holdup men: "Imagine our surprise when we found the ring with your name on it, on the floor of our car. We ought to be sore at you for trying to hold out on us, but we not. So we are sending back the ring we found in your pocketbook, but we need. We figure we need the ring more than you do." With the letter were several things of personal value.

THE REVISED CHARTER.

At the city election next Monday the voters of Norwich will have before them, in addition to the election of city officials, the question of whether they will accept the revision of the city charter as drafted by a local committee and approved by the legislature.

Norwich has long needed a new charter, one that would mean the abandonment of the present obsolete instrument and replacement by a document that could actually be called a new charter and up to date. We have long experienced the detriments of an antiquated charter, but the relief that is needed is not provided in the revised instrument submitted for action next Monday. We are being asked to give our approval to the same old charter with the various amendments brought together into one document and some few changes of questionable value made.

It is a charter that gets us nowhere. Could the question of codification be acted upon separately there would be good reason to accept it, because in that sense, it is an improvement over the old charter with amendments and amendments dating back into the last century and scattered here, there and everywhere in city records, but there are few compensating benefits to be found in the changes that have been made.

It is not believed that Norwich will be buncoed into the acceptance of this revision, as the new charter is needed. That there should be much objection raised to the provision concerning the assessment of abutting property owners for street improvements is quite natural. If it is in the present charter and seldom if ever used, why continue it? Street improvements are constantly being made and all property owners should be treated alike, this year and next year the same as last year.

As for the creation of new conditions for city officials, there is no need for it and no early prospects of such a need. Whatever is needed and desirable in the way of changes can easily be effected through amendments.

The voters of Norwich will do a wise thing if they vote against any such revision until the time comes when they can get a new charter that will take care of those long standing handicaps to a business-like administration of the city government.

REAPPORTIONMENT PROGRESS.

Now that the senate has got around to the passage of a census and reapportionment bill, years after the last star provision should have been attended to, there is a prospect that legislation in some form will be adopted at this special session.

The house has previously registered its approval of the provisions of the Kemp bill. Because it failed of action in the senate before the expiration of the last congress it is necessary for it to be done all over again. It isn't the Fenn bill that has been adopted by the senate, but one of a similar character with some changes in the provisions. Still it makes provision for the census and for reapportionment and opens the way for a compromise between the two houses on such differences as may exist after the lower house takes action.

Reapportionment has been too long delayed. According to the Constitution it should have followed the last census and now it will not go into effect until the coming census has been taken. The need is to prevent the recurrence of any such deplorable situation. The need is to have such a provision that reapportionment will be made whether congress is willing to take action or not. Under the Fenn bill that would be the duty of the secretary of commerce, who would be required to act in case congress failed to do so. It is a provision that should be included in whatever bill is adopted. Dealing with this matter, if there is to be a just distribution of representation to congress, it is not a creditable attitude that is taken by states which insist upon more representatives than it is entitled to, when depriving other states of those representatives which belong to it according to census figures.

BUSINESS FIRST, ADJOURN AFTER.

In various ways President Hoover has indicated what he would like to have done at the extra session of congress. It has been made evident that his wishes have received no consideration from a certain number of the members of the senate. In fact, the impression has been gained that since his wishes have been made known certain members have done their utmost to bring about opposite results.

The special session was called for the purpose of getting early action upon the farm legislation, tariff and such few others as could be crowded in. The expectation was that congress would deal with these matters and adjourn. The desire of the senate is to take a recess until some time next September and so delay action that nothing will be accomplished in time to have any effect upon the farm situation this year and prolong the tariff discussion into the regular session opening in December.

There is an element in the senate that would like nothing better than to cause such embarrassment. This is regardless of the fact that they profess to be ardent supporters of farm legislation.

Just what effect the making known of the fact that the president is opposed to the idea of a recess will have is problematical. It is to be realized, however, that much depends upon the house when it comes to a recess. The house has practically caught up on its work and it is strong in its support of the president. Thus the house can be expected to wield much influence in its stand with the president in spite of the recalcitrancy of the insurgents and democrats. The desire for getting away from Washington for the summer can be appreciated but the special matters should be attended to first.

THE TAXPAYERS' ORGANIZATION

It seems a bit strange that the taxpayers are not sufficiently interested in their own welfare to speak and act for themselves as individuals in city and town meetings, but there have been evidences that they are not and that being the case it is well that they should do the next best thing and effect an organization which will look after their interests.

We have gotten far away from those days when such men as Hugh H. Osgood, Solomon Lucas, Nicholas Tarrant, General Aiken, William H. Shields and others could be depended upon to occupy the floor at such public meetings part of the time and voice their approval or disapproval of matters before the meetings. Their views were invariably constructive. They were concerned for themselves and other taxpayers and they had in mind the best interests of the community under prevailing conditions.

The organization of Norwich taxpayers is a good thing. It is deserving of general support which it will doubtless get, but it is to be remembered that interest in such an organization should not be confined to merely joining. There is a part for every member to play and something for everyone to do, especially at the town and city meetings. If the organization can succeed in awakening the interest that ought to be displayed at such times it will be doing a fine thing, but if the members take on the spirit of "Let George do it," as taxpayers too often do when their own interests are at stake, the whole purpose of such an organization will be defeated.

It is time that the taxpayers began to awaken to their position and act for the best interests of the community and themselves instead of swallowing everything put before them and confining their opposition to feeble grunts of dissatisfaction.

A SENSIBLE DECISION.

The decision of the trolleymen of the state in voting to accept the offer of the Connecticut company to continue present wages and make certain adjustment in working conditions is unquestionably a wise one.

This means that the possibility of a strike is eliminated and that a new agreement will continue from the first of June. The trolleymen had sought an increase in wages and the company had offered a reduction, with the prospects of a submission of the dispute to arbitration in case there was no acceptance of the offer to continue the present wage.

Without a doubt the trolleymen were fully aware of the conditions prevailing in such a transportation business. There are the days when the electric cars are experiencing the strongest kind of competition. Frequently it has been insisted that there is such a demand for trolley service in the cities that it could never be given up, and yet we find that there are cities, and other large communities, where trolley service is being abandoned and busses are taking their place.

Such changes cannot fail to have their effect upon those who are engaged in the operation of trolleys. They indicate that the trolley business is headed for a decline instead of an increase and this cannot fail to make its impression upon those who are closely connected with such a transportation service. The action of the trolley men indicates that it has.

HER BABIES

"In all other respects you are a perfect mother," said Ned. "But by the nine tall gods, if you don't get over that idea that Sandy and I are still yearlings—" Words failed him and he glowered down on poor little mother, rocking meekly on her own front porch.

"But, Neddie, love, you will always be just a little boy to me," protested she. "No matter how tall you grow, you will always be my baby."

"Great auk," thundered Ned. "A man stands a chance of getting to be a hero to his valet—but for a son to get to be a grown-up to his mother—never!" And he charged up and down the porch, ramming his fingers through his hair quite as though the whole issue were really important.

"I don't mind your thinking of me as your baby," drawled Sandy around his pipe. "But can't you do something about this habit of calling me lambie before waiters and bellhops?"

"I'll try," promised mother, weakly.

To be fair to mother, she did try. At least she remembered when the boys were about. But Sandy is 23 and Ned 26, and when a habit has, so to speak, a fifty-four year clutch on you, it takes more than the threats of an irate and hand-waving son to jar it loose. And in the end it was mother herself, with the aid of circumstances and her ever-vigilant conscience, that made the cure.

Give mother a rocking chair and she would be as much at home in the royal reception room of Buckingham palace as on her own front porch. As Sandy says, she would be swapping jelly recipes with Queen Mary inside the first ten rocks." The first morning at Deep Haven I plotted mother out to the shady veranda of the hotel and planted her in a rocking chair with a view down the lake, and a fringe of other rocking-chair addicts close enough so she could hitch in any direction and make a conversational contact. I started her rocking and set off for golf.

During the first few days mother had a beautiful time finding out where everybody lived and whether they knew the people she knew there. Coming and going between golf and swimming and sailing and meals, I caught fragments of her conversation. "Oh, I always parboil mine first. It gives such a nice flavor." "After my operation—" "My babies always had such nice, long hair when they were born." "Daughters are a comfort, but you ought to see my real babies—my boys." When mother got to that subject she needed no other entertainment.

In the company of the little fat German mamma from Omaha mother found a soulmate. Mrs. Engel had sons, too. For hours they rocked and tatted and talked, each independently of the other, each about her own progeny. It could scarcely be called a conversation. It was two monologues.

Just once I protested. "Honest, mom, you make Ned and Sandy ridiculous, talking about them as though they were in rompers."

"You leave me alone," said mother tartly. "When I am home they hector me about calling them pet names and fussing over them. We are among strangers here, it's my vacation, and if I want to spend it talking about my children it's my affair. I'm having a good time."

So I let her alone and for two solid weeks she chatted amiably with all who would listen about her home, her health, her relations, and, most of all, about her "laddies." Mother was going on a conversational debauche. But, after all, it was her vacation.

Late one afternoon I came across the lawn from the tennis court to find mother rocking volubly for a new audience, a tall and superior lady with federation-of-women's clubs and high-minded endeavor written all over her.

"My laddies have never forgotten a single holiday or birthday with a gift—not since they were little shavers," boasted mother. She had not yet seen me coming up the steps, and, anyway, how was she to know that her daughters made a stealthy and lightning tour of the family every night before to remind every one that tomorrow was mother's own special birthday or Valentine's day or Easter.

"Isn't that nice?" smiled the tall and superior lady. "How old are your little boys, Mrs. Dallard?"

"Mother's jaw dropped. For a moment her eyes wavered. I knew she was struggling with her good-orthodox home training. Her glance fell on me. She shot me a beseeching look. And then, in the smallest voice to which I ever heard her descend she said, "Nine and 11."

And, believe it or not, never from that day to this have I heard her call Ned and Sandy her babies.—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, May 30 — What underlies all of the senate pother over publication of a purported "secret" roll call on the Lenroot confirmation is just a new bit of maneuvering by republican irregulars in the age old battle against closed door handling of public affairs.

An instance of more than 85 years ago, when a senator was censured by resolution for having given out information about an executive session in violation of the senate's rules, was cited during the debate.

Probably there are plenty of other even older illustrations of the row liberal minded politicians have always kicked up over star-chamber proceedings by elected representatives of the voters of the country.

Vain Protests.

The Bystander can recall how vehemently the late Senator Lane of Oregon used to assail the practice of senate secrecy on nominations or treaties a dozen years ago.

He, like Senator Caraway of Arkansas today, had the restless habit of prowling about the senate chamber as he talked, hands in trousers pockets. And wandering along the back of the big room, apparently addressing his remarks to the blank wall, Lane would say every time the subject came up:

"Executive sessions, executive session! Those are the rat holes down which the rights of the people slip."

So far as any change of rules was concerned, Lane might just as well have made his complaint to the Washington monument.

Yet in practice much more of executive session proceedings now is formally made public by the senate than used to be the case.

Nearly all votes on treaty ratification, for instance, now are taken in open session. It is only rarely that even the vote on a controversial nomination, either in committee or in the senate, is not divulged officially.

The Lenroot case was an exception. Even before publication of the purported roll call the news writers had covered very fully the substance of the secret session debate on Lenroot. That was just as "secret" as the roll call.

Not Quite "Secret"

Senator Johnson of California, an anti-executive session man, said that in 13 years in the senate he had never known secret proceedings not to be reported promptly in the press.

With a few more years of press gallery observation of the senate to his credit, the Bystander says the same thing. And so far as putting the lid on tight goes, the senate might just as well make a face at the press as attempt disciplinary measures against newspaper men. Unless and until some senator is found to have "leaked" and is expelled therefor the customs of 100 years are apt to carry on regardless.

Up to this writing the only rule breaker actually convicted is the senate rules committee itself. It never has had any right under the rules. Vice President Curtis held without being challenged, to admit newspapermen to the senate floor. So much for the committee's disciplinary gesture at the press.

YOUR HEALTH

A Song of Hate

By L. M. McCormick
Asheville, N. C.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

With 89 cases of typhoid fever located in Asheville, our campaign against the house-fly, reinforced by a campaign against the unsanitary condition of certain parts of our city, especially the unsewered places and the open-backed privy, resulted in 5 years in reducing the number to 17 reported cases. The next year there were 8 reported. The number rose to 13 the following year, but fell to 12 the year after, and in another year to 2.

As typhoid may be considered the index of the health of the people, we think that prevalence or absence of flies may be taken as an index to the fundamental cleanliness of the community.

In breeding experiments, where several thousand flies were hatched on a given date in a large room, which was screened and ventilated and where food and water was supplied, 10 per cent died the first week, 50 per cent were dead at the end of the second week. All but five were dead on the 21st day, and all dead on the 23rd day. But in this case, many natural causes such as dissipation and enemies, were eliminated. This observation, of course, applies only to the summer breeding habits.

For all practical purposes in the field work, we can put the length of a fly's life as two weeks. Many observations in localities ignorantly infected by spreading fly-infected manure in a territory epidemically free from flies have convinced me that two weeks will see the finish of the "swarm" if no other infection occurs, and the same time limit is shown in the effect of a Clean Up and Keep Clean effort in a fly-infected neighborhood. We can promise that the flies will disappear in two weeks, if the motto is faithfully observed.

Much has been said already, and well said about the menace of the fly as a typhoid carrier. On that point our cleverest writers and cartoonists have found the pages of our most influential journals freely opened to their "song of hate." But hate kills no one, not even a fly. It takes effort and persistence to reach the source of our evil.

Swat the fly, swat him before he gets his wings—poison, trap, screen, but above all clean up and keep clean.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Commends the City Government.

Mr. Editor: I read with a great deal of interest your news article concerning the formation of the new "Taxpayers' association".

If this association can stop the wild orgy of spending that usually prevails at our town or city meetings, it will have accomplished much, and result in some real good.

I note with interest that our present government has saved $13,000 of real countable, honest-to-goodness money. And of course this is the taxpayers money. And in addition to all this they have paid back their temporary loans also.

Ought not this fact to interest the new "Taxpayers' Association" greatly, as well as every citizen in our community.

To my mind as a tax-payer it is indeed a creditable and honest effort at efficient and decent government, and ought to be appreciated by every taxpayer and voter also, regardless of party.

When one realizes that the republicans have done so magnificently with only one year of power, they sure deserve unrestrained credit and thanks and a longer term of administration.

If our community can have a continuance of such honest and able endeavor it will be singularly blessed indeed. It is a step in the right direction. And now that Mayor Robbins and his co-officials have shown such aptitude, to all that care to investigate, and that their administration has tried to give the citizens an honest and decent government, and has succeeded in so doing, ought not we, the voters, to signally show our appreciation at the polls next Monday, by voting for the republican ticket and thus for economy?

I think so. I for one intend to do so, and my neighbors have also expressed a like intent.

TAXPAYER AND VOTER.

Burgess Bedtime Story

A NEW USE FOR WINGS

By Thornton W. Burgess

Don't criticize until you know
You've all the facts; and then be slow.
—Dipper the Grebe.

It was a day or two after Peter Rabbit's talk with Dipper the Grebe that Peter for the first time saw him fly. He came from the direction of the Bog River and alighted in the Smiling pool. He alighted right in front of where Peter was sitting.

"Hello, Dipper!" exclaimed Peter. "I saw you flying. That is the first time I have ever seen you in the air. My, you travel fast!"

"That's what these narrow wings are for," replied Dipper. "Narrow wings are usually the fastest wings."

"Oh," said Peter. "I didn't know that."

"Then you have learned something," replied Dipper.

"And did you fly down to the Big river?" asked Peter.

"No," replied Dipper. "I swam down the Laughing brook."

"Why didn't you fly down there?" Peter inquired.

"Because," replied Dipper, "there is hardly room here in the Smiling pool to get into the air. Of course, I could have done it, but it was easier to swim down to the Big river, where there is plenty of room.

Peter thought this over for a few minutes. He scratched his long ears with his long hindfeet, as is his way when he is puzzled. "What do you mean," he asked at last, "by saying there is hardly room?"

"Just that," replied Dipper. "You see, I have to sort of get going on the water before I can get up speed enough to get into the air."

"Can't you jump right up into the air from the water?" demanded Peter. "Mr. Black Duck can. I've seen him jump from the water and I've seen him jump from the land."

"I'm not a Duck," Dipper reminded Peter. "I couldn't get up in the air from the land at all."

"What!" cried Peter in astonishment.

"It's a fact," declared Dipper. "That is one reason I do not go on land. On land I am nearly helpless. I couldn't get into the air to save my life. Any one could catch me there."

"Pooh" said Peter. "I wouldn't want wings like those! I don't see that they are very much use to you, excepting when you are traveling."

"Don't you?" inquired Dipper pleasantly. "Just watch me now."

Dipper dived, and from his position on the bank looking down into the water, Peter could see him under water. He saw something that astonished him. Dipper seemed to be flying through the water. He was using those wings under water, as if he were swimming with them. In a moment he bobbed up on the other side of the Smiling pool and then swam back to where Peter was.

"Do you swim with your wings?" demanded Peter.

Dipper chuckled. "I use them sometimes when I am in a hurry," said he. "They help a lot when I want to catch a fish. Now do you think they are such poor wings?"

"No-o," said Peter slowly. "I guess they are just what you need."

"I don't guess, I know," replied Dipper.

MILK TRAIN DERAILED YESTERDAY A. M. AT KENT

KENT, Conn., May 30.—(AP)— The engineer and fireman in charge of a milk train which was derailed when passing through here early this morning escaped injury by jumping into Hatch's pond, where the engine and first two cars left the rails. The truck attached to the front wheels of the engine collapsed as the train was making a moderate speed through the town, and the locomotive left the rails taking with it the first two cars. Small damage resulted to the engine and cars but the rails were badly wrenched.

May Garden

A shower of green gems on my apple tree
This first morning of May
Has fallen out of the sight, to be
Herald of holiday—
Bright gems of green that, fallen there,
Seem fixed and glowing on the air.

Until a flutter of blackbird wings
Shakes and makes the boughs alive,
And the gems are now no frozen things,
But apple-green buds to thrive
On sap of May garden, how well
The green September globes will fell!

Also my pear tree has its buds,
But they are silver yellow,
Like autumn meadows when the floods
Are silver under willow,
And here shall long and shapely pears
Be gathered while the autumn wears.

And there are 60 daffodills
Beneath my wall
And jealousy it is that kills
This world when all
The spring's behavior here is spent
To make the world magnificent.

Stories That Recall Others

In the Navy

Mysterious Jewelry

Little Helen was very fond of rings and her fingers were always bedecked with all sorts of them. One day after she had visited her aunt she told her mother that she wanted a ring just like auntie's. When asked what kind of a ring auntie wore, she replied, "a musical ring."

"A musical ring?" inquired the mother, "And what kind of a ring is that?"

After turning this over in her mind without a solution, mother got the aunt on the telephone and much to her amusement learned that auntie was wearing a "band" ring.

OBITUARY

Dr. C. I. Faunce.
(Contributed.)

In the death of Dr. C. I. Faunce, in Duxbury, Mass. on the 28th of May, there has passed from our midst a rare soul. Descended from Puritan ancestors, she inherited their many sterling characteristics. In her childhood there were not the facilities for an education now almost lavished upon every child of New England, but a mind as active as hers could not be content without striving for something higher.

Long past the age when a young woman of the present day would have finished her college course and be already entering upon a professional life, Dr. Faunce had just begun her preparation for a medical career. In New York Dr. Emily Blackwell had established "The Woman's Medical college," because at that time women students were not admitted to Bellevue. Dr. Faunce completed the course in three years and graduated the valedictorian of her class. After a year in a maternity hospital in Minneapolis, Minn., she saw an opening at Norwich, and in the fall of 1886 began her practice here.

For many years she was very successful and endeared herself to a host of friends. Her warm heart, full of pity for any suffering made her welcome in many households where her cheer as well as good judgement and skill brought comfort and relief. Of her beauty she seemed wholly unconscious and that very self-forgetfulness was a part of her charm.

Beside a host of friends she leaves a brother L. Carroll Faunce, a sister, Mrs. Helen P. Hill, of Duxbury, Mass., and her three children, Wolcott F. Hill of Boston, Mass., Miss Percy H. Hill and Miss Isador I. Hill of Duxbury. She also leaves a friend, Miss Helen Marshall, with whom she has lived in Norwich, for 42 years and whose many years of devotion have been one of the rare friendships life can offer.

CITIZENS PAY MEMORIAL DAY TRIBUTE TO MEN WHO SERVED TO SAVE THE UNION

COMMANDER GEO. C. CROCKER

Norwich paid honor Thursday to its soldier heroes, with the few surviving veterans of the Civil war members of Sedgwick post, No 1, Grand Army of the Republic, as the central figure of the observance of Memorial day, in which the usual parade and the exercises at the Soldiers' monument at Chelsea parade were conducted.

It was a day of summer heat, reaching to 90 and more in the midday hours, so that the marchers in the parade sweltered and those who rode in automobiles also suffered from the heat, but there was no diminution in the patriotic fervor of the citizens which brought them out in crowds to line the sidewalks along the line of parade. There was a lavish display of flags at places of business and on residences all over the city and the day seemed to have an unusual appeal to the children of the city, as was apparent from the throngs of these coming citizens who were to be seen watching the parade as it passed by or attending at Chelsea parade when the exercises were held.

As has been the custom for several years past now, the Grand Army men, all of them crowding close to or past the four score mark, rode in automobiles in the parade, and eight of the eleven veterans who now constitute the membership of Sedgwick post participated in this way in the parade.

JOHN SERVICE

Gen. Aiken, who is 96, saw the parade from the window of his home on Washington street, Mr. Mitchell was with his daughter, Mrs. E. Porter Rogers in an automobile to see the parade as it passed by and Mr. Shedd whose home is in Preston City, did not come in for the parade.

Parade Formation.

Capt. Charles Colt, parade marshal for the day, got the line moving from the Buckingham Memorial shortly after 10 o'clock, moving over the assigned ling of march to the position on Chelsea parade in front of the Soldiers' monument where the stand, draped in bunting, was erected from which to conduct the exercises.

The parade moved in the following formation:

Marshal, Capt. Charles Colt
Aides, Capt. W. G. Tarbox, Capt. Herbert F. Burdick, Lieut. Elmer Jewett
Platoon of Police
Swahn's Military Band
First Battalion, Headquarters and Combat Train, 192 F. A. C. N. G.
Battery B, 192 F. A. C., N. G.
Maj. R. S. Griswold Command, U. S. W. V.
East Side Drum Corps
Robert O. Fletcher Post, A. L.
Richard Hourigan Post, V. F. W.
Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary
St. Patrick's Boy Scouts' Drum Corps
Boy Scouts
Members Grand Army of the Republic in Autos
Gold Star Mothers in Autos
Float, Clara Barton Tent, No. 7, Daughters of Union Veterans
Members of City and Town Governments in Autos

After a selection by Swahn's band to begin the exercises, Commander George C. Crocker of Sedgwick post delivered his opening address and prayer was offered by Rev. A. N. Foster, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Universalist, who was the speaker of the day.

The Star Spangled Banner was rendered by the band, while all stood at attention, and the Memorial day orders were read by George A. Turner, a past department commander of the Spanish war veterans and a past post commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Mr. Turner also read the mortuary record of Sedgwick post for the past year, which contained only one name, that of Thomas Wormsley '79, of Co. F, 29th Conn. Volunteers, who died in this city July 29, 1928.

This was followed by Lincoln's Gettysburg address, delivered by George A. Keppler, and the decoration of the Soldiers' monument by Mr. Turner. The response was given by John H. Barnes, commander of Sedgwick camp, No. 4, Sons of Union Veterans, and was followed by the Memorial day address given by Rev. Mr. Foster.

Memorial Day Address.

Rev. Mr. Foster's topic was "The Command of Patriotism" and he spoke as follows:

This Memorial day observance is marked by special features which distinctively mark it from other special days. The exultant joy of the Christmas observance within the walls of the church marks a religious commemorative service. The pride and ambition marking the "Independence day" observance are of a patriotic nature. Memorial day observance partakes of both natures; it is patriotic; it is held under the auspices of Sedgwick Post, No. 1, G. A. R., and the allied patriotic organizations and with the approving interest of the officials of the town and city governments. We are no less certain that our observance partakes of a religious character. We come to this historic ground as to a shrine of devotion; the history of Norwich is interwoven with the traditions of this place for over 250 years; we come here to honor the memory of our patriotic dead; both veterans and school children have already strewn flowers on the graves of such; some of such dead died peacefully in their homes long years after the tumult of war was over; some died amid the wreckage and anguish of the battlefield; some in distant swamps unknown and some died at sea; we would remember all this day; wherever Americans may be found—here or on the banks of the Potomac or the broad prairies of Illinois or on the sunny slopes of California or at Manila Bay or in populous Paris, America pauses this day from routine to commemorate the service and to honor the memory of her patriotic dead; "ever returning spring, Trinity sure to me you bring, Lilac blooming perennial; drooping star in the west and thought of him I love."

The lesson of this day's observance is summarized in the one word of sacrifice. Recently I visited one of the chapels of the great cathedral of "St. John, the Divine" in New York city. I lingered before the sculptured memorial commemorating the service of the men of Harvard university in the World war; the figure is that of an English crusader of the twelfth century lying prostrate upon a Latin cross; his head rests in the laps of a woman; the countenance of her upturned face blends the grief of loss and the consecration of purpose; she has given her son and the son has given his life in sacrifice to a cause adjudged most holy to him. The memorial is of chaste beauty and of appealing charm and symbolizes sacrifice.

Memorial day repeats to us the lesson of sacrifice. Patriotism commands such sacrifice. First, the sacrifice incident to the support of the government in the emergency of war. Our national life is portrayed in two succeeding pictures. First, that of the pioneer and colonial period; the era of exploration and thrilling adventure afield when the fathers were led on by the lure of the west to find vast plains; majestic rivers; fertile soil and rich mines and forests and towering mountain slopes and craggy peaks; this picture must include the scene of Israel Putnam—frontiersman and soldier of neighboring Windham county—as he leaves his plow in the furrow of the field and hurries to Cambridge and takes command of the colonial army at the battle of Bunker Hill; these embattled farmers who went into battle in their shirt sleeves and pledged their "lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor" to the cause of national independence sacrificed of things most precious that a new nation might come to life.

The second picture is that of the great industrial period of the 19th century; when our fathers were opening canals and building railroads to span a mighty continent, and establishing mills and factories and schools and colleges and churches and homes and all that goes to make the outward life of a great people and a mighty nation. This picture too, must include a scene of the great Civil war; in such a scene, the figure of Abraham Lincoln towers as a giant among the leaders of the peoples of the earth; among his supporters we eagerly mark Governor Buckingham whose family has found representation on this Memorial day platform through the changes of the intervening three score of years—and the early volunteer soldiers Terry and Hawley—known to some of you as face to face. The men of that day were not without pride in America's accomplishments and opportunities and contrasted our freedom with the irksome restraints of Europe—"Have the elder races halted? do they droop over their lessons? We take up the task eternal and the burdens and the lessons!"

And as a cutting challenge to the despotisms of the Old World, American reformers exclaimed—"He's true to God, who's true to man and they are slaves most base whose love of Right is for themselves and not for all the Race."

With the challenge of such idealism ringing in our ears, we pass to the thought of the complexities and dangers of our own twentieth century generation and ask ourselves if we are altogether true to the vision and loyal to the principles of our fathers?

A generation whose inventive skill has made former luxuries to become as common place and whose deft insight has made the very air to be vibrant with the messages of telephone and wireless and radio and has so contracted space and so enlarged opportunity as to make all the peoples of the world to be neighbors one to another; whether we wish to or not we are compelled to consider the condition of other peoples the world over. It is no longer possible to live in isolation and the way of a new leadership opens to those who are alert and resourceful. New and corresponding dangers confront us at every turn as the number of our contacts with other peoples has so swiftly and so vastly multiplied, and we are compelled to learn over and again of the art of living together in peace and in mutual helpfulness.

The questions involved have added pertinence when applied to the policies of the war system.

The old indictment against the system yet stands. It is so costly, both in money and in men; it is so futile as a remedy as it has commonly decided, not the righteousness of a cause but the economic exhaustion of a people. Its past prominence does not guarantee its unending prominence. We yet have brutal instincts but we do not yet live in the jungle. Society outgrows some things. I recall standing on the modern battlefields of Belleau Woods and Rheims and witnessing the chaos and the awful desolations of vast areas—the scenes of so much of concentrated human anguish—and asking, can it continue that thinking men shall expect a rational solution of a problem amid such surroundings?

We are learning more and more of the art of cooperation; we cooperate to prevent the spread of contagious disease; to regulate the labor supply; we do also, in the interests of education and scientific research and of religious missionary appeal.

The higher patriotism commands such cooperation just as truly as domestic life counsels community cooperation without the weakening of the essentials; indeed, such become even stronger as the area of contact is enlarged.

Of late, America seems to have considered her fears and consulted her possible commercial advantage rather than her idealism and her heritage of the great principle of federation accounted so precious and so binding in the thought of the fathers; who cares for an American that seeks safety first and has no response for the challenge of adventure?

The words of Walt Whitman ring true:

"Was the road of late so toilsome?
Did we stop discouraged on our way;
Till with sound of trumpet,
Far, far off the day break call,
Hark! How loud and clear,
I hear it wind;
Swift, to the head of the army,
Swift, spring to your places,
Pioneers, O, Pioneers!"

America and Taps

The exercises were brought to a close after the conclusion of the address by the speaker with the band

LUTHERAN SYNODS TO ACCOMPLISH MERGER

An event in which German Lutheran churches throughout the state will be deeply interested will take place at Albany, N. Y., next Wednesday, when the hopes and desires of the past decade will be fulfilled by the consummation at St. John's Lutheran church, Albany, N. Y., of the merger of three Lutheran synods serving New York state, New England and northern New Jersey. The synods are the ministerium of New York, organized in 1786; the Synod of New York, dating back to 1830, and the Synod of New York and New England, established in 1902. The body will be the United Lutheran Synod of New York, a district governing organization of the United Lutheran church in America.

On June 3d and 4th, each of the merging bodies will meet for the last time in separate conventions. The New York ministerium and the New York and New England synod will hold their meetings in separate auditoriums in St. John's church, Albany, and the New York synod will hold its 100th convention at Trinity Lutheran church, Amsterdam. On Tuesday evening, June 4th, that convention will adjourn to Albany, after which a formal centennial observation will be held with the members of the other two synods as guests. The New York synod itself is the result of a merger twenty-one years ago of the Hartwick synod established in 1830, the Frankean synod established in 1837, and the New York and New Jersey synod organized in 1871. The birth date of the New York and New England synod is September, 1902, when a group of exclusive English congregations withdrew from the New York ministerium which was then largely German in emphasis, in order to establish their own work on a more stable basis.

The New York ministerium, oldest of the bodies, brings into the merger 145 congregations, 168 pastors and a baptized membership of 96,864. The New York synod has 160 congregations, 180 pastors and a baptized membership of 57,700. The New York and New England synod numbers 85 congregations, 106 pastors and 53,444 members. The United Lutheran synod of New York combining these figures will have 390 congregations, 454 pastors, and 208,008 baptized members. Its strength will be greater than that of any Protestant body in the northeastern states, and in the United Lutheran church in America it will stand second only to the Pennsylvania ministerium in point of personnel and numbers. The total valuation of property owned by the congregations is $26626,516, exclusive of the educational institutions at Hartwick seminary, N. Y.; Oneonta, N. Y., and Grymes Hill, S. I., N. Y., while the total annual expenditures of the congregations amounts to $3,648,775. The merger commission will recommend that the new synod adopt a budget of $450,000 for the coming year, $300,000 of which will go to the United Lutheran church in America for the maintenance of educational work, home and foreign missionary enterprises, inner mission operations and the like, while $150,000 will be expended by the new synod for the maintenance and furtherance of its own projects.

When the merger convention opens at 2 o'clock on Monday afternoon Rev. Theo. O. Fosselt, Albany, president of the incorporators of the new synod, will take the chair. After a devotional service and the certification of the 454 clerical and 290 lay delegates present, the formal vote on merger will be taken. The recommendations of the merger commission will be received and officers will be elected by the new synod who will be installed and take office at once. The newly elected officers will include a full-time president, a full-time secretary, who will serve also as secretary of benefiscence, and a treasurer.

PARADE AND TRAFFIC MADE BUSY POLICE DAY

The Norwich police force had a busy day on its hands Thursday with the parade to handle and the attendant traffic difficulties, but Chief George Linton was glad to be able to report by nightfall that there had been no accidents and no one had suffered any injuries as the result of the observance of the holiday.

Sergeant John H. Casey, with Officers T. Driscoll, Fenton, P. Driscoll, Farrell, Pounch, McAvoy Gwiazdowsky and Calkins made up the squad which was assigned to parade duty and made a fine appearance at the head of the line. Officers Riley and Dunlon had the duty of clearing the way in advance of the parade.

Traffic duty in the neighborhood of Chelsea parade was in the hands of Sergeant Morgan, with Officers Ryan, Coburn and Sullivan.

Sergeant Delaney was in charge of traffic duty with the rest of the force in the business section and as soon as the line of march had passed the Wauregan house corner, these officers were transferred to the section around Chelsea parade.

As soon as the line had left Chelsea parade on the return trip all the policemen were transferred down town, the patrol wagon being used to make the shifts.

PLANES ARE TO FLY AT THE BEEBE FARM

In cooperation with the chamber of commerce and for the promotion of interest in aviation, the Red Wing flying service is to fly a new Standard and Challenger here from Woonsocket Sunday and will give a flight over the city at noon on Monday. They have plans to remain at Norwich for two weeks and are to be located at the Beebe farm on Harland road between Taftville and Norwich Town. A parachute jump every afternoon and stunt flying are to be features of their work while here, and one of the stunts which it is expected to arrange is an aerial wedding for which Lee and Clegg is to present the rings for the bride and groom and the Gilbert Furniture company has made the offer of a walnut colored cedar chest.

Roy Ahearn is chief pilot with the outfit. In conversation with members of the aviation committee here last Monday, Commissioner Knox very highly recommended Ahearn as a dependable and experienced pilot. The company will bring two four-passenger planes here.

DEMAR WINS DUWELL TEN-MILE RACE FROM FIELD OF 86 DISTANCE MEN

Running in a sweltering heat and over sun-scorched pavements Clarence DeMar, veteran marathoner of the Melrose American Legion post of Melrose, Mass., won the annual Duwell A. A. ten-mile road race here yesterday afternoon. De Mar's time was 58 minutes and 14 seconds. He was closely followed by Albert "Whitey" Michelson of the Millrose A. A. of New York, who finished 13 seconds in back of DeMar. In third place came Max Lamp, former German 10,000 meter champion, now a member of the Millrose A. A., who was 20 seconds behind Michelson. Mel Porter of the St. Joseph C. C. of Newark, N. J., was fourth and Arthur Gavrin, N. Y. U. student running under the colors of the Millrose A. A. was fifth, Gavrin having set the pace for the eight miles.

DeMar ran a steady race and finished in good condition as did Michelson and Lamp, while the others were pretty well fagged out from the gruelling grind in the heat.

Arthur Rollband running under the colors of the Duwell A. A. was the first local boy to finish the race. He crossed the line in 26th position. He was closely followed by Ed Antoofian, another local boy. Haggerty another member of the Duwell A. A. was in 33rd place while John Boldrighine of the Duwell A. A. was the last to cross the line.

The field numbered 86 runners of whom 39 finished. The pack was off at the gun with Lawrence Wilcox of the Hope A. C. of Westerly, R. I., taking the lead and setting a terrific pace. He led the field almost to the one mile mark when he was completely run out. At the first mile Fred Ward of Millrose A. A. swung into the lead closely followed by Charles Prestia, a teammate, and Max Lamp, also of the Millrose team.

Just after the mile mark had been passed Arthur Gavrin of Millrose A. A. came from behind and took the lead which he held until passed at the 3 1-2 mile mark. Corydon Jordan of Brewer, Me. running unattached was close on the heels of Gavrin at this time and clung to him for the first five miles when he was forced out by the heat.

After the third mile the field started to thin out with Gavrin maintaining a lead of 100 yards and running very easily. As the four mile mark was reached three runners, Gavrin, Robert Hickey of Tufts college and Jordan were well bunched, only a few yards separating them. Reaching the half-way mark Gavrin had increased his lead to 300 yards with Jordan in second place and Ted Lawson, Cygnet A. C., East Portchester, in third place, having passed Hickey just before the fifth mile.

At Franklin Square on the second lap Jordan attempted to close the gap between him and Gavrin and in the spurt completely exhausted himself and at Grove street dropped out of the race.

DeMar who had been running easily in about seventh position started to move up as the runners went up McKinley avenue and at the seventh mile was running in second place. Max Lamp in the meantime had come up to thirp place and was followed by Michelson, Fred Calvetti of Newark, Bennie O'Hara, Dorchester, Mass., and Fred Ward, all running strong and only a few yards apart.

The pack swung into Lafayette street well bunched with the exception of Gavrin who had a lead of nearly 300 yards over DeMar. Passing the 8 mile station DeMar started to close the gap between he and Gavrin who was then beginning to feel the strain. As the runners came down Sachem street, Gavrin slowed to a walk, staggered but took up the pace again. DeMar was now less than fifty yards in the rear. Gavrin a short distance from the Masonic Temple faltered again and came to a complete stop. DeMar raced passed him into the lead, Michelson and Lamp also passing Gavrin before he was able to continue.

Leading the pack down Washington street DeMar did not let out but maintained a close watch on Michelson who was running about 150 yards in the rear. When Michelson spurted DeMar would keep pace with him. Thus it was that they finished, DeMar, Michelson, Lamp and Porter who had passed Gavrin in the ninth mile.

The runers finished as follows:

Millrose Wins Team Prize

The Millrose A. A. of New York by finishing five men won the team prize for the race. The remarkable thing is that all the Millrose men finished within the first ten places which is something unusual in a field of 86.

The field was remarkably fast although the time was not as fast as last year buy three minutes. Never has such a select field of runners been entered in the ten-mile event in this city. Clarence DeMar, noted marathoner and Olympic runner, said after the race that in all his days of running he had never seen such a fast field and so many top notch runners as ran yesterday.

Banquet to Runners and Officials

Following the race at five o'clock a turkey dinner was served at Odd Fellows hall for the runners, officials and city and town officers. The dinner was served by the Rebekahs and covers were laid for 175. Music was furnished by the Mohegan orchestra and Fred G. Pothero was the songleader for the singing. Many of the runners rendered solos and the boys could sing just as well as they could run.

At the conclusion of the banquet Mayor Lee Roy Robbins expressed the welcome of the city to the visiting runners and said that the city was honored by their presence and hoped that they would return again next year. First Selectman William S. Murray also spoke and expressed the same sentiments fro mthe town. Mayor Robbins then awarded the prizes to the winners. The first fifteenrunners to cross the finish line were given either cups or trophies while medals were awarded to the next twelve to finish. There was a special award to each member of the team winning the team prize. For Norwich runners three prizes were awarded, Rollband getting first, Antoofian second and Haggerty third. In accepting their prizes the runners expressed their pleasure at being able to compete in the race and each and every one said that nowhere had they received such hospitality as they had in Norwich and all hoped to return next year.

The Duwell club as a whole is very greatful to the people of Norwich, the merchants and others who either gave prizes or in any way helped to make the affair a success.

INDIANS WIN AND LOSE TO SOX BY CLOSE SCORE

CHICAGO, May 30—(AP)—The White Sox and Cleveland Indians broke even in their holiday double bill, the visitors taking the first by 6 to 5 and the home talent the night-cap by 3 to 2.

Great fielding by Bibb Falk stopped the Sox in the first affair. The second was decided in the eighth when Kamm and Clancy singled and were driven home on a double by Watwood.

Ted Lyons held the Indians to nine hits in the opener. They were handled to slightly better advantage than the dozen safeties the Sox obtained off Willis Hudlin. Red Faber scored his second successive victory in the second contest while Ken Holloway was the victim.

KEECH COPS RACE; ONE DRIVER KILLED

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 30.—(AP)—Death and destruction were strewn in the wreckage of that scorching torch called the 500-mile automobile sweepstakes at the Indianapolis Motors Speedway today.

With a record smashing crowd of 160,000 viewing the spectacle Ray Keech, daring 28 year old driver of Philadelphia bounced his tiny eight cylinder racing creation over the finish tape, a winner in 5:07:25:42. Louis Meyer of Los Angeles, winner of the 1928 race, finished second, nearly six minutes behind Keech with Jimmy Gleason, another Philadelphia driver, pulling up in third place.

Twelve of the 33 drivers who wheeled their cars out for the start, survived the terrific test of speed, Keech averaged 97.585 miles an hour, a performance that did not even threaten speed records for the race.

The race resulted in the death of William Spence, 24 year old driver of Los Angeles, and the miraculous escape of five other drivers. Spence, bounding over the 2 1-2 mile brick course at terrific speed was killed when on his fortieth mile, his car turned over as he was shooting out of a turn and going into the back stretch.

The car had struck a retaining wall on a skid, threw Spence into the air in the middle of the track, turned completely over righted itself, and then came to a stop far down the track.

Spence was thrown clear of the car, but he sustained a fractured skull. Spence died on the way to the hospital inside the monster racing grounds.

The other drivers continued their battle to win their share of the $10,000 prize.

Keech, as a result of his victory, was enriched to the extent of about $40,000. He won $20,000 as first prize, $5,100 in lap prizes and the balance in cash prizes offered by accessory manufacturers. Today's race was Keech's second major competition. He finished fourth in the 1928 race, coming here after setting a new world's record of 207.55 miles an hour on the beach at Daytona, Fla. Before that he was a small-time dirt track driver around Philadelphia.

Keech took the lead at 392 miles when Meyers, who was leading at the time was forced to the pits to replace a front tire that was torn to threads and to replenish fuel and oil. Meyers was forced to remain in the pits six minutes and 45 seconds due to his inability to get his motor started again. While Meyers was frantically working over the motor, Keech shot into the lead, retaining it to the end when he got the checkered flag declaring him the winner.

Gosh, wasn't yesterday a hectic day?

Between parades, road races, and ball games there wasn't much time to do anything but swelter with the heat.

Say did you folks see that road race. Wasn't it a pip. But—Can you imagine anybody running ten miles in yesterday's heat for a cup. And what can you put in a cup nowadays after you get it?

I like sports, and I like to play a game of cards now and then but a ten-mile run ain't my idea of sports at all—that's work.

I says to one of the fellers that run in the race, Gavrin, I think it was, "what kick do you get outa running like that. He says its like smoking cigarettes and eating candy, its a habit. I guess that's as good an answer as any.

Say I would got in one of them runs if there was a thousand bucks at the end. Not me. But those lads run and believe me they like it.

Then I went up to the Academy to see what was alleged to have been a ball game but in my estimation it was a slaughter. Them Wildcats looked like mere kittens to me.

Say, honestly, didja ever see a worse exhibition from a bunch of boys who can really play nice baseball? It must have been a case of stage-fright and being licked by a reputation before the game started.

Gosh, I could pan them boys pretty hard but I ain't got the heart. They must have learned something in yesterday's game and the beating may do 'em more good in the long run than a win.

Anybody who had seen the exhibitions put up against Westerly and Windham knew they was riding to a fall. Them two games was won by sheer luck against weak teams.

Yesterday there was a decided lack of pep and fight in that club. They were listless and down in the mouth. Gosh I was disgusted and left in the middle of the game. Perhaps we expect too much of a bunch of youngsters.

PIRATES MAINTAIN LEAD BY SPLITTING WITH CUBS

PITTSBURGH, May 30.—(AP)—Pittsburgh broke even with Chicago in a double holiday card today and maintained its lead of one game in the National league. The Cubs won the morning game 5 to 1 and the Corsairs took the afternoon affair 4 to 0. A crowd of 60,000 saw the two games.

In the morning, Art Nehf allowed the Pirates but one run in eight innings. He left the game in the ninth because of the intense heat. Guy Bush finished.

The afternoon affray was a pitchers' battle between Root and Grimes for seven innings. The Waner brothers penetrated Root's defense in the eighth, Lloyd getting a three bagger and Paul following with a home run. Two more runners crossed the plate before the side was retired. It was the only inning in which either team scored.

Grimes hurled masterful ball for the Pirates. It was his eighth straight win of the season.

REDS AGAIN DROP TWO TO SECOND PLACE CARDS

ST. LOUIS, May 30—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals regained second place in the three cornered National league race by taking both games of a double header from the Cincinnati Reds today 5 to 1 and 8 to 2, on top of a double victory over the Reds yesterday. The Pittsburgh Pirates, by splitting a double header with the Chicago Cubs, retained league leadership while the Cubs dropped to third place, a game behind the Cards.

Grover Cleveland Alexander pitched for the champions and had the Reds at his mercy throughout the first game. The single Cincinnati run resulted from an error. Chick Hafey hit his tenth homer of the season in the sixth. Two men were on base.

Jesse Haines allowed seven scattered hits in the second game and struck out four men.

Black Majesty a Winner

BELMONT RACE TRACK, New York, May 30.—(AP)—Black Majesty, a 12 to 1 shot from W. R. Coes table, today won the Juvenile Belmont Park Memorial day feature for two-years olds. Crack Brigade bearing the colors of T. M. Cassidy was second, one length back of Black Majesty and one and one half lengths in front of H. P. Whitney's Frumper.

ACADEMY'S WINNING STREAK BROKEN AS HARDING SCORES EASY WIN, 14-3

Harding high of Bridgeport found the Academy's defense chuck full of holes Thursday afternoon at the campus and, behind the fine twirling of Sam Dizenzo they rushed through to a 14 to 3 victory before 5,000 fans. It was the first defeat of the year for the Academy and it set them back considerably in their state title chase, at the same time installing Harding as almost sure title holder this year.

The Wildcats were in their worst form, making seven miserable errors, most of them coming when they accounted for a run or two. Butsy Weisgraber pitched nice ball for the Academy but had his hands tied with such poor support. Butsy and probably Anso Tombari in left field and Capt. Jack Marks in right, were the only ones that can't be blamed for the loss of the game. Tombari made the prettiest catch of the day, one that he had to come way in back of short for.

Harding Deserved To Win.

In direct contrast to the Academy team, the Harding bunch played fine, heads-up baseball and deserved to win, although they earned probably about half their runs. With Dizenzo fanning 12 of the Academy team and getting almost flawless support, there just wasn't any chance for the Academy to make a showing after they had proceeded to toss the game away. They did, however, stage feeble rallies in the seventh and eighth innings to escape a shutout.

Harding scored three in the second, one in the fifth and three in the sixth before staging a big blow-off for seven runs in the seventh. Cholko, with two doubles and a single in five trips to the plate, was the leading hitter and also shone in the field.

Just An Off-Day.

It was a sorry exhibition for the big crowd and many of them started drifting out by the seventh inning. Of course, the boys can't win them all, but nobody thought the end of the winning streak would bring such a disaster. The team was bound to crack and they did it with emphasis yesterday.

Probably they will be back in shape to play decent ball for Lloyd Jarvis and his Holy Cross Freshmen Saturday at the campus. Lloyd will pitch for the Crusaders and the N. F. A. starting selection is unknown.

After Harding had put men on bases in the first two innings, they broke through to score in the third. Chanda walked as a starter. Schrieber sacrificed. Carroll hit one to LaCroix, who fumbled and the ball also went through Fagan in center field, allowing Chanda to score and Carroll to reach third. Cholko got his second double to left field and Carroll scored. Lukachik fanned but Dizenzo hit one down to short and when Cummings mused it up for Gibbs, Cholko came in. Harding had one more in the fifth when Carroll walked, Cholko fanned, but when Carroll moved on to second and third on passed balls, Lukachik singled to left, scoring him.

Harding continued to run up the score with three more in the sixth. With one away, Wozny doubled to right field. Kane singled, scoring Wozny and took second. Chanda hit to Gibbs who threw to Cummings and Kane was out. Schrieber was safe on Arico's error and Chanda scored. Carroll walked and Cholko scored Schrieber with a single.

Harding Runs Wild.

The big inning came in the seventh when 11 men went to the plate. Dizenzo opened it and was safe on LaCroix's wild toss over first on a slow roller. Graham hit to Gibbs and Dizenzo beat the throw to third, everybody being safe. Graham stole second, Wozny walked, Kane singled, scoring Dizenzo and Graham. Weisgraber was then replaced by Fagan, Chanda hit to Sherry, who was playing second, he fumbled and Wozny and Kane scored. Schrieber sacrificed. Fagan to Arico, and Chanda went from first to third. Carroll singled, scoring Chanda and Cholko was safe on interference. Fontaine's tipping of the bat, Lukachik flied out to Tombari. Tombari making a nice catch and Dizenzo lined a single to left. Graham grounded out to Gibbs to end the slaughter.

N. F. A. Scores Three.

The Academy got two in their half. Fontaine singled to center and took second on a passed ball. Marks fanned but Sherry walked. Arico singled to center, scoring Fontaine. Gibbs hit to second and when Kane at short dropped the throw for a force, Sherry scored. Cummings lined out to center.

In the eighth the Academy scored once more and Dizenzo seemed to be weakening a bit. LaCroix singled to right. Fagan fouled out but, after LaCroix had stolen second, Tombari singled into right and LaCroix scored. Fontaine flied out but Marks singled to center and took second on the throw to catch Tombari, going to third. throw to catch Tombara going to third. Harding went out in order in the last two innings and the Academy did that in the ninth. Score:

The break finally came. By losing the Academy upheld a tradition that no high school team in Connecticut ever goes through an extensive schedule undefeated. The team had been playing on such a fine edge the past week or so protecting its unbeaten record that they were bound to crack, although their supporters would have wished it hadn't come in such an important game.

The crowd was probably a record for the local field. They were here, there and everywhere, probably around 5,000.

Had the Academy started hitting Dizenzo earlier and they themselves put on a decent exhibition, it would have been a different story.

Weisbrader got a big hand as he left the game. A lot of it wasn't his fault. He has done yeoman service for the Academy this year. Never mind, Butsy, you'll have another chance at them in 1930.

Now that the streak has snapped, the team should play its usual good brand of ball against the Holy Cross freshman Saturday. Another big crowd is expected then for the boys still have a great record.

Harding should have the state title this year unless the unforeseen happens and they lose again.

This was Dizenzo's third shot at the Academy as he lost in 1927 and 1928, in great hurling duals against Lloyd Jarvis.

HOLY NAME AND SHYMA TEAMS SPLIT IN HOLIDAY PROGRAM

The Holy Name society team of Jewett City and the Shyma club of Taftville split even in their Memorial day double header, the Jewett City team taking the morning game 9 to 8 in 12 innings, while the Shyma club turned the tables and won 2 to 0 in the afternoon. Both games were closely contested and provided plenty of thrills for the large crowds that appeared at the games.

Sammy Raymond and Lemieux pitched for the Shyma club in the morning game, Raymond being relieved in the second inning. Liberty went the entire route for the Holy Name team. The afternoon contest was a pitching battle between R. Vachon of the Jewett City club and Pete Lucier of the Shyma team. Each allowed but three hits, Lucier fanned 16 men. The scores:

GIANTS WIN TWO GAMES BEFORE CROWD OF 55,000

NEW YORK, May 30—(AP)—The Giants won both games of the Decoration day double header from the Robins at the Polo Grounds this afternoon before a roaring crowd of 55,000, the largest ever to witness a baseball fete at the historic field. The first game, a see-saw thriller, was decided in the last half of the ninth when the home team scored twice to win by 8 to 7, but the clan McGraw rode in front all the way in the second, triumphing by 15 to 6.

Each side used three pitchers in the first game which saw the men of McGraw twice come from behind. Home runs by Travis Jackson and Bob O'Farrell gave the Giants three runs and an edge of one in the home half of the eighth, but this advantage was replaced by a deficit when Johnny Frederick hit for the circuit in the Broklyn section of the ninth with one man on base. The Giants then turned on their winning rally.

Max Carey prevented his left ankle in rounding first in the ninth inning of the first game, and had to be carried from the field. Harvey Hendrick hit safely in the first engagement, running his streak to twenty-five consecutive games, but failed in the nightcap.

YANKEES DROP BOTH GAMES TO SENATORS

WASHINGTON, May 30—(AP)—The Washington Senators continued their tactics of regaining against New York percentage points lost to the Athletics by trimming the Yankees in the holiday double-bill today, 8 to 5 and 4 to 3.

A ninth inning rally against Johnson, Moore and Zachary good for five hits and three runs gave the Senators the second contest after Hadley had been driven from the mound. They pounded Miller Huggins' once brilliant left-hander, Herb Pennock, and Thomas for the first victory. The Senators got 26 hits in the two games to 14 for New York.

The double defeat of the world champions, coupled with the double victory of the Athletics, dropped the Yankees to a position seven and one-half games behind the Macks. The Hugmen also dropped back into a virtual tie with Detroit, but retained third place by a margin of a few percentage points because of having played fewer games.

Buddy Myer hit safely in both games, extending his streak to 24 consecutive contests. He delayed hitting in the nightcap until the ninth when he aided the Senatorial uprising with a safe blow. He has one more game to go to tie the season's mark of 25 for Harvey Hendrick, which ended today.

PHILS DIVIDE HONORS WITH SLIPPING BRAVES

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—(AP)—The Phillies and Boston Braves split the holiday day attraction here today, the Braves taking the morning fray 8 to 7, while in the afternoon three Boston pitchers were laced 11 to 5. The Phillies whaled out 19 hits, four of which were home runs.

Chuck Klein hit his 10th and 11th of the season while O'Doul and Friberg also hit circuit drives.

In the morning fray, Don Hurst hit his seventh homer of the 1929 campaign.

CUBANS NO MATCH FOR HENNESSEY AND VAN RYN

DETROIT, May 30— (AP) —Uncle Sam's pair of tennis Johnnies, Johnny Hennessey of Indianapolis and Johnny Van Ryn of East Orange, N. J., went marching on in double-time today, all but clinching victory for the United States in the American zone Davis cup finals against Cuba.

Van Ryn scored the easiest victory today, vanquishing Gustavo Vollmer 6-0, 6-1, 6-1, but Hennessey who decided to experiment his chop and forehand strokes when he saw an easy victory, was more extended, winning 6-0, 6-3, 6-4, over Captain Ricardo Morales.

Blue Larkspur Wins

NEW YORK, May 30.—(AP)— Blue Larkspur, E. R. Bradley's Kentucky derby candidate, today won the Withers stakes at Belmont park. Chestnut Oak from the Oak Ridge stable took down second money after leading to the final stride, with third going to George D. Widener's Jack High.

AMERICA'S BIG THREE IN THE QUARTER-FINALS

PARIS, May 30.—(AP)—America's big three in the French tennis championships, consisting of Bill Tilden and Frank Hunter in the men's singles and Helen Wills, defending the women's crown, all were bracketed in the quarter-finals today.

With the main tests still to come, Tilden staged one of his old-fashioned spurts to dispose of his youthful protege, Wilbur (Junior) Coen in five sets, 3-6, 6-7, 6-1, 6-1, 6-0. Hunter had comparatively little difficulty overcoming the Austrian star Franz Matejka, 6-0, 2-6, 6-1, 6-4. Miss Wills who reached the quarter-finals yesterday, had a day of idleness in preparation for her quarter-final match with Madame Helene Lafourie of France tomorrow.

In the men's competition tomorrow Tilden is paired with Baron Hubert de Morpurgo, ace of the Italian Davis cup team. Hunter meets Jean Borotra of France.

The remaining quarter-finalists include the other French "musketeers" —Rene Lacoste, Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon—in addition to Baron von Kehrling of Hungary. None experienced difficulties in their advance. Cochet disposing of the German, Hane Moldenhauer, while Borotra and Lacoste eliminated rival countrymen, Christian Boussus and Paul Feret, respectively.

The survivors in the women's singles, besides Miss Wills and Madame Lafaurie, are Eileen Bennett and Mrs Michael Watson of England, Bobby Heine and Ethel Neave of South Africa, Madame Rene Mathieu of France and Fraulein Cecelia Aussem of Germany.

FEW CHANGES EXPECTED IN YALE VARSITY CREW

GALES FERRY, Conn., May 30.—(AP)—After bearing the heat of the sun's rays this morning the four Yale crews were unable to take to the water again until six o'clock tonight because of rough water. Under the direction of Coach Ed Leader, the varsity and junior varsity crews stroked two and a half miles to the submarine base and then rowed back. Racing starts were practiced Leader refraining from having his pupils "hit it up."

It was the opinion that few changes, if any, would be made in the varsity shell and that Leader will likely stand "pat" on the "jayvee" lineup. The seating of the freshmen and combination boats, which have not shown much strength so far this season, will likely be subject to change.

Dr. C. C. Fry, university health official, arrived in camp today to supervise the diet of the crew members. Examinations will start tomorrow and will continue until June 8. C. S. (Pat) Osbourne, freshman football coach and instructor in history, will prepare the lessons.

HEAVY HITTING TRIMS BOSTON IN BOTH GAMES

BOSTON, May 30.—(AP)—The Athletics hit fiercely to win both games of a double header, 9-2 9-3, from the Red Sox here today. They have won 14 out of their last 15 games and took the series from the Red Sox three games to one.

Hale hit a double and three singles in the first game and Simmons a home run and two singles in the second. Bayne relieved Russell in the box for the Red Sox in the eighth inning of the first contest and Ruffing went the distance for the Sox in the second. Lefty Grove was in the box for the Athletics for the first game and Quinn pitched the second.

A double play in each game, both begun by Rothrock, Red Sox center fielder, after difficult catches of fly balls, were the fielding features.

Foxx, Philadelphia first baseman and leader of the American league batting, ran his string of consecutive games in which he has hit safely to 14 by hits in each contest.

FARMERS MUST KEEP THEIR FEET ON THE GROUND.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

The most flattering compliment old John Farmer ever received in the course of his long life came to him in a letter yesterday. He is so proud of it that he simply can't keep it to himself. "A pleasure shared is a joy doubled." Where have I read or heard that? Whatever its source, it is an assured truth.

Furthermore, what's the gain in being given a bright feather for your cap, if you can't wear it more or less cockily in the presence of your friends—or your enemies?

The letter was from an old clerical friend with whom, in the days of his active ministry, John used to discuss both the deep and the high things of life. Since John has retired from the cultivation of cabbages and Clericus from the harvesting of souls, the two old friends have kept up a more or less desultory correspondence.

To both has come, under the ripening influences of increasing years and waxing wisdom, a mellowing sense of relativity. By that I mean no reference to the incomprehensible maunderings of an Einstein among the higher mathematics. Instead, I mean something perfectly comprehensible to the wayfaring man, though he be what Einstein might think a fool. I mean the sense that practically everything we know or think we know is relative to the 10,000 things we don't know, and know that we don't—I mean the sense that nine-tenths of our disputes and arguments are relative, not to the thing argued about, but to our points of view—I mean the sense that most of our disputes are about words and the definitions of words, not about actualities. Fully half the time our polemics and propaganda are based on our individual conceptions of the difference between Tweedledum and Tweedledee, or our individual opinions as to the correct pronunciation of "Shibboleth." As the years pile up and a wiser humility develops, we come to see that nothing whatever of real importance depends upon our pronunciation of the word, or our adherence to the banners of either 'Dum or 'Dee. It's all a relative matter, in either case. We generally agree in fact much more nearly than we do in expression. We're few of us as far apart as we think we are. And, is the slowdulling of our physical eyes due to the years brings with it a clearer spiritual vision, who shall deny the value of age?

Well, to some back to my cap-feather which I started off to tell you about. In his last note Clericus, referring to some of our former conversations wrote: "You helped me set my feet on the solid ground, without requiring me to take my eyes off the stars."

If that be true—and I never knew Clericus to lie—John Farmer can draw the draperies of his couch about him and lie down with the assurance that he hasn't lived wholly in vain.

For the helping even one neighbor to see that the place for his feet is on the ground, however, insistently his peering eyes may strain into the starry depths, is a distinct service. Also, the helping another neighbor to realize that, because his feet are set in the common dirt out of which we all sprung, is no reason why he shouldn't lift his eyes to the high heavens whereunto we all aspire—that, too, is a distinct service.

Altogether, the compliment which Clericus pays the old farmerman has filled him with a gratification that he can remember no other flattery ever equalling.

With it comes an equally overwhelming sense of responsibility. It it be true that I have helped one friend to a completer and firmer grasp of life, why haven't I been able to help in a similar way others among the thousands of friends with whom I talk each week through the hospitable columns of The Bulletin?

Have I failed in grasping my opportunities? If I have, ascribe it to my instinctive doubt as to the value of preaching, especially long-distance preaching. Also, take notice that I'm now going, so far as my allotted time and space will permit, to atone for past remissness. In other words, I'm going to preach for a few paragraphs.

My friend Clericus is a man of wonderfully broad understanding, of unusually tender sympathies, of a devouring passion for truth, and an abnormally keen eye for beauty. With such characteristics, he is inclined to be idealistic. That is, he unconsciously subordinates his views of life as it is to his visions of what life might be and would be, if only——. What he needed was to be lifted off his rainbow throne and planted with his feet on the ground even though it might be somewhat miry from the recently passing shower.

The situation with many farmers is exactly the reverse. They have no desire to climb up and sit on any rainbow; rather, if it were possible, they would dig after the fabled pot of gold that legend puts underneath the end of its arc. They don't need to be recalled to solid earth; rather they need to be hoisted, boosted, elevated above it far enough to see that all it is good for is to stand on while reaching for something above it—even though that "something" be out of reach for the time being.

Oh, brother dirt grubbers of the farm, there is just where too many of us miss our opportunities! We are apt, since our daily sentence is what it is, to imitate the man with the muckrake, and spend all our time and give all our thought to the muck under our feet. Indeed, we are occasionally prone to sneer at the man who will lean even for a moment on his hoe in order to drink in the glory of some overhead cloud armada or the almost stupefying grandeur of some looming sunset bastion fringed with fire. "Hey you," we shout at such a one; "stop dreaming and git to work."

Correct enough, too, so far as it goes. There is a time for work, for hard, steady, unflinching toil; but we too often forget that there is also a time for dreaming other than that spent between the sheets at night. We also too often forget that we are all such stuff as dreams are made of. We forget the still more important fact that out of the dreams of saints and sages and scientists have sprung the developments which make life constantly more and more worth while. We forget the truth which the poet has compacted into two lines that

"The worker lives for the moment
While the dreamer lives for ayes."

Talk about "the farm problem" in terms of prices and wages all you please; your much talking will never alter the fact that there is no "farm problem" for a second comparable with the Farmer Problem. The former has to do with things, with dirt and seeds and fertilizers and weeds and markets; the latter asks how to make the farmer a better and a wiser and a completer man. The one is a compromise with things-as-they-are; the other an aspiration for things-as-they-ought-to-be—and might be.

If it is only by dreaming that we can approximate that latter condition, then more power to our dreams!

"The world is too much with us." Meaning thereby the hard, dirty, practical world of work-a-day living. To be sure, we have been pitchforked into it, willy-nilly, and must take it as we find it. We must all work to live; we farmers must work dirt to live. In that respect, we're much of a muchness with angleworms. There are, nevertheless, differences between men and angleworms, all of which I don't need to enumerate. One is that the angleworm never dreams beyond the dirt he lives in and with and from; the man can.

Because we have to work the soil and get its sticky grime on our hands or breathe its dusty impurities into our lungs, is no reason why we should daub our souls with it. Of course, what we must do, we must do, there are no two ways about it. We should be shirks to seek avoidance of the manifest necessity to earn our bread before we eat it. But the Wisest Teacher earth ever knew flatly affirmed that men do not live by bread alone. We often feelourselves slaves to the sordid demands of mere existence. But, again, an old poet has condensed a mighty truth into two lines:

"Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage."

What the human soul is, wise and good men may differ about. But that it can be imprisoned neither by stone walls nor by the harder and higher barricades of environment and circumstance all agree.

You and I seem to have been set by our fortunes at the task of working dirt to get a bodily living. Very well; let's work our dirt for all it is worth and with all we are worth, when and while such working is called for. Hoeing the quack-grass among the potatoes is no time for day-dreaming. But we don't have to hoe quack-grass all our lives. We either kill it or it kills the potatoes. In either case there comes a surcease from our labor. In such respite what's to hinder the soul from retiring to its Acropolis and dreaming of a quackless world? Which very dreaming may, some day, evoke a blessed plan for eliminating quack-grass forever from the scheme of things.

Man-planned Utopias have never yet worked out in practice. That's no proof that they never will. There was a time when the steam engine and the telegraph and the airship and the radio were merely dreams in somebody's mind. And our too hard-headed and practical sires sneered at them all. "Moonshine" and "poppycock" were among the mildest teams applied to them. Yet they are very present and very practical realities now.

For one, I am not disposed to abuse the angleworm. He has his useful place in the natural order. Nor am I any more inclined to sneer at the man who, on proper occasion, uncages his soul and sets it winging its way even beyond the clouds. He, too, has his useful place in the natural order.

Farmers, of all men, must keep their feet on the ground all the time.

This does not forbid them to lift their eyes to the eternal stars.

To look up is quite as important as to look down. Why not do both?

THE FARMER.

UNION

Thursday afternoon May 23 Supervisor M. B. Robertson, the local teachers and pupils, with parents and friends, enjoyed field day exercises at Union Center. They gathered at the town hall after the morning session in the schools. A community dinner was enjoyed and this was followed by games and stunts on the grounds around the hall. The program closed with a baseball game. Mr. Robertson made the presentation of books which had been awarded the children who had won first and second honors in speaking and spelling at the town contest May 7. Raymond Skopek received a book for first honor in speaking and Helen Broadway two books, as she won first honor in spelling and second honor in speaking. Winifred Moore received a book for second honor in spelling.

Mr. and Mrs. George Heck, their son, Edwin Heck, accompanied by friends from New Jersey, attended the graduating exercises of nurses at Springfield hospital Friday evening last. Miss Julia Heck was a member of the class and accompanied her parents and brother home.

Mrs. Jerry Skopek returned Monday from the Johnson Memorial hospital with her infant son, Joseph Walter.

Rev. and Mrs. Henry A. Coolidge, with Misses Irene and Winifred Moore, attended the banquet and program of the boys' and girls' conference for Tolland county, held in the methodist church, Stafford Springs, Friday evening. Rev. and Mrs. Coolidge and Miss Irene Moore also attended the Saturday programs held at the same church.

Miss Eva Scranton of Hartford was a week end guest of her sister, Mrs. Carl Tinker.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall or Liggett Drug Store.

WESTERLY

CROWDS MARCH OR WATCH DURING MEMORIAL DAY EVENTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., May 30—With Memorial day weather hot as that of Fourth of July, Westerly was visited by auto traffic in an almost continuous stream. Through and local motor buses were operated at nearly capacity lists. On the New Haven railroad express trains making the Westerly station stop were well patronized, also were run in sections.

The Westerly beaches, Watch Hill, Misquamicut and Weekapaug, besides having many property owners and lessees present for the holiday were visited by trippers who reveled in an almost cloudless day at the shore. In the morning the business streets of the town were decorated with the Shenandoah curb flags. On private and public staffs flags were flown at half mast until noon.

At 9:30 a. m. the parade, Capt. Shelby C. Nicholas marshal, preceded by Westerly Motorcycle Officers Madison and Gessel and followed by Motorcycle Officer McCarthy, moved over the line of march as announced in The Bulletin and in the formation stated. Commander Samuel Tefft of Budlong post, G. A. R., received an ovation as escorted by Adjutant R. J. Rooney, he proudly marched from the start of the parade to the first stop on Pawcatuck river bridge, from which location automobiles was taken by the older marchers. The line was declared by many who have witnessed similar parades as seldom excelled in appearance.

In the afternoon the banks of the Pawcatuck river were lined with spectators for the out-board motor boat races, run under the auspices of Westerly Boat club. Many sport followers chose to motor to Stonington to witness the second game between the Stonington high and Westerly high baseball classic on the Stonington field, resulting in a 5 to 1 victory for the former, in a good, clean hitting game.

ITALIAN VICE CONSUL GUEST AT SPLENDID DEMONSTRATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, May 30—The Italian Vice Consul Romeo D. Thieves Get Cash

Late Wednesday night, Lieutenant George H. Champlin of Westerly police, had reported to him that the Rite Bite diner, located on Canal street near the New Haven railroad had been entered and some $25 in silver stolen.

James Schofield, owner of the diner said the money must have been taken between the time the place was closed at 2 o'clock and the time the chef arrived shortly after 3 o'clock.

Another break was reported early in the morning on the Pawcatuck side of the river at the Grills Electric and Automotive company, West Broad street. The thief used a key left in the door by one of the employes making his way to the work room through the sales room; securing $8.75 from the cash register.

HARTFORD MAN TURNS DRY AFTER NIGHT'S ESCAPADE

Judge Oliver H. Williams held special session of Third District court Memorial day afternoon at 2:45 when two cases brought by the department of state police from the Hope Valley barracks were tried.

Frank Tierney, securities salesman, of Hartford, was arraigned by Trooper Florence J. Harvey of Hope Valley barracks who charged him with being drunk and disorderly on the Noose Neck Hill road May 29th. The accused pleaded guilty. Judge Williams found that the defendant had been an officer in the army. At Hope Valley he had punched Mr. Hall and attempted to break his way into a place after he had been delayed by a break-down in his auto. The accused stated that he could not remember all of his actions of the night before and was willing to promise never to touch another drop of liquor. He was fined $10 and costs of $5, amounting to $15 which he paid.

Girl Companion Drunk

Charles L. Oliver, colored, of 49 Main street, Ansonia, who was also brought to Westerly police station Wednesday night by State Trooper Harvey, was charged with driving an automobile without an operator's license. He pleaded guilty. Oliver told the court that he had been to the Ansonia town hall on the day he was arrested and had paid his money for a driver's license, but had failed to stay for an eye or further examination and took the chance, when he started to drive to Providence. He said that he had not possessed a driver's license for 4 years, but had one previous to that time and had not operated an auto in the meantime. He was not intoxicated at the time of his arrest in Hope Valley headed toward Providence on his trip from Ansonia, but the girl who accompanied him was drunk and she had been brought to the women's detention room of the Westerly police station. The girl brought the liquor with her and asked him if he had any objection to her drinking and he had replied that he did not, but to let no one see her drinking in the auto. "She belongs to a rummy crowd, always drinking, but she's not noisy and there's a lot of them that are!" concluded the accused.

He was fined $40 and costs of $5. Not having the amount with him he was permitted to telephone friends before being returned to the lockup.

DANIELSON

MEMORIAL DAY SERVICES ARE WELL ATTENDED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, May 30.—Under a scorching sun hundreds of Danielson's people united today in paying tribute to the honored dead who have served in the nation's wars. From the formation of the procession at 12.45, opposite G. A. R. hall in the Keystone block, to the end of the ceremonies of the day the program of exercises was carried out as planned, with Rev. Harding W. Gaylord delivering the principal address at the Orpheum theater.

Following the exercises at the theater the procession proceeded to Davis park where at the monument erected in honor of those who served in the Civil war and the honor roll bearing the names of those who went forth from Danielson for service in the World war there was music by the bands, the firing of a salute, salute of the flag and the sounding of taps. The largest crowd in years assembled at the park to witness the ceremonies. From that point the procession moved northward en route to Westfield cemetery, where the graves of the honored dead were decorated and thence, via Mechanic street, where similar honor was paid the nation's dead at rest in St. James' cemetery. From that point the procession returned to G. A. R. hall to disband and the members of it refreshed at a collation served by the W. R. C.

It may be related once again that Danielson observes Memorial day with the traditional solemnity that its originators intended. Memorial day here is an occasion for paying formal tribute to those who have served their country well and have passed to their eternal rewards. The exercises arranged are truly carried out in a memorial spirit, and the impression left is one of spiritual satisfaction.

It may be mentioned that the Killingly High School band, making its first public parade appearance, caught the fancy of all who saw the organization and heard the members play today. The band has developed with amazing rapidity, and furnished a real surprise today.

At Brooklyn this morning at 9 o'clock and at East Killingly at 10 o'clock Memorial day programs were carried out with large numbers taking part in or otherwise assisting at the exercises. Some of the older people who came out were distressed by the heat, but no serious results from this had been reported up to late afternoon.

Within a few days those who may be interested in having the contract to do the work will have their opportunity to bid for the work of cutting down a row of shade trees on the south side of Davis park as decreed by a special town meeting and for which work an appropriation of $700 is available. The bids will be asked by the selectmen. Just what the terms of the formal notice for bids are to be is what makes this subject of particular interest to Danielson at this time. It has been hinted that the selectmen will specify not only the removal of the shade trees but also the resurfacing of such part of Reynolds street as may be disturbed in the process and the laying of a cobble gutter along the southerly side of the park. If these additional specifications are included, there is the chance that no bid can be made within the appropriation of $700 to do the work as properly and thoroughly as will be required, unless the bidder is willing to take the chance of losing money. In that event, the cutting of the trees is apt to be deferred.

The "regular" elements in the Franco-American Union of Connecticut triumphed at the biennial convention in Hartford this week, a matter of local interest because Alma Forcier of Goodyear and E. X. Lemieux of Danielson are members of the executive committee and favored transfer of the convention from Taftville, where it was scheduled to be held, to Hartford. In a test vote that may be regarded as indicating the chance the irregular elements have to gain control of the Union St. John Baptist, outstanding French-Canadian fraternal organization of New England, the regulars won an easy victory. What may be termed the opposition votes numbered 77, of which 32 were cast by Taftville delegates, the entire remainder of the state contributing only 45. The next biennial convention of the Franco-American Union is to be held in 1931 in Bristol and the indications are that the convention of 1933 will go to Meriden.

Up to late afternoon today there was a happy freedom of serious motor vehicle accidents in Danielson and vicinity, despite the fact that holiday traffic of surprising proportions was rolling over the trunk line highways excepting during the most torrid hours of the afternoon. State officers maintained a steady patrol of all of the main arteries of travel.

A local chapter of the Vocational Agricultural club has been organized at Killingly high school. Munroe Knight has been elected president, George Couture, secretary, Clark Wood, treasurer and Edward Nielson vice president. Munroe Knight, Frank Turner, Harold Levell and Herbert Parker have been named as a committee to draw up a constitution. A creed of this chapter may indicate what its real purpose is by mentioning that it is Future Farmers of America.

PUTNAM

PUTNAM HOLDS MEMORIAL DAY EXERCISES AT CEMETERY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, May 30—In the burial grounds in the various sections of the town, this morning, Putnam paid solemn tribute to its soldier dead. From early morn until high noon the surviving veterans of the three great American conflicts paid an annual visit to each mound and solemnly laid a wreath of flowers at its head and placed a small flag in a bearer marking off the foot of the grave. At the Grove street cemetery where the speaking exercises were held, nine men, all who have seen four score years of life, attired in the campaign hats of '61 stepped forth again to pay tribute at the monuments of their battle brothers. These men were the nine remaining members of the A. G. Warner post of Grand Army of the Republic.

At 9:30 o'clock in Union square the Memorial day parade formed amid the lanes of flags of the Shenandoah system which were floating from in front of every business house in the city. The various civic and patriotic organizations turned out and took part and an unusually large response was had from the veterans organizations; the Analem Mayotte Post No. 13 American Legion, Albert J. Breault Post, Veterans of Foreign wars and drum corps and the A. Wilder Merrian Camp of United Spanish War veterans.

The line of march was from the square to Bridge street through the north end of the city and a counter march to Grove street cemetery where the memorial services were held. The day was ideal.

Rev. U. O. Bellérose, pastor of St. Mary's church acted as master of ceremonies and introduced Rev. James F. English pastor of the Congregational church of this city who led the multitude in the invocation. St. Mary's choir under the direction of Joseph Belair sang the famous war song of the Army of the Potomac, "Tenting Tonight on The Old Camp Ground." The Memorial day address was delivered by Rev. Matthew Brady, professor of English at St. Thomas Seminary in Hartford. The memorial tribute to the dead of the world as spoken by Father Brady was most fitting and was done most eloquently.

Rev. Edwin P. Wright, rector of St. Philip's church, pronounced benediction and in conclusion four buglers of the V. F. W. drum corps played taps while a firing squad of the headquarters company of the 43rd division fired a four shot volley over the graves of the soldiers in the G. A. R. plot in the cemetery.

The driver was not held.

Confusion was caused this morning when the new ambulance of the Day Kimball hospital en route to Danielson to answer an emergency call, became tangled up in the triple lane of cars proceeding to Grove street cemetery behind the marching line of veterans. With the aid of two officers of the Danielson state police barracks who acted as escorts, a path was cleared enabling the emergency vehicle to worm its way through.

JEWETT CITY

MEMORIAL ARRANGEMENTS CARRIED OUT WITH SUCCESS

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, May 30—Many hearts were gladdened today, as people found vantage points along the line of march, to see and hear all the features that went to make up one of the finest Memorial day parades in the borough's history. The line formation was in perfect accord with the plans advocated in the Legion manual. Chief of Police Henry Veglard headed the right of formation. Doctor George H. Jennings was marshal of the day, and none in all the fine parade was more to be honored than he as he marched in lead of his line, with his two lieutenants, John T. Barry and Adrian Maynard.

The three flags were borne by George Comager who assumed his father's duties with the G. A. R. colors, Irving Thornton who carried the Legion colors and P. W. Chase with the office Legion flag.

The color guards were Arthur Lagasse and Charles Barber.

Attention was especially attracted to the fine appearance of Ashland boys' band, Fred Borque, leader. They were next in line, under the marching orders of P. W. Chase.

The firing squad, armed with Springfield rifles, and in khaki uniforms were in charge of Adjutant E. C. Knox. This officer's command comprised John Hanson, Armand Ledoux, Stanley Savage, Dona Morancey, Peter Szewcyk, Walter Benjamin, Victor St. John and Fred Jarvis. Clarence Cole and Nelbert Mynott, represented the Spanish War Veterans: G. H. Thornton the Sons of Veterans and John Bothwell, who fought in the Indian wars and was a heliograph operator at Fort Larimie, Nebraska.

Commander George Rocheleau, of Orville La Flamme post, American Legion, had close to 80 men in line. As they passed, many stood with uncovered heads, to see the boys march by and to recall the days when they marched away with the great questions still all unanswered. Miss Eva LaFlamme and the gold star mothers were assigned the first car. In the following automobile, rode members of the Red Cross, the woman's auxiliary, Daughters of Veteran, members of the local clergy and the entire board of the town of Griswold's and borough of Jewett City's executive officials.

In one automobile were four descendants of the late Andrew and Althea Comager. Andrew was for many years, G. A. R. color bearer. Answerable to the inexorable decrees of time, not one veteran of the Civil war appeared in line. Many who saw the parade go by recalled when they were represented by a sturdy company of Griswold's noblest sons.

At the Slater library, the line halted while Miss Eva LaFlamme placed a wreath upon the granite honor roll. And for the D. A. R. tree Miss Ida I. Foster, performed a like service.

On Quinebaug Bridge

No part of this day's ceremonies ever possesses more impressive features than those carried out in the central span of the Quinebaug bridge. Today, a dirge by the hand was followed by two rounds of salute by the squad. Then Commander Rocheleau and E. H. Hiscox, Jr., the latter of New London, stepped to the steel guards and dropped two baskets of flowers to the water. The swift current bore them away, recalling memories of those asleep in the deep.

At the Jewett City cemetery, St. Mary's in Sylvandale and the Baptist yard, reminiscent memorial ceremonies were carried out by willing hands. Taps were sounded by Raymond Zagranitski. Those who officiated in placing the wreaths were, at the Jewett City cemetery, Ed Wyatt, John Davis and George Wilcox, at St. Mary's, William Sharkey, at the Baptist: Fred Raill, and at David Hale Fanning Park, George Wilcox placed upon their granite base of the monument, a floral testimony to the honored dead of Griswold and vicinity.

REV. G. F. GOODENOUGH DELIVERS THE ADDRESS

The address of the day, given before an audience which numbered well over 1,000, was delivered by Rev. G. F. Goodenough, pastor of the Second Congregational church of Griswold. For the young of the advancing generation, those who must wage steady warfare against such powerful enemies as ignorance and cowardice, the able speaker advanced many themes of value and profit. "There is no discharge," he said, "from these wars, calling for steady battle against the foes that make for moral slavery." "Consider," said he, "the immortal messages of those who strove to enlarge our liberty." They prized true freedom, let us follow the teachings of their priceless heritage; learn what is right and true, then stand for what we believe is duty's clear call. Let us find out what is our part in the great world's work of the teeming age, learn our own creative value, then stand up as men, be honest and true, and finally, let there be unchallenged proof that there is no forgetting of our obligation for lasting respect and homage. Remember our duty to those who stood for us, even though the supreme sacrifice were encompassed within its requirements."

Prayers were offered by Reverends Albert Clement, John J. McCabe, E. E. Scates and J. W. Carter.

The efficiency of the police was noteworthy. Officers on duty were Chief Henry Veglard, Thomas Morancy, Mose Loranger, Alfred Balcomb, Hector Sibelland.

The day's grand celebration was marked with no unpleasant feature. The temperature went well above 90 degrees.

DINNER SERVED MARCHERS AT END OF THE PARADE

A fine dinner of baked beans, cold meat, brown bread, rolls, pickles, cake and coffee was served in the Methodist vestry, Mrs. A. C. Burdick was in charge and was assisted by Mrs. M. E. Shea, Mrs. U. E. Jodoin, Mrs. Henry Veglard, Mrs. John Oakes, Miss May Driscoll, Mrs. Ella Geer, Misses Alice Brown, Mrs. E. M. Gray, Mrs. Samuel Cathcart, Miss M. A. Burdick, Mrs. Edith Soule, and Mrs. F. I. Ray. Who else wants to save money?

"PUTTING children through school is expensive and calls for greatest economy. Girls need the pretty things others have, and, thanks to Sunset Dyes, I was able to give my children more than they could have had without them.

"My daughter was getting ready to leave for her first teaching position. She had a white dress and took it to the dyers. He wanted eight dollars, so we decided to try it ourselves. We dyed it the loveliest shade of dark green and were delighted.

"If there is ever a time when Sunset Dyes are appreciated it is after death in the family. My son died just before my daughter left for her school work. I had a brown suit which I dyed black. Then I dyed my print dresses.

"I never wear anything shabby or the least faded now. Sunset Dye makes them bright and pretty again. I dyed old silk handkerchiefs for trimming a house coat I made. I quilted the trimming and it was the prettiest house coat I ever saw.

"We make slips from our worn silk dresses and dye them to match some dress. I could go on and on but it would just be repetition. Sunset Dyes are to me almost a bank account. They keep us well dressed." From a satisfied Sunset user in Fayetteville, N. Y.

For fast dyeing use Sunset Soap Dyes, 15 cents a cake. For beautiful tinting use Dytint, the wonderful new tint, in the big box, only 10c!

BUSINESS WOMEN'S CLUB ELECTS MISS WILLEY

The annual business meeting and election of officers of the Norwich Business and Professional Woman's Club was held Monday evening at the Mary Anna tea room in Willimantic. The meeting was exceptionally well attended and was conducted by Miss Lucy B. Abbott, the retiring president. The reports presented by the officers and committee chairmen, showed just how busy and prosperous the past year had been. Changes in the constitution and by-laws were voted upon, after which the following officers were elected for the coming year:

President, Miss Bernice Willey; vice president, Dr. Lillian Lynes; treasurer, Miss Josephine Canty; recording secretary, Miss Louise Babcock; corresponding secretary, Miss Mary Elliott; director at large for three years, Mrs. Rosina Hamilton. Delegates were also appointed to attend the annual convention of the Connecticut Federation of Business and Professional Women's club in Hartford, Saturday. They are as follows: Miss Bernice Willey, Miss Mary Elliott, Miss Edith Fellows, Miss Mary Gray, Miss Irma Hutzler.

This is the ninth annual convention of the federation of which the local club is a member. The meeting is to be held at the Hotel Bond and opens with the registration of the delegates at 9 o'clock. The convention session will open at 9.30 o'clock.

Delegates and members are expected from other states, as Connecticut's guests, among them: Massachusetts, New York and Pennsylvania. Miss Virginia L. Montgomery, former national program chairman, and at present president of of the Chester, Pa., club, will be the national representative and speaker at the banquet in the evening. During the afternoon Marshall A. Mott, of the Hartford Better Business bureau, will address the convention on the bureau and its work. Miss Charlotte Molyneaux Holloway, investigator for the state of Connecticut, will also address the convention on a subject that is receiving the attention of members throughout the country, that of "the older woman in business." Miss Holloway will tell the result of her observation and investigation in this state.

The Waterbury club chorus will be present in the evening and will render a program of selections. A string orchestra will play during the dinner.

Rehearsal For Recital

In Odd Fellows hall this week the visitic pupils of Edward Brennan held their final rehearsal preceding their recital, at which the young pupils will make their first appearance in this city. For the recital Mr. Brennan has secured the services of Miss Anna Stonkdale, singer and violinist, who will be assisted in her numbers by Felix Paebus, flutist. All the piano accompaniments are to be by Mrs. Edward Brennan.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

MAINE WAS A PIONEER IN TUBERCULOSIS ERADICATION

Dr. John R. Mohler and other specialists in the bureau of animal industry of the United States department of agriculture are thoroughly enjoying the progress of what they believe is to be one of the greatest races in all history. Their interest is intensified by their position in relation to the race, namely, the interstate contest for the reduction of tuberculosis among cattle to a point where a state may be classified as "modified accredited area." These men were active in promoting the race; they are also the coaches and advisers of the contestants; and they are the judges of place.

North Carolina was first under the wire on Oct. 1, 1928. Maine finished May 1, 1929, and Michigan, Indiana and Idaho are well to the fore for the third place on the honor roll.

In connection with Maine's achievement, Dr. Mohler recalls some of the interesting features of the early history of tuberculosis eradication in the state. As long ago as 1896 officials at the state agricultural college suspected the presence of tuberculosis in the college dairy herd. Slaughter of the animals confirmed the diagnosis. This was before the use of the tuberculin test in the United States in 1892.

The boards of health of Portland and Old Orchard, Me., in May, 1896, were probably the first to require examination of all cattle furnishing milk for cities, and it is interesting to note that two dairy companies paid a premium for milk from tested cattle.

The co-operative work between the state and the United States department of agriculture started in 1917. The total indemnities paid in the 12 years amounted to approximately $425,000, and the operating expense was less than $210,000.

Maine's success in the campaign to suppress the disease was achieved largely through the leadership and efforts of H. M. Tucker, chief of the Maine division of animal industry, and G. R. Caldwell, the federal representative. Testing is to be continued and all herds from which any reactors were removed after the last test, and certain others are to be kept under special observation, and will be retested after several months.

Maine, in establishing itself as relatively free from bovine tuberculosis, Dr. Mohler says, assumes new importance in New England. The state not only produces dairy products but in recent years has been selling about 1,000 dairy cattle a month to neighboring states.

GETTING A CUCUMBER START

It is too early to be absolutely safe about planting cucumbers but it is a simple matter to start a few hills in flower pots in a sheltered position safe from any vagrant frosts until the middle of the month, when they may be put out with comparative safety over the greater portion of the country. Start five seeds to a five-inch pot. That will make a big hill, too many plants to a hill, in fact, but all but the three strongest vines may be pulled up when they are safe from bugs. It is always necessary to sow more cucumber seeds to a hill than are needed because bugs are sure to take some toll of the young plants unless extraordinary precautions are taken. They are magnets and targets for a grand collection of insect life which preys on them in infancy. Once they have made good-sized leaves they are better able to cope with the pests.

In starting cucumber seeds, give them a warm place to germinate, a sunny window with air on balmy days and the window closed if it gets nippy. The hills may be made ready in leisurely fashion while the seedlings are growing. Dig out a hole about 18 inches deep and fill in with well-decayed manure, if obtainable; if not, use a well-rotted compost and if neither is at hand, the commercial shredded cow manure or pulverized sheep manure may be mixed liberally with the earth. The old scheme of setting a tile upright in the hills, the top level with the soil, for purposes of sub-irrigation is a very practical and excellent idea for cucumbers and melons.

It will be an excellent idea to make some frames of boxes with top and bottom knocked out over which to tack mosquito netting to set over the hills until the plants get along in the world and too bulky for their covering. This will be an excellent guard against bugs. It is wise to start giving the plants a powdering of some insecticide as soon as the seed leaves are out of the ground. Success with cucumbers depends on getting them started before the bugs get them. Once vigorously started, the rest is easy and they can ramble at their leisure, as they will grow fast enough to give food for the bugs and still give a good crop of cucumbers.

PLANT SUMMER TURNIPS NOW

In the growing appreciation of the value of "greens" in the diet even the humble turnip top has not escaped. As a matter of fact it makes good greens comparable in flavor with mustard, but we need not be much concerned about growing turnip tops for greens with other better material at hand, and may consider them merely as a usable by-product with the young and tender roots.

The discovery that baby vegetables have quite a different and very fine flavor compared with their mature forms has led to the common use of the root crops at a much younger stage of their growth than in former years. Young carrots, young beets, and young turnips are now stable articles of diet. The young turnip pulled and cooked when only an inch or two thick is a delightful vegetable with a more delicate flavor than when fully grown. It has proved to be an excellent midsummer vegetable, to be cherished instead of reserving it exclusively as a follow crop for spring vegetables, to be used only in the fall when full grown and during the winter.

Plant turnips for the summer crop now. Plant only the white sorts. The yellow turnips or rutabagas are a long season full crop and not adapted for summer use when young. The turnip is a cool weather plant and should either be sown now for midsummer use or in midsummer for fall use. Six to ten weeks will give roots of usable size.

Give them rich, mellow soil and keep them well cultivated. The quality of a turnip depends upon keeping it in steady growth. In this manner the roots will be sweet and mild flavored. A check from drought or a struggle to make growth because of too thick planting makes strong, bitter roots. Plant the seed thinly and thin the turnips to two inches apart for the first crop, pulling every other one, giving room for further growth. Turnips are one of the most neglected crops, often being allowed to take their chances with weeds. They develop sizable roots even under adverse conditions but they do not produce the quality and mild and sweet flavor under these conditions that makes a quality turnip.

HOW TO GROW MUSHROOMS

Start conservatively and learn desirable and profitable methods of mushroom culture on a small scale. This is the advice Vera K. Charles emphasizes in "Mushroom Culture for Amateurs," just published as Farmers' Bulletin 1587-F by the United States department of agriculture. Success in mushroom growing, says Miss Charles, who is a specialist in the bureau of plant industry, depends largely on careful study of the peculiar requirements of the crop and on faithful adherence to well-established methods. Carelessness and inattention to details, she warns, have no place in successful mushroom cultivation, but with careful attention to the provision of suitable buildings, good manure and pure spawn, success is to be anticipated.

"A large initial expense is not necessary," the author says, "and is, in fact, unwise. The time to expand is after some experience has been acquired and a knowledge gained of the best way to do things, as governed by the facilities or limitations of the individual grower. Often unused buildings, cellars or basements may be conveniently adapted to mushroom growing and expense saved."

An essential to successful mushroom culture is the existence of an available supply of a good quality of horse manure from grain-fed animals. This must be composted with care, arranged in beds, spawned with desirable mushroom spawn of the variety desired, and cased with earth at the proper time. Temperature and moisture control within fairly narrow limits are necessary if beds are to yield for a long season. Miss Charles also includes sections on the nature of the mushroom, the occurrence of poisonous or other fungi in mushroom beds, the nutritive qualities of the fungus, the diseases and insects that affect the crop, and suggestions on marketing.

"Mushroom growing," she says in conclusion, "is distinctly a business that requires great aptitude for detail, exactness and promptness in the execution of the work attendant on the care of the crop. Carelessness in the selection of manure, indifference and delay in procuring good spawn, neglect of the proper conditions of humidity and temperature and lack of proper ventilation will not tend to success. The formula for successful mushroom growing may be given as good manure, good spawn, a constant given temperature, together with faithful attention to details. Only with this combination can the door to successful mushroom growing be opened."

HINTS FOR THE FARM

A sow that produces her first litter in the spring should not be bred again until fall. The time between weaning her litter in the spring and being bred in the fall is needed for growth and development. After a sow is two years old, two litters a year can be produced.

Sore spots on the skin caused by the itch mite which influences fowls to pull out their own feathers may be treated with either of two ointments: One part of flowers of sulphur and four parts of vaseline, or lard; or one part of carbolic acid with fifty parts of vaseline.

Very poor land can be built up by sowing rye and buckwheat together. They are planted at the regular time for sowing buckwheat, the rate of sowing preferably scant for buckwheat and about normal for rye. The rye is covered and held in check by the more rapidly growing buckwheat until this crop is harvested, after which it develops and occupies the land over winter. In the spring it is plowed under as green manure.

Tigers, unlike domestic cats, do not take readily to tree climbing.

NEW BURGLAR ALARM IS DUMB IN ATTEMPTED BREAK, NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 30—Harry M. Shalett, proprietor of Shalett's Cleaning & Dyeing company, corner of Montauk avenue and Hobron street, reported to the police this morning that an attempt had been made by thieves to enter the establishment. Patrolmen Geerge Perkins and John Sullivan went to the store and found that two or three shutters had been removed from the windows, but that the windows had not been forced. A burglar alarm was recently installed there, but when the crooks were at work on the shutters the alarm failed to sound. The burglar system is supposed to sound whenever anyone tampers with the windows or entrances.

THAMES CLUB MEMBERS MAY SELL TO MOHICAN CO.

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 30—Monday night the resident members of the Thames club are to hold a special meeting for the purpose of receiving and acting upon the report of the special committee recently appointed to confer with the Hotel Mohican company, relative to the purchase of the club property by that concern.

At a meeting of Epworth league, No. 451, of the Methodist church, Tuesday night, Hector Hughes was elected president, Drusilla Fielding, first vice president; Marshall Ferguson, second; William Lewis, third; Kenerson Elwood, fourth; Calvin Heath, secretary; Lloyd Pratt, treasurer.

MEMORIAL DAY PARADE IMPRESSIVE AND IMPOSING

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 30—This morning New London paused for a brief period to honor those who have died in the wars of America. At 10 o'clock the principal observance of the day took place, when an imposing parade moved through the principal streets.

The parade formed at the west end of State street and marching eastward circled the soldiers and sailors' monument, moved up State street, then up Broad street, to Cedar Grove cemetery, where memorial exercises were held.

Every naval unit in the city was represented in the parade, with the local national guard. Veterans of Foreign Wars, members of the G. A. R., John Coleman Prince post, American Legion and many civic organizations.

While there were not quite as many in this year's parade as on last Memorial day, the formation was imposing of good numbers and of splendid appearance.

BEACH MEMORIAL DAY CROWD ESTABLISHES RECORD

The largest crowd of pleasure seekers to visit Ocean Beach on Memorial day during the existence of that shore resort went there today. The crowd started pouring to the beach during the forenoon and continued until late afternoon. Thousands of autoists visited the shore resort, while many additional thousands were taken there by trolley cars. So great was the number of automobiles that parking space was not available as early as 2 o'clock, compelling hundreds of drivers to leave their machines on Ocean, Naptune, Pequot avenues, Lower Boulevard and Ridgewood park, Waterford. The crowd was welcomed by merchants and the greater number of concessionists and restaurants had a liberal patronage.

Traffic in New London today was exceedingly heavy, throngs of tourists passing through this city. The influx of cars started early and continued through the day and night, which condition created congestion of traffic on State and Bank streets frequently.

Every available police officer was on duty today because of the holiday and a detail of police being provided for the Memorial day parade. Four supernumeraries, White, Pine, Goldberg and Turello were assigned to duty, being detailed at Ocean Beach in an effort to control traffic and regulate parking of automobiles.

Another patrolman was forced to abandon duty today because of the ill effects of his recent vaccination. Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran.

FALL RIVER DRIVER IGNORED CITY'S LAWS

Louis Friedberg, 754 Hood street, Fall River, Mass., was arrested this afternoon charged with violation of the city's parking laws. He will not be in court tomorrow, however, for Friedberg was released with a warning to conform in the future to the city's laws.

Easy For Burglars

Tarny's toggery, 128 Bank street, was discovered unprotected this evening by Patrolman Clyde Murphy who found the front entrance unlocked and the key in the door. The proprietor was absent from the city and the officer locked the door and took charge of the key.

PASSENGER FROM WESTERLY LOST POCKETBOOK WITH $36

Edith James, colored, of 19 Dow street, New Haven, found herself in an unpleasant predicament this afternoon. The woman was a passenger on one of the buses operating between New London and Westerly. She boarded the bus in the latter town about 2 o'clock and during the trip to this city she lost her pocketbook containing $36. The woman did not discover her loss until she arrived in New London and a search of the bus failed to result in the finding of the money, the purse undoubtedly having been picked up by another passenger. A report of the loss of the money was made at police headquarters by the woman, who was provided with her fare to New Haven by a North Bank street merchant.

A pedestrian reported to Patrolman Henry Hick last night that a deep and dangerous depression exists in the highway of Bank street, near Golden. The danger spot will be reported to the highway department tomorrow.

Today was the hottest thus far this season for the mercury registered 83 at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. But for a strong breeze the heat must have resulted in prostrations.

SUB-BASE SAILOR DEFENDS HIS OWN CASE IN CITY COURT

C. W. Walker, submarine base, was in the police court this morning charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. He pleaded not guilty although prior to court he stated that he had no knowledge of what he was accused of doing and undoubtedly was guilty as charged. His testimony changed his mind when court convened and took the stand in his own defense. He testified that although he had been drinking he had not committed a breach of the peace and that when officers arrested him, he was struck one or more blows on the head causing a laceration of the scalp. Walker also intimated that because he was in the federal service he was immune from punishment by the civil authorities. He probably has a different view of the matter now for he was fined $15 and costs. Sergeant John Courtney stated that a complaint was received at police headquarters about 10 o'clock that a sailor was on Bank street, near Shaw street, and was attacking pedestrians for no good cause. The sergeant and Automobile Patrol Officer George Cockell went to Bank street and there found Patrolman Sullivan, with Walker and two companions. Walker was arrested and fought the officers the entire time during the ride to police headquarters and when being taken to a cell fought vigorously. Courtney said that Walker was not struck a single blow and sustained his head injury in some other manner than the sailor had said. After Walker was locked in a cell he was very demonstrative even to butting the cell door with his head and as blood stains were found on the door it is more than likely Walker sustained the laceration from his own acts.

TWO SIDES TO QUESTION OF RAZING OLD BUILDINGS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, May 30—There is a prospect that the city council may encounter opposition in the attempt to eliminate buildings which have gone into decay as the council considers deterioration half the value of the property, the powers arguing that the property is a menace to adjoining property. Half a dozen of such properties have been reported to the council by the inspector of buildings with the recommendation that the property be condemned and removed. The matter rests with a committee of the council now and that committee will report at a meeting to be held soon, perhaps on the 3rd of June. There is a rumor that the report will not be in full harmony with the recommendation of the building inspector and that it may be represented that the owners of buildings should receive more consideration from the city and the council. It is said that buildings which have been condemned are not a fire menace and that they can be repaired to a degree that they will be a source of revenue, if a small outlay is made upon them. It is held that a building that can be reclaimed as to earning power at an outlay of a few hundred dollars should not be torn down. Property owners have rights in the premises that cannot be ruthlessly ridden over by persons of ultra-aesthetic leanings, it is declared, because the property does not reach their ideas of good taste in architecture. The matter is to come up for discussion and when it does get to the stage of argument, there will be some plain talk, if rumor proves true.

Grouchy Husband Pays

Frank Pozzello, 78 Woodbridge street, was charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. He was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in jail, but execution of the jail sentence was suspended. Pozzello went to his home last night while Mrs. Pozzello was entertaining several friends. He had been drinking and at once reprimanded his wife for harboring her friends. He ordered the guests out of the house and then further remonstrated with his wife and forcibly, for he attacked the woman, striking her several blows on the head and face. Mrs. Pozzello made complaint to the police and her husband was arrested by Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran and Lawrence Fardy.

Fisherman Boisterous

Alfred Cullen, fisherman employed on one of the boats moored at the pier of the American Fisheries, Groton, was charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. He was on State street last night and entering a business house, caused a fight by attacking a customer. An employe of the store made complaint to Patrolman Cornelius Moriarty, who arrested Cullen. Today he was fined $10 and costs.

Boston Bellman Fined

John Wells, 7 Montgomery street, Boston, employed at a hotel as bellman, was another charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. He was fined $20 and costs. Wells was at the union station about 6 o'clock this morning and was in a mood to annoy other passengers. When he was remonstrated with by Sergeant John McGrath and Officer Harold Swanson, New Haven railroad special agents, Wells became imbued with the idea that he should beat the officers. He started to do so, but was quickly subdued and landed in a cell at police headquarters.

Hector Snow, R. F. D., Uncasville, was charged with passing an automatic traffic signal on Bank street Wednesday and was fined $3. He was arrested by Patrolman Louis Wheeler.

Szepan Fabiekewicz, 191 Broad street, Meriden, a truck driver, was charged with driving without a license and was fined $3. He was arrested yesterday by Officer Wheeler when Fabiekewicz passed on the wrong side of a traffic signal.

Celebrated Holiday

Three cases of intoxication were tried. A cobbler, who was arrested in Williams park last night after he had rolled about the lawns of residence on Granite street, was sentenced to 10 days in jail. Another man found on North Bank street, making a nuisance of himself, was sentenced to 10 days in jail, but execution of the sentence was suspended. The other was a member of the U. S. Coast Guard, who was arrested early today. Similar disposition was made of his case.

Gus Sanderquist, 416 Noyt avenue, West Brighton, N. Y., was arrested this forenoon by State Police Officer Peter Busch, charged with reckless driving. He furnished a surety on his bond of $50 and will be presented in the police court tomorrow.

City Sheriff Charles White yesterday sold an automobile belonging to Harold C. McGrath of 288 Crystal avenue for personal property taxes due during the years from 1924 to 1927.

Yesterday morning around 6 o'clock a large twin-motored hydroplane flew over the city at a very low altitude. It is understood that the craft was one sent to Old Orchard, Maine, to act as an escort for two trans-Atlantic planes, Green Flash and Yellow Bird, by the United States Coast Guard.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

National Biscuit Company.

The election of a new president by a corporation is not an uncommon occurrence, but, when a great corporation like the National Biscuit company goes into its production department to find a president, it calls for more than passing notice. Nothing could better illustrate the present trend of corporation management toward recognition of ability and faithful service.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the National Biscuit company held on May 21st, Roy E. Tomlinson who has been president for twelve years, was elected chairman of the board, and Frederick Beers, who has been production manager since April, 1921, and vice president since April, 1923, was elected president to succeed Mr. Tomlinson. He was also elected a member of the board and member of the executive committee.

It isn't often that the man who is responsible for production is made president of a manufacturing corporation. It is one of the many evidences of rare business judgment that has always characterized the management of this fine company. Here is a president who really came from the ranks. His promotion is an inspiring example of the advancement which the well-known policy of this company brings to men of efficiency and long service.

Mr. Beers is a graduate of Yale university, the class of 1902. Three months after his 23rd birthday he obtained a position with the National Biscuit company as a timekeeper in the erection of the Uneeda Biscuit Works, New York city. Here you have the university graduate ready to do the most menial work. He wasn't satisfied to be a timekeeper—he became a student of the bakery business and this study was pursued in all kinds of positions in the various bakeries of this company until he became recognized as an expert in the operation of plants and the manufacture of the finest product that machinery and human hands could turn out.

If you asked Mr. Beers for the reasons of his success and for the appointment to the office of president of the largest food company in the world, he would attribute it to the friendly cooperation of employes and heads of departments—but, of course, there are other reasons for his success, among them being his fondness for the work, his loyalty to the company and his careful attention to every detail of the work committed to his hands.

For 12 years Roy E. Tomlinson has directed the affairs of the company. The election of a new president does not mean any relinquishment of his interest in the success of the company's business, nor his activity in directing its affairs. It simply means that he will have the help of a man who knows and understands every detail of this vast business and who is really a part of its growth and development.

Breed Theatre.

Some of the most thrilling scenes ever screened go to make up the exciting story of FBO's "Gangwar" now playing at the Breed theatre.

It is the story of a San Francisco gang leader who loves a girl better than his life. She loves another, but marries him so that her sweetheart might be safe. When she finds that she has only plunged herself and her new husband into equal danger, she feels that everything is lost. Eddie Gribbon as Blackjack, proves himself equal to the test, and shoots his way out of the jam. The last shot of the battle ends his life as he steps with empty gun before his enemies while the police thunder on the doors outside.

Olive Borden and Jack Pickford head the cast which also includes Walter Long and Frank Chew. Bert Glennon directed.

Broadway

He can play them tough and he can play them refined! That's the way John Meehan sees Walter Huston, famous stage star whose latest moving picture production, "Gentlemen of the Press," a Paramount all-taking picture, will show at the Broadway theatre.

"Huston knows the stage and he knows vaudeville," says Meehan, a veteran stage director and actor who has known Huston for years. "Meehan directed the dialog for "Gentlemen of the Press," the picture made from Ward Morehouse's successful Broadway stage play. "Huston began to look, for a time, like a specialist in old men's parts and then he changed to young men. He can sing as well as act and he composes his own songs. Furthermore, he has a grown-up son who sells stories to the magazines.

"Truly the most interesting, of the many interesting things, about Huston is his versatility."

Huston is known on Broadway, primarily, as a great character star. His performance of the hard old New Englander, Ephraim Cabot, in Eugene O'Neil's play, "Desire Under the Elms," is still talked about. His roles in "The Barker," "Kongo," "Elmer the Great" and other hits of the legitimate stage have given him a rating in the exclusive front rank.

"Frequently," says Meehan, "I have talked with vaudeville theatre managers in small towns throughout the country who spoke like this: 'One of the best acts we ever had was a guy, a few years ago, who came through with a song, called 'I Haven't Got the Do, Re Mi.' Did you ever hear him? Whatever was his name, anyhow?' His name, of course, is Walter Huston."

"Father, what is a thesaurus?"

"Why, er—a pre-historic eanimal of gigantic size, of which only petrifie bones are now known."—Contributed.

WARRENVILLE

MEMORIAL SUNDAY KEPT WITH SPECIAL SERMON

Memorial Sunday morning at the Baptist church, Rev. Eliot B. Verney's sermon was entitled, "Our Veterans." Speaking of the different ideals for which the manhood of America has fought, he led up to the idea that the World war was fought "to end war." Calling attention to the fact that that war failed to accomplish its greatest purpose he said that he believed that spiritual weapons were often more effective than military and urged his hearers to bend every energy to the use of such weapons to outlaw war and make actual the ideal for which men had fought and died. In the evening Mr. Verney spoke on "God's K. K. K.," which, he said, represented the three words: "knock," "know" and "keep." Knocking meant the making of a definite effort to enter into the way of salvation, knowing meant the recognition of God as the Author of that way, and keeping meant the effort to do those acts which are meant for persons who are following that way. For the second time since the contest started early in February, the Red and the Blue teams of the Sunday school are tied in the number of points won. The contest is to see which side can make the best record in getting new members and having the best attendance at the school sessions. The winners are to be the guests of the losers at a picnic to be held at Chaffee's reservoir, June 25th. Already their efforts have tripled the enrollment of the school and increased the average attendance about 400 per cent.

District Superintendent to Speak

Sunday evening at Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church there is to be a combined service of the C. E. society with the regular evening worship. The speaker will be the Rev. Myron E. Genter, superintendent of the Norwich district of the Methodist Episcopal church. The service begins at 7:15 (daylight time).

Dakonya Group of Camp Fire Girls connected with Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church held a meeting the other evening at the parsonage. After business, a game period was enjoyed under the direction of Mildred Carter. Following the close of the meeting the girls hung a large and well stocked May basket to their guardian, Mrs. Helen Haviland Potter.

TOTAL OF 153 CHILDREN IN FIRST COMMUNION CLASS

There was double significance Thursday to the ceremonial which drew a large congregation of parents and friends to St. Patrick's church, when at a special mass at 8 o'clock 74 girls and 79 boys received first holy communion. Besides being Memorial day it was also the feast of Corpus Christi (Body of Christ).

The 153 children assembled in the basement chapel, the girls in dainty white frocks and wearing filmy veils, while the boys this year were dressed in white blouses, white knickers, black socks and shoes. In age, they ranged from 7 to 14 and for a number of weeks have been under instruction of priests and Sisters of Mercy in day school and Sunday school, that they might be thoroughly prepared for receiving the holy eucharist understandingly. From the chapel they marched into the school grounds, thence to the street, and into the church grounds, to the main floor of the edifice. They were led with military precision by two altar boys, Malcolm McKeag heading the boys and Charles White leading the line of girls.

Indicating the importance which he attached to the service, the rector of the parish, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May offered the holy sacrifice of the mass. The three marble altars were beautifully decorated. The organist, Henry J. LaFontaine directed the junior choir, the hymns sung by all the children including Our Heavenly Father, O, Tender Jesus, and at the offertory Ave Maria.

Following the consecration they gave "Peace! It is I," and during the administering of holy communion the choir sang "Sweet Sacrament Divine."

Monsignor May spoke to the children on the importance of the day in their lives, and of the divinely instituted sacrament which they were receiving. The children then marched within the sanctuary railing, where their rector enrolled them as members of the sodality of the Blessed Virgin, thus putting them all under the protection of the Mother of Christ. From the sanctuary they filed out into the aisles and left the church returning to the chapel to be dismissed by their instructors, the Sisters.

NEW SUITS PROVIDE VARIETY OF CASES FOR THE SUPERIOR COURT

New suits in the superior court, filed with Clerk John H. Walker and returnable in June, include the following:

Michael Zenowitch, alias Zenowis, of Colchester, is made the defendant in a suit brought by Attorney Hibberd R. Norman as administrator de bonis non of the estate of Katie Zenowitch of Colchester. It is alleged that the defendant was administrator of the estate of Katie Zenowitch on which he collected about $5,400 in mortgages. He has turned over to Attorney Norman about $1,334, but refuses to turn over the balance.

Hazel F. Patterson of Hartford has brought suit against Harry A. Hart of New London for damages of $2,000, claiming that between Jan 1, 1924, and the present time, she has paid out and expended for and on account of Hart, and at his requests, sundry sums amounting in the aggregate of $2,000.

Claiming that Harry A. Hart and Lucy I. Hart of New London have obstructed a right of way and private road at Smith's Neck leading to Black river, Old Lyme, Hazel F. Patterson of Hartford has brought suit against the Harts, asking damages of $1,000 and an injunction restraining the Harts from maintaining said obstructions and from encroaching upon her legal right of way.

As the result of injuries alleged to have been received from a cleaver and broom used by Madelina Piscitello of New London, a suit for $5,000 damages has been brought against her by Nicholas Sammataro of New London.

According to the papers on Nov. 5, 1928, Mrs. Piscitello assaulted Sammataro and struck him with a cleaver inflicting a deep cut on the right side of his face; choked and slapped him and struck at him with a broom, dislocating the index finger of Sammataro's right hand.

Sammataro alleges that he was employed as a gardener earning $25.50 a week, but because of his injuries was disabled from engaging in his occupation and employment for four months. He also alleges expenditures for medicines, etc.

Aggrieved by an order of the state highway commissioner, John A. Macdonald, relative to the reestablishment of the Boston Post road in the town of Waterford, Herbert D. Utley and Clara Utley, both residents of that town, have taken an appeal to the superior court. The reestablishment of the boundary lines effects their property, the appellants claim.

The Uncas-Merchants National bank of this city has brought suit against Charles A. Johnson of New York city and Charles P. Johnson of Princeton, N. J., claiming $3,000 damages. A note for $1,400 was given to the bank on Oct. 30, 1928, by Charles A. Johnson, endorsed by Charles P. Johnson, which note has not been paid, although demand was made on Jan. 30, 1929.

Property on Soule street, Jewett City, next to the Methodist church there, has been attached by Deputy Sheriff George H. Stanton in connection with a suit for $1,300 damages brought on the common counts by Charles Ruszenas of Griswold against Joseph Ruszenas, also of that town. The action is returnable before the superior court the first Tuesday in June.

Claiming that 4,200 chicks sold to him by R. Walter Bishop, of Guilford were diseased and not represented as per contract, Asher Libo, a farmer of Lisbon, has brought suit against Bishop, asking damages of $2,500.

The Lisbon man claims that on Aug. 21, 1928, it was mutually agreed between him and Bishop that Bishop should sell and deliver to Libo at Norwich 4,200 chicks at the rate of 25 cents per chick, amounting to $1,050, payable as follows: $25 at the time of the making of the agreement; $287.50 on Dec. 6, 1928, and the balance on the delivery of the first shipment of about 700 of the chicks.

Libo paid the $25, he claims, and between Jan. 5, 1929 and Feb. 20, 1929 Bishop delivered to him 3,793 of the baby chicks, for which Libo paid $948.

By the agreement the Guilford man was to deliver the chicks and warranted them to be pedigreed and Connecticut blood tested and 100 per cent free from bacillary white diarrhea.

It is alleged that Bishop failed to perform his part of the agreement, in asmuch as the baby chicks delivered were not 100 per cent free from bacillary white diarrohea, but that the chicks were infected with the disease when delivered.

As a result the chicks were entirely worthless and at least 65 per cent of the number delivered died and Libo sustained at least $2,500 damages in consequent of the breach of agreement.

PUBLIC HEALTH NURSING HAD 111 NEW PATIENTS

During April, 111 new patients were admitted to care by the public health nursing department of the United Workers. There are 1,476 under care at present. During the month 1,812 calls were made and seven well babies conferences with an attendance of 86, four children's clinics and five tuberculosis clinics were held. Forty-six patients were examined.

Tuesdays and Thursdays of each week children who have been coming to Rock Nook clinics and referred by the doctors for Alpine light treatments are taken by the nurses to the W. W. Backus hospital for these treatments. The results have been remarkable and in almost every case marked improvement has been made.

Sunshine is absolutely necessary for the growth of babies and this winter and spring have certainly been lacking in sunshine, says the department.

The W. W. Backus hospital came to their assistance and made it possible for children with rickets, mal-nourished, bone-diseases, etc., to have these treatments. A very small fee is charged, in fact, so small that most children can have these treatments. Treatments are free when parents are unable to pay. To keep the baby well and keep him from getting rickets, colds and other sicknesses he should be given sunshine every day, as sunshine makes babies healthy and strong.

The department had a case where a baby weighed seven pounds and one ounce. After taking the Alpine treatments twice each week for three months the baby now weighs 10 pounds and five ounces. In all probability it is the energy that is given off by these ultra rays of sunshine, which makes it possible for the cells of the baby to take up the minerals from the food more easily and to use them for building straight, sturdy legs, strong arms and sound teeth, says the department.

Barbara Litvin of Colchester is the plaintiff in a suit to foreclose a mortgage against her daughter and husband, Mary and Sam Zarzuk. It is alleged that Mrs. Litvin, who is about 70 years old deeded certain property to her daughter and her daughter's husband, with the provision that they were to take care of interest, taxes and other expenses, furnish a home for Mrs. Litvin and her husband and provide suitable burial for them. Mrs. Litvin took a mortgage on the property and now wishes to foreclose, this as she claims that her daughter and son-in-law have failed to provide suitable burial for Mr. Litvin who has died in the meantime. Party defendants are the Bacon academy trustees on a $300 mortgage, and Fred Fedus on a $700 mortgage.

POINTS TO CONTRASTS IN VIENNESE WOMEN

Dr. Boris J. Sohn of this city, who is pursuing post-graduate study in Vienna, sends The Bulletin a letter from there under date of May 18 in which he points to some interesting contrasts between the women of America and those of Vienna, famed for their beauty.

Dr. Sohn writes:

On numerous occasions in America, and particularly on the steamer bound for Europe, I have heard people talk with no small measure of exaltation at the almost incomparable beauty and attractiveness of the Viennese women. Some of the people, who have been in the habit of visiting Europe rather frequently, were extremely enthusiastic in the manner they discussed the charm and beauty of the women of this city.

However, on coming to Vienna, one can at first at least find no proof and no reason for the above mentioned enthusiasm; some of our Americans are rather disappointed. The streets are thronged with thousands of women, but somehow they do not appeal to the aesthetic taste of our western inhabitants. Although the women here are dressed in the height of fashion—yet what regards the quality of the women's clothing, it's all but of questionable nature. One has yet to see, even on Kartnerstrasse the Fifth avenue or Broadway of Vienna, a pair of genuine silk hose, either in the shop windows or on a woman's leg, although short skirts is the style and the hose is of the conventional flesh color.

The reason for the fact that the Americans see no beautiful women in Vienna, at least not until they become oriented, is largely because of the difference in the relative taste of the two continents.

Here, the women use very little or practically no cosmetics; rouge and powder is very seldom seen on a woman's face, and only occasionally do they use lipsticks, so that when one from America, where our women spend millions every year for cosmetics, beholds such a sight of a woman dressed in the height of fashion but whose nose is shiny, the impression is such that the women are far from beautiful.

This impression, however, fades after one has been here a short period and is becoming accustomed to the native habits of the woman. He soon realizes that truly beautiful women certainly look better in their natural color, rather than with the artificial make-up. And such women one meets here in the thousands.

Speaking of equal rights for women and emancipation of our better half, it may be said in deep earnest that the women here surely have equal rights that they are on a parallel with the men.

This is not to be construed or understood that I refer to political or social parallelism. Things have as yet not progressed that far. I refer to the "rights" of the women folks here to engage in the hardest and most laborious kinds of work, the same as men do, and more so.

It is not uncommon in this great civilized city to see women work on buildings—which are either wrecked or constructed—as hod-carriers, sub-assistants to brick-layers and cement-mixers, etc.

To see these poor creatures work at this occupation under the scorching rays of the sun, is—for one not used to it—a sight not pleasant to behold. It's equally tragic and pitiful.

English is spoken quite freely in Vienna, especially in places which in a general way cater to tourists, such as hotels, restaurants, antique shops, etc.

In one restaurant I met a waiter, who speaks fluently six different languages.

Beer is the national drink here, and due to lack of any other urgent occupation, people engage in this great beer drinking sport like loyal and real sports. For the sum of about 4 American cents one may have a good sized glass of beer and enjoy it to the limit. The inhabitants certainly do, and perhaps the Americans—still more.
